NEWS SUMMARY.

-Gold closed in New York yesterday weak -Cotton closed steady at the noon quotations, with sales of 1200 bales. .

-In Liverpool yesterday cotton closed a shade firmer, with uplands at 12fd; Orleans at 18a18id The Baltimore Smagerfest is $6000 out,

-Tue Dixon (Illinois) Democrat says that a tombstone in the cemetery in that city bears simply the suggestive epitaph : "Gone up." -The "Fortbildangsverein Humboldt" is the name of an association in New York. If its life is as long as its name, it will be immor-but a great deal of fun and lager in.

-Only one man in Florida returned an income for 1868 of over $10,000, and but seven had over $5000. The total number taxed is less than two hundred.

-The New York World says: "Rev. Dr William S. Piummer, the eminent theological professor in the South Carolina Seminary for Ministers, is supplying this summer the pulpit of the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, of Brooklyn. Moreover, Dr. Plummer is empowered to receive aid for the honored institution with which he is so honorably identified, and the friends of the South and of non-political preaching can do no better than assist this sterling and modest school of divinity."

Dispatches received at Chattanoogs from Mr. D. N. Stanton, president of the Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad, now in Boston, state that directors for the Southern division of the Cincinnati and Chattanooga Bailroad, comprising some of the best men of New York and Boston, were elected on last Thursday. Merchants of New York and Boston have subscribed $2,000,000 to the road. Mr. Stanton, who is president of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad, was also chosen President of the Southern division of the Cincinnati

-Judge Lowell, of Massachusetts, has jus made a decision of much importance in relation to the validity of contracts with the citisent of Houthern States. In 1862 the bark-Lamplighter was destroyed by the Alabama. Among her owners were four citizens of so-called "rebei" States. Mr. Payne, the master, colsected the meurance and paid it to the owner living in Ma sachusetts, holding that those I iving in the "re bel" States had no title to parcicipate. One of the four owners, who hved in South Carolina, recently brought suit against Mr. Payne's administrators, and now recovers by the decision of the court.

Great preparations are afoot for the com ing exposition of textile fabries at Cincinnati. About sixty cases and packages, generally large, are already in the rooms, and advices are received of snipments having been made plebiscite, the same authority whose deputron almost all important points of the West ties compose the Corps Legislatif. And and South. Among the Southern manufactories already represented are the following : Manufacturing Company, S. C.; Batesville Mills, S. C.; D. A. Jewell, Jewell's Mills, Georgia; E. T. Clement, Nashville, Tenee ; Lehman, Durr & Co., agents, Montgomery, Alabama; Bowling Green Manufacturing Company, of Kentucky; Houston Factory, Georgia; Macon Manufacturing Company, Georgis; Barnet, Micou & Co., Talinsuee, Alabama; Augusta Factory, Augusta, Georgis; Eagle and Phonix Mills, Columbus, Georgia;

Fontency Mills, Antroch, Georgia. -Making champagne is now a regular business in California. It is done, according to a correspondent who has seen the process, as follows: "The crude wine is run into a tank which holds three thou and bottles, and then sweetened with eighty-two pounds of sugar. The succeeding processes are nice and com plicated, and some of them I believe are kept secret from the public. The solution of the great problem of childhood-how ch mpagne corks get in when they are so much larger at the bottom than at the top-appears in an ingenious machine, which compresses them one-half aud then drives them in in a twinkling. The newly-filled bottles are laid in frames, with the necks sloping downward. Here they remain for some weeks, but are shaken by hand every day. The pressure on a bottle is ninety pounds to the square inch, or equal to that of six atmospheres. About one in ten bursts. The men who siske them wear masks of wire to protect their faces. The superintendent has a long scar on his right hand, where he was once out by the glass of an exploding bottle. After the wine has worked uself clear, the cork is removed for an instant to let the sediment fly out; then it is repeaced, the bottle is labelled, wrapped and cased by Chinamen, and it is ready for the

-The returned officers of the United States steamer Guerriere, who were recently up tho Parana River in Brazil, are loud in their exsions of sympathy for Lopez. 'According to their account he still carries on an energetic defensive warfare against vistly superior numbers, means of warfare, and resources; and that he has never shown a sign of trepidation ner a thought of surrender. Brazil has lost tens of thousands of men, and involved herselt in a vast debt; her ally, the Argentine Republic, has withdrawn from the expensive and apparen ly endless fight; and although denounced as a cruel tyrant and mension of iniquity, Lovez has had at his serwice, first and last, the entire resources of his people, and no attempt at revolt from his rule has been made, and no betrayal has been made of his cause. Even according to Brazilian accounts, he has I tely inflicted a serious blow on their army, and is still unamb-dued, defiant and active. He is described by the Paraguayans themselves as a man of great courage, resources and energy, who rules by virtue of his qualities as a leader, not by mere desposite exercise of brute force. The Paraguayans are all devoted to him, and will sacrifloe wha ever is necessary to insure their independence of the hated Brazilians. The officers boon; but now, since it has been morthink Lope z wi I drive the Brazilians out of the closely studied, many contend that with its country unless he is badly whipped and broken many ambiguities it may turn out to be of

THE DAILY NEWS. English language. counselling its study. first, ondly, as possessing a high spiritual power. Latin and Greek he looked upon only as a good foundation for a proper study of English. Mr. Jacob Pierson thought our own language had been neglected. "We must find time to develope the beauties of English literature. What we teach most frequently is not the English and the Latin language and literature, nor even English grammar in any scientific designation of the term; but a strange compound in which nouns, pronouns. verbs, adjectives, and participles are blended in fantastic form and fashion. It is one eternal treadmill of parse, parse, parse, the gender of this, declension of that and quantity of something else. The princip: underlying the rules are not sought for. The delicate niceties and intricacies of thought are all unnoticed." The committee on the subject of a uniform system of pronouncing the classical languages, reported in favor of the coutinental method. Mr. James E. Munson, the veteran phonographer, read a paper on the relation of phonetics to philosophy, claiming among the special uses of his system, the teaching of the blind to read; communication of the exact sounds of foreign languages; and the telegraphic communication of messages in any language, through all countries, without translation. Rev. Milton Maury defended the study of the classics; and Professor Comfort favored the establishment of a philological university. The association adjourned yesterday to meet in Rochester, New York, in Ju.y,

CHARLESTON.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 3, 1869.

The Crisis in France.

The cry of "an imminent crisis" in Eu rope has so often reached us since the day of Sadowa, that the cry of "wolf!" from that quarter begins to be regarded with much of the old proverbial incredulity. There are, of course, on so broad a field of heterogeneous and often conflicting interests as is represented by the map of Europe, always many disputes, now between monarch and people, now between Church and State, and again between rival contending nationalities. The philosopher and the statesman find much in these affairs to interest and instruct; but whenever they venture to give their speculations the form of prophecy they are apt to find themselves quite as much at fault as the rest of us. The imperial Sphinx of France seems destined ever to baffle the conjectures and confound the auguries of the shrewdest. Contrary to the anticipations of the world, he kept aloof from the Austro-Prussian war of 1866. So again the year after, though yielding to his eager marshals so far as to make a great show of warlike preparation in the Luxembourg affair, the difficulty was amicably adjusted, and Napoleon once more gained a bloodless victory. Still, during all this time, and before that time, and since, notwithstanding all these smiles of fortune, Napoleon has not felt secure on his throne. The opposition to his rule in France was neither small nor contemptible. However wide their divergence in all else, the several elements of this opposition-Legitimist, Orleanist, Liberal and Red Republican-all might at any time unite against the Emperor's Government, and taking advantage of some temporary tumult-and such need never be wanting with the mercurial Parisian populaceprecipitate a revolution. True, the government professedly holds its title from the plebiscite, the same authority whose depubeing a true reflex of popular sentiment, the ballot boxes have always been too closely watched by imperial bayonets, with view to securing a good government majority in the law-giving body. In spite, however, of all the genius and tact of Napoleon, in spite of a brilliant and successful reign and a large, obedient and well drilled army, the talent and patriotism of the opposition have made themselves more and more felt with each succeeding year.

From time to time there has been a pretence of yielding to their demands for an increase of liberty, as when in November, 1860, he granted the right of address, or in January, 1867, the Emperor announced that he was shout to set the crown upon the edifice of liberty which he had reared. Liberty of the press, privilege of public meeting, right of interpellation, &c., these were a few of the glittering generalities that were yielded-a mere sop to the democratic French Cerberus-not the light of liberty, but a mere ignis fatuus It was known at the time, that the decree of January 19, 1867, just referred to, had been made in opposition to the entire ministry. This, so far, looked well for the Emperor's, good in tentions; but when Rouher and his reac tionary colleagues were retained in the Cabnet and nothing ever came of the new privileges that had been ushered in with so great a flourish of trumpets, the discontent increased and was fanned into flame by heavy taxation, onerous conscription and manipulated ballot boxes, until on the occasion of the recent popular elections there were signs of a disaffection so wide spread as to cause serious alarm. That the outbreaks were not mere sensational news paper rumors, as some would have us be lieve, is best proved from the effect these events have had on his Imperial Majesty himself. Although he had heretofore uni formly opposed Parliamentary Government (in the English sense) and ministerial re sponsibility, he has now yielded the latter at least of these two; the ministers have sent in their resignation, and a new Cabi net, more liberal and more in conformity with the will of the people, is to be constructed. It is unfortunate that this act of political liberality was accompanied by the prorogation of the Corps Legislatif, looking much as if the Emperor were afraid to trust that body without well trained minis terial leaders, such as perhaps may turn up in the next session. The Liberals are furious at this duplicity, as they term it The Emperor's message proposing the new privileges was at first hailed as an unmixed world should think that any message or proclamation of his is the result of clamor or dissatisfaction on the part of the French people. Hear him: "The modifications I "have determined to propose are the natu-"ral development of those which have suc-"cessively been made in the institutions of "the Empire; besides, they will leave in-"tact the prerogatives which the people "explicitly confided to me, and which are "the essential conditions of a power which "is the safeguard of order and society." Which, being paraphrased, will read somewhat as follows: "You can have a respon-"sible ministry, or anything else you like, "always provided, however, that I hold a "tight rein; for, after all, the people who "by their voices elected me to rule over the destinies of France, hold me responsible, "and not you; and surely, gentlemen, you "would not have me grow oblivious of my "sacred obligations."

"enlargement of popular liberties of Jan

Thus the matter stands. But how long it will thus stand no man can say. The circumstances of the case, in many respects, are parallel to those that immediately preceded the fall of Louis Philippe, with this important difference, however, that, for the present, all is quiet in Paris Whatever uoise those insubordinate "left" and "cen-"tre" gentlemen, undismayed by Schneider, may make on the floor of the Lower Chamber, the canaille, whose tumult is the voice of revolution, have as yet made no c-rtain sign
