THE STATE CAPITAL.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS—REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES—DEATH OF G. W. WILLIAMS, OF YORK—THE ELECTORAL VOTE—THE UNITED STATES COURT.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DAILY NEWS.] COLUMBIA, S. C., December 2.—House—Beeman introduced a bill to regulate the practice of medicine.

Turner, Democrat, introduced resolutions for the general removal of disabilities. Referred.

After a brief debate to-day, on motion of Corbin, the Senate resolved that it had no authority to elect a Lieutenant-Governor in place of Booser, resigned.

Young, senator from Abbeville, was announced present and ready to qualify. His credentials were referred to the Committee on Elections, who asked and obtained time to prepare their report.

Wright introduced a bill amendatory of an act to establish a State police. The bill authorizes the Governor to increase the force whenever necessary.

The bill providing for the transient sick poor of the State was passed, and the title changed to an act.

George W. Williams, a distinguished lawyer, died suddenly this morning at Nickerson's. He was many years a representative and senator in the Legislature.

The United States Court, after the delivery of opinions on the deceased by Corbin, Hamilton, Melton, Simonton, Tradewell, Fielding, and Judge Bryan, adopted resolutions of respect and adjourned.

The Presidential electors cast their vote to-day for Grant and Colfax.

Stolbrand was elected to carry the vote to Washington.

In the Supreme Court the case of the Phoenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn, at the suit of Madison, was argued to-day; Whaley for appellant, and Simonton, King, and Hanchel for appellees.

EUROPE.

DIFFICULTY BETWEEN THE REPUBLICANS AND MONARCHISTS IN SPAIN.

MADRID, December 2.—The Republicans dispersed the Monarchists meeting at Oriensio. It is rumored here that the United States have recognized the Cuban insurgents as belligerents.

Prin declares that the present government has no dealings with the Bourbons, and indignantly disavows the contemplation of a coup d'etat.

WASHINGTON.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD SIX MILLION DOLLARS BEHIND HAND—THE REVENUE IN A MIDDLE.

WASHINGTON, December 2.—The Union Pacific Railroad Commission report that it will require $6,000,000 to complete the work already paid for by the government.

There will be a grand army reunion at Chicago December 16.

Rollins has issued directions for double distilled whiskey in accordance with Evans' opinion.

It is stated at revenue headquarters that an unauthorized synopsis of Rollins' report shows an error of $60,000,000 in one item. It is also stated that a bogus copy of the Secretary's report is circulating in New York.

Revenue to-day $556,000.

The Indian War.

HAYES CITY, December 2.—General Custer has captured a Cheyenne village of Black Kettle's band, killing one hundred and fifty, and capturing fifty-three Indians and one thousand horses and mules.

Fifty-one lodges were destroyed. Captain Louis Hamilton was killed, and Colonel Barnitz wounded. Major Elliott is missing.

Of the soldiers, nineteen were killed and fourteen wounded. Custer returns to Fort. Black Kettle, the principal chief, was killed, and the tribe badly crippled.

Custer's victory over Black Kettle is confirmed by a dispatch from Sheridan. An Indian woman killed a white woman and boy at the commencement of the fight. Sheridan's plan of campaign is to move on the Indians from six points and attack them in winter quarters.

AFFAIRS IN COLUMBIA.

The Martin and Randolph Murders—Spirit of the Representatives—The Election of the Lieutenant-Governor—The First Circuit Judge—Senator Robertson's Speech—The Meeting of the Electors, &c.

COLUMBIA, S. C., December 1.—The Special Committee of the House of Representatives to whom was referred the matter of the death of Martin and Randolph, made their report to-day.

As will be seen, the Democratic members object to the resolutions on account of the object being evident in them to make political capital by charging indirectly the murders upon the Democratic party.

The Democratic members deny the imputation, which has also been recently denied by the press throughout the State. The eulogies delivered, except perhaps that made by DeLarue, were of the same character. DeLarue's speech is commended by the Democrats and the citizens generally for its moderate and conciliatory tone.

The following are the resolutions reported by Whipper on behalf of the special committee: Whereas, information has reached this House of the death of Mr. James Martin, a representative from Abbeville County, who was deliberately murdered on the public road, while on his way to the Abbeville Courthouse, on the 5th of October; and whereas, there can be no doubt that Mr. Martin was murdered solely because of his political associations; and whereas, the death of Mr. James Martin, member from Abbeville County, this House loses one who, though quiet and unobtrusive, was always faithful and diligent in the performance of his duties, and that we sincerely mourn his loss.

Resolved, That, regretting as we do the loss of a member so gentle, unobtrusive and intelligent as was Mr. Martin, we cannot but regret the existence in any part of our State of a spirit which would seek to serve party purposes by violence and murder; and that the existence of such a spirit is still more to be deplored as it is an example and assumes a more portentous appearance when it selected as its victim one who, under no circumstances, could have given provocation that would justify or excuse the conduct of those who murdered him.

Resolved, That while we would not willingly believe that the intelligence and respectability of this State, or of any portion of it, does now give to any such spirit, its sanction to the outrages of which the murder of Mr. Martin, and the equally atrocious and unjustifiable murder of the Hon. B. F. Randolph, senator from Orangeburg, are examples, we cannot blind ourselves to the fact that, as yet, the citizens in whose supposed interest these outrages have been perpetrated, have done little or nothing towards bringing to justice those who committed the same; and that, on the contrary, the attempts made by the Executive of the State to arrest the guilty parties have been denounced in the communities where the crimes were committed as an arbitrary exercise of power not justified by the circumstances; and that, in some instances, the officers of the law have been threatened and treated with violence.

Resolved, That we would fain believe, now that the excitement of a bitter political contest is over, that the people of our State will settle down into a quiet obedience to law and order, and that the spirit which has so long troubled us may be regarded as a thing of the past; and that we may regret what has transpired, as members of the General Assembly of South Carolina who can cherish no feelings of bitterness or revenge; and that we will address ourselves to the task of making such laws and adopting such measures as will secure equal and exact justice to all classes, and prosperity to the State.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the journal of the House, and a copy of them be sent to the family of Mr. Martin, with our sincere sympathy and condolence; and that the Speaker's desk be draped with mourning for thirty days, and that this House do now adjourn in respect to his memory.

The resolutions were seconded by A. J. Ranney. Eulogies were delivered by Messrs. Tomlinson, Ransier, Ferrier, Whipper, Boesman, Elliott and DeLarue.

The resolutions of the House (Democrats) also spoke in reference to the resolutions. B. B. Elliott offered the following amendment: Resolved, That the members of this House do wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days, and that a blank page of the journal be inscribed to the memory of the deceased representative, James Martin.

The amendment was adopted—yeas 90, nays 7. The resolutions as amended were then adopted. The following papers were presented, to be considered to-morrow: The undersigned, Democratic members of the House of Representatives of South Carolina, fearing their affirmative vote on the amendments to the resolutions in relation to the death of Mr. Martin, of Abbeville, should be misunderstood, beg leave to state that they voted for the amendment because they considered it proper, and desired to show a disposition to sustain any reasonable resolutions of honor and condolence they contained, while they had expressly agreed, prior to the vote, that they could not sustain such resolutions as amounted to political sentences upon the party, and that they were not to be understood as either directly or indirectly fixing on the Democratic party.

General, two hundred and fifty copies of which were ordered to be printed.

Senator Cain made his first appearance this session in the Senate this morning. He received a cordial greeting from both Democrats and Republicans.

But very little was done in the Senate to-day beyond the reference of bills already introduced, and referred to the various committees.

To-morrow the subject of the election of a Lieutenant-Governor comes up at one P. M., for which time it has been made the special order. There is some division of opinion, but a majority think a special act to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Lieutenant-Governor Booser will have to be passed, and that neither the Senate nor both Houses in joint assembly as proposed by others have the right to elect.

Much interest is manifested in the election of a Judge for the first circuit. The names most prominently mentioned in this connection are those of the Hon. T. W. Glover, of Orangeburg, and Colonel Wm. Whaley, of Charleston. It having been reported that Senator T. J. Robertson was to leave this city for Washington to-morrow morning, his friends had a meeting in the hall of the House of Representatives this evening, when he took occasion to speak to the party on the political situation and prospects. His speech, which was a glowing tribute to General Grant and his future policy, was received with great demonstrations of applause. He said General Grant would do what Mr. Johnson never has done, and that is to make loyalty to the nation and the Union respectable. Whenever or wherever it was necessary for the safety of Republican principles or the Republic itself, he advocated the most stringent measures. If the railroads could not meet their liabilities, he recommended that all such railroads, whose bonds are endorsed by the State, should be sold and the proceeds turned into the treasury of the State.

At the conclusion of Mr. Robertson's address, speeches were made by Mr. A. E. Cohen and Mr. Ladd, candidates for the office of Register of Means-Conveyance at Charleston. The members elect of the electoral college met at the Auditor's office yesterday afternoon, and, in accordance with the requirements of law, proceeded to fill vacancies. Mr. Chamberlain, one of the electors at large, not being present, Mr. R. Tomlinson, was chosen in his place, and Wilson Cooke was elected in the place of Mr. Allen, of Greenville, who was unable to serve. The vote for President will be taken to-morrow.

The issue and equity docket of the United States Court will be called promptly on Monday next.

The fair for the benefit of the Ursuline Convent has been very successful thus far, with the best prospects of its continuance.

THE BUREAU ADVANCES.

General Howard's Circular Letter on the Subject.

The fact has been already stated in THE NEWS that, in consideration of the very general and disastrous failure of the sea island crop, instructions had been given by General Howard, providing, in substance, that in each case where a total or a partial failure of the crop should be shown to have occurred from causes beyond the planter's control, upon payment of the accrued interest upon the debt incurred for provisions advanced by the government an extension of the time allowed for the payment of the bond shall be granted, without further interest, until the first day of November, 1869. We further mentioned that, in order to carry out these instructions, General Howard had issued a circular letter, creating a committee, the members of which are to be Colonel Edie, Assistant Commissioner of the Bureau for South Carolina, Governor Scott, and Ex-Governor Aiken, to whom it shall be referred, in each case, to determine whether the proposed relief ought to be granted. The text of this circular letter, which has just reached us, is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 21.—Circular Letter.—Considerable difficulty having arisen in the matter of collecting advances made during the present season to persons engaged in planting, made with a view of enabling them to give live stock and food to the poor, especially the freedmen, and it being represented to the Commissioner that great distress will be occasioned by an immediate enforcement of the bonds marked some year ago, and that the Government is desirous of relieving the distressed condition of the crops by the worm or other injurious causes, the Commissioner issued a notice of instruction to the effect October 19, 1868 (copy herewith attached).

It is not being found to be extremely difficult to determine what persons are justly entitled to the relief contemplated in the instructions contained in said letter, and with a view to relieve the officers of this Bureau of the burden naturally attaching to them in making the necessary discrimination between the claimants, and in order to relieve the present embarrassed condition of the Government, the Commissioner hereby appoints a board to consist of the Assistant Commissioner of South Carolina as chairman, the Governor of South Carolina, and the Governor of Virginia, to whom it shall be referred, in each case, to determine whether the proposed relief ought to be granted. The text of this circular letter, which has just reached us, is as follows:

Pending the action of the commission, it is understood, the collection of the claims of the government for advances is suspended.

FAITHFUL PENITENTIARY OF CHINESE CHRISTIANS.—The Catholic converts in Cochinchina are being faithfully persecuted by the local authorities. A letter from Cochinchina China to a French religious paper says: A traitor, named Gin, in the service of Daou, brought the bones several of his brother workmen, whom he knew were Christians. The first, named Han, born on his visage the characters of-dao (infidel), with which he had been marked, and which he had been obliged to answer to the bonze Thac, he replied that he was a Christian. An order was immediately given to bind his arms and legs and throw him into a burning cauldron. "O my God, my God!" he cried out. "O my God, my God!" But the populace struck in reply: "It is another: your God will not come to save you." It is another Christian, named Thuy, was also given up to Thac, and suffered a similar fate. They succeeded in breaking the cords which bound him, and fled to a little river close by; but he was soon recaptured and thrown again into the flames. Three other Christians gave way before such torture, and declared they were heathens. They received the traitor, and were put into the ranks of the band. Two of these apostates related to me the preceding facts, which were also confirmed by the traitor Gin. This brute was not content with burning alive two Christians mentioned above; he killed with his own hand two others, one of whom was a woman with a child at her breast. He is at present in custody. On the day after, the bonze ordered the rest of the Christians captured to be beheaded. They were led one by one—men, women and children—before a wall, into which they were thrown at or having been decapitated. The list of the victims amounts to twelve men, four women and eight children. Several of the children were impaled on lances before their parents' eyes. About twelve Christians managed to escape, but which has become of them is not known.

REVIEWS.

THE OCCUPATIONS OF A RETIRED LIFE. By Edward Garrett.

Whoever of whatever Mr. Edward Garrett may be—and the name, if we are not mistaken, is really an old man's diary which we are perusing, and that the joys and sorrows, hopes, pains, aches and recompenses, of which it is the simple record, were "really and truly" experienced by the persons with whose fate and fortunes the unpretending chronicler deals. If, however, this raisonnement be artistic, then Mr. Garrett has achieved a triumph not second to that of the author of "The Household of Sir Thomas More" or of "The Diary of Lady Willoughby";—perhaps, indeed, the triumph is a greater one, inasmuch as it is infinitely more difficult successfully to imitate just such a contemporary chronicle as we have here, than one of a past age whose fluctuations are more easily caught, and where, if the reproduction be less exact, criticism is, on the other hand, very much less expert.

Whether fictitious, however, or founded upon actual occurrences, the story here unfolded has a quiet charm of its own, for which we seek in vain in the pages of more pretentious narratives. There is something almost epigrammatic in the curt simplicity of some of Ruth Garrett's observations, and a blending of homely truth and poetic insight in such passages as the following, which endues them with infinite suggestion: "Man's whole duty to man is service, and, therefore, everybody is somebody's servant, and he stands highest who best serves the greatest number."

"A genius, to be above his fellows, must be a good, common-place man, and something besides. It is higher than others for having what they have not, if he lack something which they have? I never blame the good old woman who boxed King Alfred's ears because he let the cakes burn, while he pondered over his miserable country. Served him right!"

"Everything must turn out of its way sometimes, or else crush something beneath it." If the book has a fault, it is, perhaps, to be found in this, that it is, in parts, a little too didactic; though, even granting this, we would find it hard to decide what portions to curtail—the terse antithetical sentences of Ruth, the shrewd and sagacious, if less pointed utterances of the author in his own person, the quaint humor and sober common sense of the Agnes Herbert.

We cannot but advise our readers cordially to take the first opportunity of becoming acquainted with the people of "Upper Mallowe." The book can be found at Russell's.

THE WAVELEY NOVELS. New York: D. Appleton & Co. (Publishers); John Russell, (Author).

D. Appleton & Co. have issued the first volume of their new edition of Waverley, which contains Waverley, Guy Mannering, Kenilworth and Ivanhoe. This edition is printed from the plates of the "Plaid" Waverley, and will contain many additional engravings. It is very tastefully bound in green and gold, and will be an ornament to any library. The same firm have issued St. Ronan's Well, of the "Plaid" edition of Waverley. It has all the merits of the numbers which preceded it. These books are for sale by John Russell, King-street.

THE WAVELEY NOVELS. New York: D. Appleton & Co. (Publishers); John Russell, (Author).

When the history of the literature of the nineteenth century comes to be written, the chronicler thereof will not find it the least portion of his task simply to record the names of the novels which have achieved moderate successes. Indeed, the cleverness of the day seems to have effaced in these literary loan-bubbles to an extent which almost excludes a priori the possibility of decided excellence in any of the great departments of literature. Where talent is diffused over so wide an area, it is hopeless to look for those results which attend only singular concentration and exceptional merit. There are some who doubt if we have any great poet. And, in regard to the subject directly before us, the Westminster Review has lately patetically lamented our want of a really great novel. Nevertheless what may be called the representative literature of the day, embodies in a remarkable degree the peculiar spirit of the time, and affords a not untrustworthy index of the march of mind at least along many of the byways of thought.

Especially is this true of the stories of Mr. George McDonald, of whose peculiar characteristics Alec Forbes is a very favorable specimen. It used to be a favorite theory with a certain class of critics that poetry and prose were in their nature antagonistic, and the position was supported by the dictum that no great poet ever wrote his poem in prose. The advocates of an opposite theory might, perhaps, be willing enough to accept the general statement, if they were allowed to raise a class of exceptions which this novel may well illustrate. We do not think Mr. McDonald will ever be a great poet in the acceptance of the Leigh Hunt school of criticism, nor are we prepared to assert that Alec Forbes is a great or a complete poem. Where, in two or three instances, he falls into verse, he does not appear to us to be peculiarly happy. But the man who would deny to the book the charm of a living, breathing poetic spirit, beginning, continuing and ending its perhaps cumbersome, but never inharmonious plot, would surely be a dullard with whom it would be vain to argue. It is indeed difficult to deal with it as with an ordinary novel, for the not unnatural reason, probably, that it is precisely a very uncommon and extraordinary novel—a novel which perhaps we are hardly justified in calling a novel at all, though it professes so to be, but rather a strange, yet never unmelodious mingling of a pastoral idyll with a drama of living human passion, of a philosophical meditation with a comedy of profound humor and pathos. Between the child-life and child-love of Alec and Annie at Giamerton, and the turbulent student career in the university city, blended with the fierce passion of Alec's connexion with Kate Fraser; between the half-gaunt, half pitiable humor of Mr. Cupples, and the grim, stern, uncomely outpourings of the same spirit in Thomas Craun, there is but little apparent link of union. And yet the art is wonderful with which these two differing and opposing existences are made to work together in the hero's development, and by adding that content of hostile influences without which no human life ever achieves even that partial victory over itself which is essential to human happiness, to give to the book that vital interest which can belong only to a faithful life chronicle.

There is no story in particular to recapitulate, and the interest of the book will be found chiefly to consist in the skill with which the character of Alec Forbes is evolved and in the inimitable slighter sketches which are almost too numerous to mention. There is hardly a character introduced which has not been carefully wrought out, and some of the lesser

PREVENT OR REPENT!—WHEN he has been sacrificed for want of the care necessary to protect it, regret is unavailing. It is better to prevent than to repent. The most important season of the year is at hand, and its cold and damp are the source of innumerable distressing ailments. The best means of escaping them is to keep the outward surface of the body comfortably warm with suitable clothing, and the internal organs in a vigorous condition by the occasional use of a healthful tonic and corrective. Winter makes tremendous drafts upon the vital forces, and therefore it is a season when a pure vegetable stimulant and invigorant like HOEYER'S STOMACH BITTERS is of infinite use, especially to the weak and feeble. It gives sustenance to the system, and is favorable to the vitality of the blood. It is a powerful and reliable remedy to combat the effects of cold, which produce cough, bronchitis, catarrh, and other diseases of the organs of respiration. Dyspepsia and every species of indigestion are also greatly aggravated by cold, damp weather, and for these complaints the BITTERS are an acknowledged specific. There is no fact better known in this country, and, indeed, throughout the civilized portion of the western hemisphere, than this general preparation is a swift and certain remedy for all ordinary diseases of the stomach and the liver. 6 November 30
