-Cotton closed in Liverpool at 104d, for up lands and 11id. for Orleans. -Jefferson is very successfully playing Rip Van Winkle in Chicago.

-A first-class hotel in New York pays $22 000

dishes and hem towels. -In some of the fashionable churches in London, programmes of the music are printed and distributed in the pews. -A Massachusetts ice company is said to have purchased a lake in Norway, whence ice may be shipped to London.

- At San Marino, in Dinwiddle county, Virginia, a coal-black negro, named Wm. Starke, and who can neither read nor write, has actu--ally received the appointment of postmaster. -The Louisville Journal, of the 3d instant, denies the report that Mr. Prentice has been discharged from its editorial staff, and says, also, that Mr. Prentice is not poor, but in affluent circumstances, his homestead alone being valued at thirty thousand dollars.

-The prospective vacancy in the office of Brigacier-General of the United States army, to be occasioned by the retiring of General Hooker, has started a number of applicants for the position. General Buchanan, lately in command at New Orleans, and General Gordon Granger are among those prominent for the position. -The New York Tribune publishes a letter from Thaddeus Stevens, now made public for the first time. It is dated "June 27th, 1868." He regrets that he cannot speak favorably of the Chicago platform, which, he says, is "like most of the Republican platforms of the past six years, lame and cowardly." Of course he is especially condemnatory of the omission of his universal suffrage plank, which he savagely calls a folly and a wickedness. The letter concludes with a bit of advice, which will prove a sticker. "It is vain for the Republican party to hope to maintain their liberty by skulking Let them be bold and honest, and they will learn that 'Heaven still rules.' Let them be cowardly and mean, and they will receive their reward with the hewers of wood and drawers

-The Baltimore Sun says : Mrs. Lincoln, widow of the late President, with her youngest son, after attending the marriage of Captain Robert Lincoln, her eldest son, at Washington, on the 24th ult., returned to this city on the 26th, and took rooms at Barnum's City Hotel, where she remained in comparative retirefriends, until Thursday morning la she loft with her son and was driven direct to Locust Point. Here, veiled and unknown to the large crowd on the pier, the widow and son or the late President went on board the steamship Baltimore, bound to Bremen. She at once went to her state-room, and as her name did not appear on the passenger list furnished by the agents of the line, (it being withheld, it is supposed, at the request of the lady,) the fact of her actual departure for Europe has only become known several days after the sailing of the ship. Those intimately acquainted with Mrs. Lincoln, aver that her visit to Europe at this time is for the purpose of placing her youngest son at a school in Germany, after which she will probably spend the winter in the south of France. -M. de Lavergue has been making an elaborate series of investigations as to the growth -or rather the want of legitimate growth-of the population of France. Not only is the population of many of the healthiest departents less than it was twenty years ago, but the total average throughout the country of the excess of births over deaths in the period 1847_1865 was less by nearly one-half than the average of the period preceding. And taking the population of the three hundred and sixtythree arrondissements into which the departments are divided, M. de Lavergue's researches have shown that in no fewer than one hundred and eighty-five arrondissements the population has decreased, in one hundred and twenty-eight it has remained nearly stationary, and in fifty only has it considerably increased. In the twenty years anterior to 1847, on the contrary, the population bad increased in three hundred and thirty-one arrondissements, and decreased in thirty-two only. M. de Lavergne adduces striking facts to show that the chief cause of this change in the movement of population is the military policy of the present French Government, with its natural consequences-war, immense levies of the best strength of the population, its unnatural concentration in towns barrack life and habits. Even a French war, i followed by disarmament, would be less damsging to the growth of the population than the military policy which forces nearly the whole able-bodied men of the country into the army.

-The New York Sun says the velocipede seems destined to come into use in this city, though it will not soon attain here the vogue it has reached in France. Our streets are too narrow and too crowded, and we have few broad. smooth avenues affording the opportunity of employing it extensively as a means of exercise and health. Still, it is so attractive and fascinating, developing so much strength and skill, and affording so great amusement to the rider, that its votaries and students must become numerous. The only artistic velocipedes consist of two wheels, the one directly behind the other, and connected together by a light iron frame work. The fore wheel is usually a little the higher of the two. may be made as great as four feet, while that pressing upon them. Had the sea island Where great speed is aimed at, its diame...r feet and eight or ten inches. In most of thosa wheels have been pretty nearly equal, with a diameter of about two feet and four inches. The propelling force is applied through treadles, which are fixed to the fore wheel. The rider drives himself by the alternate action of A rise in the price of the treasured long his feet upon these treadles. The motion of staple cotton may help them somewhat; but the feet is not unlike that in rapid walk- it will not soon restore the courage of those changestreet.

ing. The rider sits upon a little saddle just who, in one night, have seen a crop of a over the forepart of the hind wheel. He hundred bales cut down to a crop of twenty. guides his velocipede by turning the fore wheel to either side. This is done by means of a stiff iron rod which rises from the axle and has a cross bar at the top that is held by both hands of the rider. The first art of the velocipede is to keep your balance. This is not unlike the same operation in skating. It can only be acquired by practice. The more rapid the motion the easier it is to keep the machine upright. In velocipede contests in Paris prizes have been given to the slowest rider. With wheels of small diameter, the rider stops himself by putting his feet to the ground. With high wheels, he checks his speed with a brake, and descends to the earth by inclining to one side till the foot touches. In mounting with high wheels, a skilful practitioner starts his velccipede with a push, and then springs into the saidle, as we have watched Richard O'Gorman mount a horse at speed. The most beautiful velocipedes that we have seen have been French, but several carriage makers in this city are engaged in building them. Is there any danger in using this curious apparatus? Experience alone can tell how much danger there is. A skilful rider can guide himself in a crowd of persons without running against them; but all riders cannot be skilful. On a smooth course the speed of twelve miles an hour can easily be made, and with a four foot driving wheel twenty miles will not be difficult. But that can only be done upon a hard and even surface. The rough pavements of New York are unfavorable to much speed. We know a gentleman who takes exercise with one of these machines every evening, and goes from Thirty-fifth-street to the battery in ten minutes; but he has to wind about a good deal in search of suitable road-

CHARLESTON.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 7, 1868. For President ......... HORATIO SEYMOUR. For Vice-President .... FRANCIS P. BLAIR.

A Matter of Business.

The elections which will be held in this city on Tuesday, the tenth day of November, should be thought of as a matter of business in which every man in Charleston is deeply interested. They will not determine the victory of the Democratic principle, or the downfall of Radical corruption; but they will undoubtedly determine the fate of Charleston for at least three years to come. Upon them it will depend whether economically directed; whether our commercial policy is to be liberal and progressive; or whether we are to sink lower and lower, until it is out of the power of a new administration in 1871 to help us out of the Business men can understand, and do understand, that the municipal elections influence and its trade. are of more immediate and practical consequence to the residents of Charleston than any other elections about to take place. The finances of the city are in such a state that only the most careful and sagacious management can restore our credit and save us from bankruptcy. A new and strange order of things has surrounded us with dangerous elements, which demand cautious and delicate treatment. Commercial rivals en deavor to steal away our trade, and require incessant watching. And the amount of municipal taxation, the behavior and usefulness of the colored people, and the progress of our trade, are all governed, wholly or in part, by the character and policy of the Mayor and Aldermen. They can make ment, being visited only by a few personal or unmake our fortunes; upon them may be said to depend the value of every day of labor, of every kind of business, and of every inch of land.

No man leaves his doors unbarred while burglars prowl about. No man fails to insure his house because it is not yet on fire. No man grudges the cost of conducting the trade by which he lives. If these principles, plain and simple as they are, be applied to the city elections, there is no doubt of our success. But if a man declines to give up a moment of his time, if he refuses to do those things which are indispensable in an active municipal campaign, he is either blind to his own interests, or relies en being able to pluck the fruit of safety from the orchard planted by his neighbors.

The nominations for Mayor and Aldermen will probably not be made for some time to come. When they are made, every respectable man in the community is expected to work untiringly to make the election certain. But before the nominations are made, before the decisive day, the necessary organization must be prepared, and the whole system must be put in thorough working order. This cannot be done without time or trouble, and no one should refuse to give to those engaged in the great cause all the assistance in his power. Waiting for to-morrow, trusting to something to turn up, will not make us win the fight. Each must do what he can, and should always remember that a refusal, in jeopardizing the public good, may lead to the destruction of his individual and personal

The Effect of One Good Crop.

A New York evening paper estimates the value of the Southern cotton crop of the present year at $200,000,000, to which it adds half as much more to be derived from tobacco, corn and other products.

The distribution of this snug sum will go far to quicken the dormant energies of the South, and the distress of particular localities, however severe, will not stand in the way of industrial and commercial improvement. On the islands which fringe the coast of South Carolina and Georgia, the cotton crop of the season is a partial failure. Not more than one-third of the average yield is looked for, and the planters, who had been encouraged to struggle on for another year by the hope 'that it would relieve them from their difficulties, find themselves, instead, hampered and embarrassed by the deferred liabilities which are now of the hind wheel should hardly exceed two planters been lucky in 1866 and 1867, they could have borne some rough handling in that have been seen in New York the two 1868. But they had had already two disastrous years in succession, and a third failure, in destroying their elasticity of temper, has done them an infinite harm.

In the interior of this State, the crop of cotton has been fair, and the crops of wheat and corn have been good. The farmers are not in debt, as they were last year when they were forced to sell their produce at whatever it would bring, to repay the advances made by their factors. Nor is the State dependent on the North or West for provisions. Enough corn has been made to supply the wants of the year, and the profit made on cotton will not be spent in buying bread. The factors are not straightened in means and can assist their friends to hold their cotton. No juggling will make our planters sacrifice the staple. They are strong enough to wait. And they will wait, if the mill owners try to play their old game of crying up the crop and crying down the price. In the towns the beneficial influence of the crops has been as great as in the rural districts. Our wholesale houses have been unexpectedly busy. Country merchants and farmers have flocked to Charleston, and the jobbing houses have been more crowded by customers and orders than they had been for years. If the immediate or expected expenditure of our share of the value of the total crop of the South has made itself so sensibly felt in this State, where the question of labor is still unsettled and the Radical goblin is far from being laid, how important must have been the consequences of the crop throughout the whole Southern country. The removal of the gaunt spectre of poverty has been the end to which we have chiefly looked, and it seems that the South is at last in a fair way to pay her debts and support and make prosperous her people. We do not fear that political movements will long retard the development of the great cotton, rice, sugar and grain regions of the continent. The Presidential elections, in settling our troubles for four years, will settle them for this generation. When the political contest is at an end, the victors and the vanquished will sober their joys and blunt their sorrows by hard and lusty work. This will give us a still larger crop for 1869. It will give the South more credit, more capital, more nerve; and it will enable us to deal firmly and decisively with those social problems which will require an early solution. Our power will be in proportion to our wealth. Our wealth will be in proportion the city affairs are to be honestly and to our industry. Our industry will not be fully tried and exerted until after the coming elections. Then trade and commerce will take the place of the din of contending parties, and the whole Southern country will be at liberty to turn every thought to tilling the soil, rebuilding the commercial centres, and extending and increasing its
