The Charleston News.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1869. NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold at New York yesterday closed at 30 1/2.

—The New York cotton market closed quiet and heavy; sales 3200 bales at 26c.

—At Liverpool cotton was tending down; uplands 12 1/2d., Orleans 12 1/2d.; sales 8000 bales.

—Dark brown hair rules highest in the Paris market.

—A theatre is about to be erected in Petersburg, Virginia.

—Over one million dollars worth of improvements are going up in Nashville at present.

—James Fisk, Jr., began life as a menialer employee, and served a long time in "stirring up the animals."

—The late President Pierce left no family. His wife died several years ago, and their two children died before her.

—At the funeral of the late General Escobedo, in Spain, the emblems of masonry were for the first time exhibited in that country.

—Vermont is the only State that was unrepresented at the session of the United States Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows at San Francisco.

—Hon. John D. Phelan, of Montgomery, Ala., has accepted the position of professor of law at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

—A gentleman has bought a farm of about forty thousand acres of land in Virginia, where he proposes to plant and cultivate a German colony.

—The Hon. Jefferson Davis still remains at Barrum's Hotel, Baltimore. His brother came on from Mississippi about a week ago, and is with him.

—The bootblacks of Cleveland have petitioned the Mayor for protection against the police, in a document setting forth that they are all "sons of patriots."

—It is reported to be the opinion of the officials in Washington that the Hornet was run into Wilmington because those managing the expedition could not agree to proceed.

—Mrs. Norton proposes that the women of the State of New York hold an election in November, at the same time with the men, to show that they could go through the motions without disgrace to themselves.

—The celebrated trotting horse Dexter made a half mile in one minute and four seconds on Prospect Park course, near New York, last Saturday afternoon. This time, it is needless to say, has never been equalled.

—Nearly two thousand passengers, consisting mostly of emigrants, arrived at New York Sunday, in the British steamers Idaho, France and Britannia, the first two from Liverpool and the Britannia from Glasgow.

—It costs 4,000,000 francs to run the French Government a year. The reformers propose to cut down this expense three-fourths by disestablishing the church, repudiating princely endowments, and discontinuing sinecures.

—At Columbus, Ga., they are making cotton blankets, apparently very warm and comfortable, with a good body and nap on each side, handsomely bordered in colors. They are much cheaper than woolen blankets, and less porous.

fourth accident that has happened to it on the Newfoundland side. In the middle of August, however, a fault in the same cable was discovered at a short distance from Valencia Bay, Ireland. These fractures have not yet been mended, as the rough weather has prevented the sailing of the repair steamer. The 1865 cable, which was picked up in mid ocean, where it had been lost in the attempt to lay it, has continued to work uninterrupted, while the 1866 has suffered from five mishaps. The reason assigned for this immunity is, that the 1865 cable was laid in a carefully surveyed channel, while the 1866 cable was laid over rough sunken rocks, and during unfavorable weather. Had the lost cable of 1865 not been recovered, the communication between England and America would have been interrupted for a considerable period of time on five occasions. Surplus cables are stored both at Heart's Content and Valencia, so as to repair any fault as soon as possible.

Father Hyacinthe and the Ecumenical Council.

The world blames America for its conceit, but, really, the world is itself to blame. There is no malcontent against the order of the old world that does not present himself, either in person or by letter, as a candidate for our suffrages. The orators of Europe, the Kossuths, the Brights, the Favres, harangue us with speeches and pamphlets. The Radicals of Europe, the Victor Hugos, the Louis Blancs of France, the J. S. Mills, the Tom Hugheses, the Goldwin Smiths of England, in a word, the revolutionists and illuminati of the world, quote the example, repeat the doctrines, and solicit the favor of "The Great Republic."

And now, scarcely has the information arrived of a ferment in the Catholic councils of Europe, of a protest and defection in Germany and France, when it is announced that one of the leaders of that movement, the famous Parisian preacher Father Hyacinthe, has already embarked (on Saturday, October 9,) for this country, and further, that he will remain for several months among us.

Americans have long been familiar with the reputation of Father Hyacinthe, as perhaps the leading Catholic preacher of France. Many of us have seen him, as in his austere garb the barefooted Carmelite has ascended the pulpit of Notre Dame, and have often since recalled his singular beauty of person and the melodious passion of his speech. And curiosity will naturally be awakened by the question, why has he renounced the habit of his order, protested against the Ecumenical Council, deserted the crowded cathedral and the great world-city where he exerted so magical an influence; and why is he now about to make an appeal to the American public? or if not intending to appeal, why does he come here?

In consequence of the revolutionary movements of 1848 and the aggressions of the Kingdom of Italy upon the territory and institutions of the Papacy, the relations of the Church to the State have engaged the attention of the Catholic statesmen of Europe. In response to the famous maxim of Cavour, "A free Church in a free State," and to the demand of the Abbe Passaglia, "Give us the separation of the sceptre from the keys," the Pope promulgated the Encyclical Letter of December 8, 1864, attached to which was a schedule or syllabus, denouncing eighty "damnable heresies" current in this age.

These heresies were grouped into ten chapters, as follows: 1. Pantheism, Naturalism; 2. Moderate Rationalism; 3. Indifference, Latitudinarianism; 4. Socialism, Communism, Secret Societies, Bible Societies, Liberal Clerical Associations; 5. Errors Concerning the Church and her Rights; 6. Errors Concerning Civil Society in itself and in its Relation to the Church; 7. Errors Concerning Natural and Christian Ethics; 8. Errors Concerning Christian Marriage; 9. Errors Concerning the Temporal Power of the Roman Pontiff; 10. Errors Relating to Modern Liberalism. In these specifications Pius IX takes ground as high and uncompromising as that of Innocent VIII. He claims jurisdiction over kings and princes, as one from whom monarchs hold their thrones and through whom subjects are bound to allegiance; he denies that any other religion than the faith and worship of Rome is to be allowed, and pronounces the wanted liberty of conscience that now prevails a crime against society; he condemns the freedom of the press, civil marriages, secular education in a word, whatever is known as "modern progress"—finding in the tenth or thirteenth century a nobler ideal of Christianity than that which now prevails. This document, than which nothing can be more bold, wild, it is apprehended, be the text of the Ecumenical Council. It has already been framed into laws by Father Schroder, of Bavaria, who maintains that "the State is excluded from the whole realm of moral matters." And it is sustained by the whole ultramontane press.

The fear of its adoption by the Council, and of its introducing serious complications into the politics and church-life of the Catholic States, has led to the protest of the faculty of Munich, (under the inspiration of the Bavarian Government,) of the nineteen German Bishops at Fulda, of the Baden "Society of Catholics," of the "Liberal Catholics" of Treves, and finally to the remonstrant letters of M. de Montalembert and of Father Hyacinthe.

The language of the Carmelite preacher may, as it is surmised, subject him to excommunication; for it assumes the tone of reprimand and even of menace. He speaks of contemplated encroachments upon the constitution, the teachings and the spirit of the church; of an "impious and insane divorce sought to be accomplished between the church and the society of the XIX century;" and even goes so far as to threaten that "if the august assembly should not have more liberty in its deliberations than it has already had in its preparation; if, in a word, it should be deprived of the character essential to an Ecumenical Council, then it may happen that, within a period more or less brief, we may witness the assembling of another council representing 'really the universal church, not the silence of the one nor the opposition of the others.'"

While the threat may exercise slight influence over the Prince Bishop of the Eternal City, or over the august assembly convened by his summons, it can scarcely fail to change materially the relations heretofore subsisting between the writer of the letter and the Roman Catholic Church.

Already the ultramontane journals reprobate the audacity of the illustrious recusant, who has "cast the holy" to be upon the highways of modern ideas." The Univers describes him as "a worthless fruit that has for a long time been detached from the tree." M. Vuillef hopes that he will soon acknowledge, "if not the error of his heart, at least that of his vanity." The Pays sorrowfully predicts a downfall as tragical as that of Lamennais. While on the other hand, the Liberal journals approve and applaud, and the Temps, in particular, triumphantly exclaims that "since the middle 'ages, no such language has been heard in 'the French Church.'" And this letter, which is now "grasped in full by the Papal Nuncio to Rome, and laid before the Supreme Pontiff. It is a curious circumstance, that while the excitement was at its height, the writer should have left the scene of former triumph and present conflict, and have embarked for America. Does he intend to appeal to the members of the cis-Atlantic Catholic Church? or does he intend to escape from controversy and to remain in retirement until his protest has been acted upon by the General Council? The one supposition may be as likely as the other; for Father Hyacinthe is still a member and an official of the Roman Catholic Church.

Certainly differences of opinion in regard to subjects which are not yet authoritatively decided upon, do not necessitate a schism from that body. The subjects to be discussed are of momentous importance, and the results of the discussion may well awaken a grave solicitude among the monarchs and ecclesiastical communities of the Old World, where Church and State are interwoven throughout the social texture. If the programme of the syllabus is followed, the decrees of the Council will embrace every subject which connects Christianity with modern civilization. And, according to our notions on this side of the water, a free ventilation of opinions on the part of distinguished men of various parties and nationalities, may afford grounds for coming to wise and salutary conclusions, and for promoting a more substantial unity than could otherwise be attained.
