CHARLESTON.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 10, 1899.

Governor Scott and the State Taxes.

The letter of Governor Scott, which we printed yesterday, does not meet the one great complaint made by the taxpayers of the State. This is, that while the constitution and the tax law require that all property shall be taxed at its value, the State Board of Equalization have, in whole counties, doubled and trebled the taxable value of the property.

There is a difference in the value of land in the different counties; but neither this nor what Governor Scott calls "the caprice and irregularity" of the official assessors can justify a proceeding which compels the honest taxpayer to pay $3000 or $2000 where of right he should pay but $1000.

Governor Scott may be of opinion that the property of the State should be worth $206,000,000. This, at one time, was our opinion; but sufficient allowance had not been made for depreciation of values, and we are willing to accept the sworn statements of our citizens as showing the selling price, the real value, of their property, at the time the returns were made.

No prating about expenses, or the price of State bonds, or the credit of the State, can make the conduct of the State Board any other than tyrannical, infamous and unjust.

There is no objection made to the system of taxation. We are willing and ready to pay taxes in proportion to our property so that every county may bear its proper share of the burden of taxation.

Governor Scott is unwise, to say the least, in threatening so many terrible things, "if factious attempts be made to embarrass the government, by the interposition of the courts."

When we know that under the law all real and personal property must be taxed "at its true value in money," and that our property has been valued for taxation at far above its true value in money, we may apply to the courts for relief, without heeding the idle menaces of a man who might perform more if he threatened less.

Real Estate.

Real, the newly appointed Assessor of Internal Revenue for Edgefield County, and whom the henchman of Old John Brown, writes a long letter to the Edgefield Advertiser, giving what purports to be a correct account of his obnoxious career, including big conceptions with the crazy fanatic of Ossawatimie.

"Now we wish it to be distinctly understood that the Edgefield Advertiser, after thirty odd years of usefulness and respectability, has no idea of so far forgetting itself as to devote its columns to the autobiography of carpe-baggers. We publish Real's communication because we consider it a curiosity, admirable in egotism, matchless in impudence, disgusting in that nasty rondo-tomade whose surface is humanity and progress, but whose undercurrent is place and plunder."

The exquisite poem, "At Arlington," which we print in another part of to-day's paper, fully sustains the reputation of its gifted author, whose war-time lyrics have been so widely read and admired.
