the report of the directors, and the report of the superintendent was read by the secretary—which reports, together with the accompanying tables, were presented as the annual report of the company, and were, on motion, received and unanimously adopted.

A motion was made and passed to authorize measures to be taken for the construction of a

Agricultural Convention this morning, on the subject of cotton mills and manufactories, Mr. Lawton, of Charleston, after presentation of the report of the Committee on Manufactures, adverting to his investigation of the subject in England, France and Germany, alluded to the vast wealth accumulated in those countries from the manufacture of cotton fabrics. No one, he said, who had not visited those countries and the New England States could well conceive the vast importance of the great de of the South to the nations of the earth. conclusion he drew from all he saw was The conclusion he drew from all he saw was that we had not availed ourselves of those great privileges which Almighty God appearer to have designed for us. We have all the material necessary for the fabrication of goods that the world requires, and yet we confine ourselves entirely to its production. They could not expect any people to rise to eminence or distinction who solely confine themselves to one pursuit, whether it be digging gold from the earth or pearls from the ocean. It is utterly inconsistent with the order of affairs. It does not appear to belong to our creation. No two faces look, no two leaves look alike in nature. The commands of to our creation. No two faces look, no two leaves look alike in nature. The commands of God appear to order that we must diversify, change and adapt the means of prosperity that other people do. He thought the production of cotton alone had been our ruin, and he maintained that if these ten Southern States paid better attention to manufactures and mechanicism they never could have been subdued. The Southern States were crushed by the whole power of the world. Those they were feeding with their cotton came against them. The rate of interest in Liverpool was two per cent. per annum. In his own city, Charleston, when he left in August last, it was two and a half per cent. a month, and very difficult to be obper cent. a month, and very difficult to be ob-tained at that. He told them in England that they had taught him a lesson, and when he went home he would endeavor to persuade his people to grow less cotton and manufacture as much as they could. Two or three days ago when he saw drays going through the streets loaded with cotton marked Graniteville, he was inspired with hope, and many of them he trusted would yet see the day when our cotton manufactures will compete in the markets of manufactures will compete in the markets of the world with those of France, Germany and

Mr. Lawton then gave an interesting account of a visit to the great spool thread manfactory of Mr. Costs, in Scotland. Their buildings, he said, occupy an immense space. The proprietors are gentlemen of refinement and taste. He was conducted through every department of that immense manufacturing.

The proprietors are gentlemen of refinement and taste. He was conducted through every department of that immense manufacturing establishment. They have the most beautiful machinery, perfect engines, and every possible means of turning the thread. They don't use raw cotton. They buy their yarns chiefly in Bolton and Manchester. I observed to Mr. Coats that his yarn had been familiar to me from my early life.

To show the immense wealth accum nulated by these people, Mr. Lawton said they employ sixteen hundred hands in one day. I was conducted through Mr. Coats' magnificent green house and his hot-house, where they had plants from every portion of God's earth. Among others was the glorious oil palm itto. They were enabled to spend upon these hot-houses and green-houses £30,000 sterling, or $200,000. I suggested to Mr. Coats that the time is coming when the South must engage largely in manufactures, and told him if he would come to Columbia and use some of his capital we would trariely him with tha hast coatton ha wanted. Our people must diversify their fabor if they desire to have a position among the nations of the earth; organize companies and establied cotton manufactories, and they will bring wealth, social position, and also bring us back to what old South Carolin: was once.

Mr. Baxter, of Newberry, in response to the invitation of the Convention, gave some interesting information of the workings of the Newberry Emigration Society. He paid a high compliment to General John A. Wagener, and said he was instrumental in turning the attention of these people to the matter of emigration. They were already impressed with the necessity of an increased amount of labor, but it was found whelly impracticable to avail themselves of any arrangement made by the State through General Wagener, as head of it was found wholly impracticable to avail themselves of any arrangement made by the State through General Wagener, as head of the Emigration Bureau. A number of gentlemen contributed a small amount of money, to be drawn out as each subscriber desired labor. The money has been turned over numerous times in bringing forward between two and three hundred laborers. Each member of the society pays in fifty dollars, but can take more ahares if he desires. The money is used to bring the laborers, who in time return it to the society. They had now in their employ an educated German, Mr. Briggeman, who speaks four or five languages, and has procured facilities they never had before. The society has a credit, as an emigration society, in New York. It is known that laborers coming to us will be cared for on the way and when they reach here, and cared for until they get employment. So that the agents in New York feel no hesitation in sending any laborers to the society, because they know they will not return with complaints of ill-usage or want of attention. The society is doing a good work and making a reputation. They had now or attention. The society is doing a good work and making a reputation. They had now orders on file from General Beauregard, desiring laborers to be sent to him through our society, to the State of Fexas. They have more orders to the State of Fexas. They have more orders than they can fill.

This society is a nucleus around which might cluster hindred and auxiliary societies to carry out a great purpose. He did not know that this body could turn its attention to a more important subject than that of procuring an increased supply of labor. He did not care where it came from, whether from Germany, Great Britain, New York, or Massachusetts, so that it comes here as labor, bringing the capital and muscle.

br. E. B. Turnipseed, of Newbarry, con-curred in the statements of his colleague, and added that he had a number of Germans on his place. They were good farmers, easy to learn, and assimilate with our people, kind to animals, and it was just the labor to suit their country. It had gone abroat that negroes only are adapted to our country. This was a great mistake. The Germans stood the heat as well, if not better, than the negro.

Mr. Boinest said he introduced the first tor-

Mr. Boinest said he introduced the lifst for-eign labor into Newberry District after the war. He became satisfied, after two or three years, that the laborers he was then working would not succeed, and a little more than a twelve month ago he wrote to a friend—a mis-sionary among the emigrants at Castle Gar-den—to secure him a good German family for den—to secure him a good German tamby for his place. This was the beginning of the emi-gration society. He divided his farm into three sections, and put two sections in charge of colored laborers respectively. The third he gave to the Germans. His experience was that the white laborer was at work every day, doing everything or anything he was asked or re-quired to do. The negro contended that he everything or anything he was assed or required to do. The negro contended that he had nothing to do not immediately connected with the working or gathering of the crop. This was the beginning, and the result has been the formation of the Newberry Society, to which he had given twelve months' hard work in bringing it to its present condition. The Newberry Society has a credit at the Labor Exchange, Castle Garden, in New York, which it would be difficult for any other organization to secure. The agent there said he would entertain no application from the Southern country, unless it came endorsed through the Emigration Society of Newberry. It was with no little trouble we secured this endorsement. They were very careful. They had sent some to Florids and made a grand isilure. Emigrants sent there and elsewhere were badly treated, and

Mr. President—On yesterday I must confess of Mr. President—On yesterday I must confess that I somewhat despaired of the success of this movement. It seemed to me that the discussions indulged in were somewhat wide of the mark. But the indications and developments this morning have cheered me, and induced the belief that this enterprise will be prosecuted with success. I am one, sir, who have confidence in our people and faith in the future. Wisely adapting ourselves to the new order of things and availing ourselves of the elements at our command, I believe it possible to place the prosperity of our State upon a basis more firm and durable than that upon which it formerly rested. But this, sir, cannot be accomplished by the putting forth of abtures propositions or the simple adoption of resolutions. More than the elequence of words resolutions. More than the eloquence of words we need the eloquence of action; more than the wealth of intellect we need the wealth that springs from material development. Mr. Pres springs from material development. Mr. President, to obtain success in this movement, and to help on the industrial regeneration of the State, we must adopt practical instrumentalities. Sir, the human mind is so constituted as to require something real, something tangible, to arouse its enthusiasm, to quicken its energies. Hence my proposition at once to creat your buildings, and at once to may gather, and from which vitality may flow.

If we expect to succeed we must raise the funds necessary, and go at once to work.

neight of a lotty independence, we must go through temples resounding with the hum of machinery, and pass on through fields white with cotton and waving with grain.

Gentlemen of the Convention, in the providence of God the political cross has been laid upon our shoulders, and we rest under the cetracism of our own country. But God has given us great natural advantages—has given us a genial climate and a teeming soil. Bravely working and wisely using the elements within our grasp, we can mould them to the enduring interests of the State, and make the future of South Carolina prosperous as her past is rich in the noble devotion of her men and the matchless spirit of her women.

Mr. President, I hope the Convention will entertain the resolutions.

Mr. A. A. Gilbert, of Sumter, introduced the following resolution for the purpose, he said, of drawing out expressions from the planting interest here upon a matter which very vital-concerns our agriculture :

Mr. Thomas hoped the resolution would not be adopted. He regarded it as a matter which should be left to the discretion of every gen-tleman himself. He moved to lay the resolu-

The motion to lay on the table was withdrawn, and after discussion, participated in by Messrs. Gaillard, Gilbert, Baxter and Holloway, the motion to lay on the table was renewed by Mr. Baxter, and decided in the afmative.

I can only say to you that, in the discharge of the duties of that office with which you have complimented me, I shall exert all the energies I possess, and I sincerely trust our efforts will meet with your approval.

On motion of Mr. DeLoach, the Convention adjourned sine die. ny sincere thanks for the cordial courtesy with GRANT AND HIS FRIENDS.

Dana makes a forcible application thus: Suppose that it had been discovered and proved, during the hunt after Andrew Johnson, that he had appointed persons to office who had bestowed on him valuable gifts, would not the impeachment trial have had a different result?

Several men who wrote to the President in favor of the appointment of friends have been astonished at receiving unsolicited commissions themselves. The mystery was solved by the fact that they closed their letters by saying, "I have the honor to subscribe myself," &c. it being the rule to give all subscribers some thing. The Washington Chronicle says : "One of the most interesting sights visible occasionally in our streets is the miniature 'establishment' of Miss Nellie Grant, daughter of the President, consisting of a pretty little basket barouche drawn by a diminutive pair of Shet land ponies. On the front seat, Miss Nellie, in a becoming spring suit, holds the whip and reins gracefully, while, perched behind, a colored footman, sitting bolt upright with folded arms, surveys the curious gazers on either side of the street with dignified satisfaction."

The correspondents say that the President is becoming crusty, suspicious, morose and chronically unhappy. His body and mind are both suffering. He finds the presidency too large for him. That is the whole matter. His health is not good. He has had to shut up shop six times already in as many weeks. He is losing flesh. Visitors complain of his brusqueness, and many of them of his temper. Every day at 4 o'clock he runs off for a ride and a smoke, and he has wholly stopped visitors of nights. These he spends with his household in the private family rooms of the Executive mansion. The few admitted there speak of him as giving the appearance of being thoroughly fagged out by each day's round of work. He smokes incessantly, and sits for hours with his little girl's hand in hi; own, not saying a word, and never rallying except when his wife makes it a point that he shall. Mrs. Grant is universally regarded as a sweet, plain, dutiful woman, whose head hasn't been a bit turned. She is widely respected, and can certainly do more with her husband than any one else can. There is a legion of discontented Republicans in Washington. Cameron openly says: Without taking my advice the President and Secretary of State succeeded in giving a constitutional drunkard a good mission, and a constitutional thief a consulate, besides crediting Pennsylvania with a Secretary of the Navy who has succeeded within six weeks in ridding the party of every working man's vote. The only minister we have (except a negro, who cannot be a voter in our State,) is a man set down for Russia who ought to be sent to the Lobos Islands vice guano removed." Schurz says to and of the President: "Your selections are unknown men who do not represent the party or conduce to its strength in the State of Missouri." And to the Senate: "I hope the men who have dared to impeach one President will not fluch before the face of another." Ross, Fowler and Brownlow have openly broke with the President, and Sprague another." Ross, Fowler and Brownlow have openly broke with the President, and Sprague says: "He is utterly tied up by the politicians; I have no hope of him; I have departed from him." Mr. Edmunds takes pains to soub trom him." Mr. Edmunds takes pains to soub the President on every occasion and General Butler said when Grant caved on the tenureof-office question: "The President doesn't know anything more about law than an old hen, and any one can wind him around his BURNHAM and Dr. H. BAER.

May 1 mayl-jel-jyl FERNELIUS CALLS DISEASE AN fection of the body, contrary to nature; a pertu-bation of its habit; a derangement of its courses. What disease is, sometimes cludes human intelligen:e, but some diseases are known—their origin, action and even their antidotes. Whoever has d covered an actual remedy for one disease, has done something for his race. Doctor Ayer has done more, cure several dangerous disorders. We rarely speak on medical subjects, preferring to leave them to effects as are seen in our midst, on affections of the lungs by AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, on scrofulous complaints by his saRSAPARILLA, and on the several complaints that they cure by AYER'S PILLS, should not be ignored.—Keokuk (Iowa) Journal. May 1

May 1 WHAT IS A TONIC?-BEAR THIS IN mind—that although a tonic is, to a certain extent, a stimulant—a stimulant, unmodified by any medi HOSTETIER'S STOMACH BITTERS there is a stimulating element of the purest grade manufact tured in this or any other country. Every flery and corrosive oil or acid which contaminates the ordinary liquors of commerce, is expelled from the rye spirit which forms the alcoholic basis of the PIT-TERs, by careful and repeated rectification. The juices of the valuable roots, barks and herbs, infused into this wholesome product of the finest grain, still further modily its nature; so that it becomes, in fact a simple diffusive agent, minus all the heady and brain exciting properties which belong, more or less, to all liquors in a raw state. It is merely the sate and harmless vehicle which renders the meditheir active power, and diffusing them through the
