The History of a Life.

Day dawned: Within a curtained room, Filled to faintness with perfume, A lady lay, at point of doom.

Day closed: A child had seen the light; But icr the lady, far and bright, bhe rested in undreaming night.

Spring rose: The lady's grave was green; And near it afterwards was seen A gentle boy, with thoughtful mien.

Years fiel: He wore a manly face. And strugg ed in the world's rough race, And won, at least, a lofty place.

And then-he died! Behold before ye, Humanity's poor sum and story, Life—death—and a l that is of glory.
