-It seems to be pretty generally conceded that Mr. Johnson, on retiring from the Presidency, will plunge at once into the political struggles of Tennessee; and it seems to be equally well understood that if he does, he will make lively times for everybody concerned. A Nashville letter in the leading Democratic paper of St. Louis, the Republican, says there is a good deal of opposition to the project on the part of the Democratic leaders; but this, he thinks, will make no difference with the result, for, he adds, that he never knew Mr. Johnson nominated on the Democratic ticket without great opposition from the party; but that he always succeeded. The writer adds : "Johnson is not a party leader, but a leader of a certhe office of Governor, he will do it, no matter what Democratic leaders may say, no matter what bondaolding Conservatives may say, no matter what the Conservative papers of Tennessee may write on the subject. But none of these will openly oppose him. I can safely predict that A. J.'s canvass for the Governorship of this State, should it be made, will not be excelled by anything in the way of political drama, yet enacted, for richness of entertain-

-A Washington letter to the Baltimore Gazette says: "The examination of private servants on Mr. Corcoran's claim excites no littl. the occupation of property by the Lincoln administration was allowed in the Treasury Department. Congress not denying the justice of it, seeks to avoid the payment of it by taxing Mr. Corcoran with disloyalty. Accordingly Mr. Brewer, who was a scarcely grown man six or seven years ago, is brought before the Committee on the District of Columbia, to derful elasticity and energy of the South. whom the claim has been referred in the Senate, and allowed to testify in an examination strictly ex parie, that at a private dinner at the Russian Minister's a very prominent gentleman-one of the old school-said that he would give ten thousand dollars to have Jeff. Davis come to Washington and hang Liucoln and his Cabinet, upon which Mr. C. said that he would give ten times as much. No gentleman. possessed of that tact which long political experience gives, would have so compromised a minister in troublous times. Besides which. another gentleman, said to have been present. declares that he never was at such a dinner. Baron Sloeckl has left Washington, it is now known, not to return; otherwise this creature would never have dared to give any such testimony. What will be the upshot of it it is impossible to say. Some foreigners think that the members of the committee may yet have the decency to dismiss the subject without attempting to make the testimony public. The i dea of trusting at any time to the testimony street trembles?

of lackeys as to private dinner table conversation, is simply too monstrous, and to attempt to bring it forward after years have elapsed makes it a great deal worse."

-A steam velocipede has recently been inveoted, by which it is asserted great speed can be obtained. The cylinders are placed vertically in front of the boiler, between it and the seat, and connect with cranks on the shaft of the driving wheels, which, two in number, are situated on the front part of the carriage. The engine is a direct-acting compound engine of two cylinders, each cylinder two-and-ahalf inches diameter and five inches stroke. The steering gear consists of an endless chain working over a grooved wheel on the axle of the driving wheels, and passing over a corresponding wheel, fixed between the forked shaft just over the single steering wheel, which in this instance is in the rear of the carriage. The latter grooved wheel is a wide one, and over it passes another chain, which works around the boss of the front wheel. This arrangement gives power to the steering wheel, so that in turning a corner it takes a wider sweep than the two driving wheels, which go first. In travelling on a straight road the machine is turned to either side by turning the steering wheel to the opposite side. The fire box and tubes are copper, pressure two hundred pounds to the square inch; but it is asserted that a pressure or twenty-five pounds of steam will give a power equal to the force necessary to propel a volocipede by the feet. The steam velocipedes, however, it is asserted, will be an uncomforta ble apparatus for the driver, since he must sit near the boiler. Up to January 1, 1869, it is reported, there have been taken out thirty patents for velocipedes, the first patent dating

Our Financial Position. The question of the resumption of specie payments, which is so generally discussed in the North, attracts but little attention in the Southern States. Our newspapers are not flooded with letters pointing out the royal road to the hard money era; public speakers have no word to say about the almighty paper dollar; our new-fledged representatives in Congress are not bored with memorials or petitions in opposition to the glitter of gold, or in favor of the flimsy greenback. The reason is obvious. We are at this moment, notwithstanding the war and the uncertainties of a system of free negro labor, in a more sound financial condition than are the Northern States. At our backs we have two and a half million bales of cotton, worth in the tarket two hundred and fifty million of dollars. In this State alone, the cotton crep is worth more than twenty million. This year the South may expect to produce at least four million bales, and we do not anticipate that any crop short of four and a half million bales will cause uplands to sell for less than from twenty to twenty-two cents. Cotton is our back-bone, the strong tower of our whole commercial fabric. It is evident enough that, as long as we can make cotton as well as we have done during the last year, as long to the world seeks in vain that long-looked for cotten country which can make it independent of our staple, we can command all the currency that we require, and be always in a better position to resume specie payments, or endure an inconvertible currency, than the merchants and manufacturers of the Northera centres by the European demand, and not by domestic consumption. Every pound of cotton which is exported is sold for gold, and we repeat that the South could drain the whole of New England and the West of its specie, by requiring that cotton should be paid for in hard money alone. Such a policy on our part, however, would evince little practical wisdom. There is not overmuch confidence here in either greenbacks or United States securities. The planters and farmers do not invest their balances in five-twenties or seven-thirties or any other national financial denomination. Their distrust, however, is gradually wearing away; but it is still strong enough to impel them to buy gold and keep it as something which neither Congress nor Radicalism nor the inevitable freedman can deprive of intrinsic value. This feeling is bringing specie in a steady stream to the South and bolding it here; but as that specie represents the net profits of the producer rather than the price of his produce, it will not suffice to cause any embarrassing stringency in the Northern gold market. If, however, we were to demand gold or silver tain class of the people. He is a party driver. for the whole three and a half million bales If it is his intention to canvass Tennessee for of our cotton, the paper dollar would go head-long down hill, and there would be a panic in New York greater even in its intensity than that of twelve years ago. But we cannot afford to ruin the North, even if we have the power. As there could not be lasting prosperity for the North while the South was in the dust, so there would be trouble, serious trouble, in the South, if the North were bankrupt. The two sections are more or less dependent the one upon the other; and as we know that cotton is measured by a gold standard, and that it: comment in diplomatic circles. The claim for price in paper must increase in the ratio of the depreciation of the paper currency, we can well afford to mind our own business and leave the problem of specie payments to be solved by those whom it more deeply concerns. We have this year demonstrated the won-We have made ourselves commercially independent. We have given less attention to party politics and more care to commerce and trade. This, we hope, will be the course of our people in the future. They can make as much money as they used; they can, in time, solve the negro question or cut that Gordian knot; they can, without agitation or risk, but with a few more crops of cotton, secure an influence which will make the South a power in Congress, and extert the adoption and continuance of a liberal Federal policy. Our position is strong; our hearts are light; our future is bright with hope. Why need we, who owe but little, and who produce yearly more gold by our labors than is drawn from the gold mines of the entire globe, trouble our heads with the questions at which WallNew Publications.

York: Harper & Broom. Book House, Charleston. Henry Ward Beecher must look to his laurels. The life of Christ which he announces is anticipated by a volume written very much in his style, and with a variety of contemporary allusion, such as the sensationalist of the Plymouth Church can scarcely go beyond. The analogies to which Mr. Abbott resorts are oftentimes fanciful, for time does not repeat itself, neither does nature. The correspondence he seeks to establish between the Jewish Commonwealth and the American Republic fails in many particulars. His description of Galilee, as "the New England of Palestine," is singularly infelicitous; it is founded neither on the manuers of the people, the products of the soil, the climate, nor the geological formations, but simply upon the f ot that either is a rolling country with a Lebanon (a white mountain) range to the northward. Perhaps Mr. Abbott needs to be reminded that the Syrian Lebanon is white inside as well as outside; it is a limestone formation, and so has only a resemblance in name to the granite heights of New Hampshire.

We are constrained also to object to the rollicking spirit in which our author approaches so grave a subject as the life of the Redeemer. Without question he has made a popular book-full of information, of genial colloquy, of happy hits, of fascinating narratives. There is a freshness in the careless, crisp style, a picturesqueness the Evangelical history, an American movement and hurry given to the quiet Oriental life, which entrances the reader; but for our part, we would be better suited by'a style more reverent and solemn and tender. The illustrations are for the most part excellent, and add to the interest of the volume. The republication, however, of some of the plates, from Abbott's "Holy Land," would have been very serviceable. We refer particularly to the plans of the principal historic districts.

D. Howells, author of "Venetian Life," &c. New York: G. P. Putnam & Son. Charles-ton: Fogarties' Book Depository. Mr. Howells is so well known as a writer of graceful and delicate prose, that we have long felt that it was "on the cards" that he might some day glide into verse; and just such verse as we have here, delicate, airy, tender, pathetic, musical. The poem is written in hexameters, and Mr. Howells manages that very difficult measure with grace and spirit. It is very short, only fifty pages of largely printed letter-press The theme would have borne a little more claboration. What there is of it, however, is simply charming, and few who have read it once but will retrace their steps. The "get-up" of the volume is perfect, and the illustrations of unusual merit.

Schiedam Schnapps.

OFFICE OF UDOLPHO WOLFE, Soie Importer of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps, No. 22 Benver-street. New York, November 3, 1888.

To the People of the Southern States: WHEN THE PURE MEDICINAL RESTORATIVE. now so widely known as WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS, was in roduced into the world under the endorsement of four thousand leading members of the medical protession some twenty years ago, its proprietor was well aware that it could not wholly escape the penalty attached to all new and usefu preparations. He, therefore, endeavored to invest i with strongest possible safeguard against counterfeiters, and to render all attempts to pirate it diffi cult and dingerous. It was submitted to distinguished chemists for analysis, and pronounced by them the purest spirit ever manufactured. Its puri ty and properties having ocen thus ascertained, samples of the article were forwarded to ten thousand physicians, including all the leading practitioners in the United States, for purposes of experiment. A circular, requesting a trial of the preparation and a report of the result; accompanied each specimen. Four thousand of the most eminent medical men in the Union promptly responded. Their opinions of the article were unanimously favorable. Such a preparation, they said, had long been wanted by the profession, as no reliance could be placed on the ordinary liquors of commerce, all of which were more or less adulterated, and therefore unfit for medical purposes. The peculiar excellence and strength of the oi of juniper, which formed one o the principal ingredients of the Schnapps, together with an unalloyed character of the alcoholic element, give it, in the estimation of the faculty, a marked superiority over every other diffusive stimu-

These satisfactory credentials from professions men of the highest rank were published in a con densed form, and enclosed with each bottle of the Schnapps, as one of the guarantees of its genuineness. Other precautions against fraud were als adopted; a patent was obtained for the article, the label was copyrighted, a fac simile of the proprietor's autograph signature was attached to each label and cover, his name and that of the preparation were emossed on the bettles, and the corks were sealed with his private seal. No article had ever been sold in this country under the name of Schnapps prior to in the rapid sketchings and groupings of the introduction of Wolfe's Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps, in 1851; and the label was deposited, as his trade mark, in the United States District Cour for the Southern District of New York during that lant as a diuretic, tonic and restorative.

It might be supposed by persons unacquainted with the daring character of the pirates who prey upon the remitation of honorable merchants by wend ing deleter ous trash under their name, that the pro tections so carefully thrown around these Schnappe would have precluded the introductions and sale of counterfeits. They seem, bowever, only to have stimulated the rapacity of impostors. The trade mark of the proprietor has been stolen; the indorse ment which his Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps alone received from the medical profession has been claimed by mendacious humbugs; his labels and bottles have been imitated, his advertisements paraphrased, his circulars copied, and worse than all dishonorable retuilers, after disposing of the genuine contents of his bottles, have filled them up with common gin, the most deleterious of all liquors, and thus made his name and brand a cover for poison.

The public, the medical protession and the sick, for whom the Schiedam aromatic Schnapps is prescribed as a remedy, are equally interested with the proprietor in the detection and suppression of these netarious practices. . The genuine article, manufac tured at the establishment of the undersigned in Schledam, Holland, is distilled from a barley of the finest quality, and flavored with an essential extract of the berry of the Italian justper, of unequalled pu rity. By a process unknown in the preparation of any other liquor, it is ireed from every acrimonious and corresive element.

Complaints have been received from the leading physicians and families in the Southern States of the sale of cheap unitations of the schiedam Aro matic Schnopps in those markets; and travellers who are in the habit of using it as an antidote to the hanafal influence of unwholesome rivetiry that cheap gin, put up in Schiedam bottles, is trequently palmed off upon the unwary. The agents of the undersigned have been requested to institute inquiries on the subject, and to forward to him the names of such parties as they may ascer tain to be engaged in the atrocious system of deception. In conclusion, the undersigned would say that he has produced, from under the hands of the modistinguished men of science in Smerica, proofs un answerable of the purity and medicinal excellence of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnarps : that he has expended many thousand dollars in surrounding it with guarantees and safeguards, which against fraudulent imitations; that he has shown it to be the only liquor in the world that can be uniformly depended upon as unadulterated; that he has challenged investigation, analysis, comparison and experiment mallits forms; and from every order the preparation which bears his name, seal and trade mark, has come off triumphant. He, therefore, feels it a duty he owes to has fellow-cit z ns generally, to the medical protession and the sick, to denounce and expose the charlation who counterteit these evidencies of identity, and he calls upon the press and the sublic to aid him in his efforts to remedy so great an evil.

The following letters and certificates from the leading physicians and che mist: of this city will. prove to the reader that all goods sold by the undersigned are all that they are repre ented to be. UDOLPHO WOLFE.

I feel bound to say, that I regard your Schnapps as being in every respect pre-stainently pure, an deserving or medical patronage. At all events, it the purest possible article of Holland Gin, hereto lore unobtainable, and as such may so safely pri

UDOLPHO WOLFE, Esq., Present:

Dear Sir—I have made a chemical examination of a sample of your schedam Schuapps, with the intent of doterm-ning if any for-ign or injurious substance had been added to the sample distilled spirits. The examination has resulted in the conclusion that the sample contained no personous or in-ruful admixture. I have ocal madble to discover any trace of the deactorious substance, which are employed in the a ulteration of liquors. I would not be itate to use myself or to recommend to others, for incedicinal purposes, the Schleidam Schnapps as an excellent and unobjectionable variety of gim.

Very respectfully yours,
