being at peace with all nations, and above all with Great Britain. While serving in his youth as minute writer in the Department of Justice at Berlin, Bismarck developed that irascibility of temperament and imperiousness of manner which have since characterized him.

CHARLESTON.

SATURDAY MORNING, JANUARY 23, 1869.

The Southern Press Association.

The Charleston News has never been an active member of this association, but it has become so important that there should be some concert of action on the part of the Southern press.

And in saying this, we are not governed only by the desire to meet those who have borne the brunt of battles journalistic during three eventful years.

There is also the consideration that we have hitherto frittered away our strength. Each newspaper has fought its own fight, sectional, political or financial.

Each newspaper has fought its own fight, sectional, political or financial, in true guerilla fashion; and the press of the South have accomplished nothing.

At this time, and in the columns of a public journal, it would not be well to speak too frankly of all that might be obtained by the united efforts of the Southern press.

The New York Tribune calls upon the Republicans in Congress to give the country a secure and lasting peace.

We do not seek to excuse our past lukewarmness in regard to the Southern Press Association; but we are alive now to its importance.

We are satisfied that the railroads will give the members of the association all the facilities in their power.

We have read, with some natural surprise, the following paragraph, published in the Augusta Chronicle and Sentinel of Thursday last.

We have heard the same thing, and from a quarter which convinces us of its entire truthfulness. It would seem that the authorities of the South Carolina Road are determined to stop upon the public a portion of their spleen against the Columbia Road.

The Chronicle has been so uniformly courteous in its discussion of public questions, that we are satisfied that there was no intention of showing either party or personal feeling in regard to a line of railroad which has been of vast benefit to Augusta.

But there is a third train—the Wilmington and Augusta through train, which does not stop at Graniteville.

It is a train put on to compete with the East Tennessee and Knoxville and the Danville and Charlotte routes, of which last route the Columbia and Augusta Railroad is now a part.

As already noticed, the connection at Graniteville was formerly made with the South Carolina Railroad day train, and no endeavor was made to convince the public that the South Carolina Railroad stands in the way of their proper accommodation.

The whole question is, and we say it without fear of contradiction, not one of public convenience, but of convenience to the Columbia and Augusta Railroad Company.

It might be supposed by persons unacquainted with the derring character of the pirates who prey upon the reputation of honorable merchants by vending deleterious trash under their names.

The public, the medical profession and the sick, for whom the Sclerolam Aromatic Schnapps is prescribed as a remedy, are equally interested.

The following letters and certificates from the leading physicians and chemists of this city will prove to the reader that all goods sold by the undersigned are all that they are represented to be.

I feel bound to say, that I regard your Schnapps as being in every respect pre-eminently pure, and of the highest medicinal quality.

Dear Sir—I have made a chemical examination of a sample of your Sclerolam Schnapps, with the intent of determining its value for medicinal purposes.
