THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1870.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Gold closed in New York yesterday at 151 3/4. Cotton was heavy and lower; sales 2100 bales at 23 1/2 cents.

In Liverpool Cotton was quoted at 11 1/2 and 11 3/4 for uplands, with sales of 12,000 bales.

Changes are said to be likely to occur in the Spanish Cabinet, in view of the prolongation of the Provisional Government.

Mr. A. E. Marshall, secretary of the Georgia State Senate, and for many years a photographic reporter for the press of that State, died of paralysis at his residence in Atlanta on Monday morning.

The Memphis Appeal has been sold under a decree of the Chancery Court. The highest bid was that of Hamilton Pike, son of Albert Pike.

The collector of New Orleans, Casey, has invented a schedule, by which he proposes to reduce the expense of his customhouse nearly $100,000.

The Cuban Junta at New York calls attention to the fact that while the Spaniards say they have killed, wounded and captured 41,706 insurgents, their agents persist in representing the rebellion as a small affair.

The widow of a man murdered by Pawnee in Nebraska appeals to the Indian Department at Washington for $25,000 damages, which she asks may be assessed upon the tribe and taken from their appropriation.

On New Year's Day, in Rome, the Pope received the French generals and soldiers. Subsequently the French minister received the French and Papal officers and soldiers, French bishops and other functionaries.

The Emperor Napoleon recently paid a visit to ex-Queen Isabella of Spain. She related to him that proposals had been made to her by the Duke De Montpensier since she had been in France, and said she had refused to accede to them, solely to please him, the Emperor.

General Prim, it is said, has telegraphed to Florence for a decisive "yes" or "no" in the matter of the candidature of the Duke of Genoa for the throne of Spain, the position of Victor Emmanuel having become doubtful and perplexing through the many stories circulated concerning it.

Richard H. Scott, a merchant tailor of Petersburg, Virginia, committed suicide on Saturday. During the war he served in the Confederacy, and was severely wounded. A ball which entered his body could not be extracted, and it so preyed upon his mind that he determined to end his existence by suicide.

Henry Ward Beecher has entered again directly into the editorial field, and assumes the leadership in the new religious paper at New York, the Christian Union. It is to be Evangelical, but not sectarian, and as Mr. Beecher says, "seek to interpret the Bible rather as a rule of life than as a book of doctrines."

A colored woman, named Harriet Miller, died the other day in Philadelphia, leaving $100,000 worth of property. She was originally a slave in South Carolina, and derived her fortune from a rich planter named Purvis, who married her out of gratitude because she warned him of a conspiracy of his slaves against his life.

Upon what meat do these, our Cæsars feed, That they have grown so great? Church and State.

The Ecumenical Council, which renews its sessions this morning in Rome, assembles under peculiar circumstances, and will address itself to a delicate and arduous work. Its object is nothing less than to adjust the relations of Catholicism with society and with government.

The complaint of the New York Herald that "not much was expected from it, and less has come from it than was looked for," betrays a misapprehension both in regard to the variety of interests it embraces, and to the extent of its aims. To form and guide the opinions of men in all those matters where religious belief and modern progress touch each other; to secure order and harmony in the ecclesiastical movements of the hierarchy for centuries to come; to perfect the submission of the laity to the priesthood and to the triple crown, in whatever belongs to the sphere of conscience—so comprehensive and imperial a policy cannot be completed in a day.

It is a remarkable circumstance that there is so little of the political in the programme of the Council. The governments of Europe, although not without disquiet in contemplation, so imposing and powerful a demonstration, have had no just occasion to interfere with the freedom of its conferences. If protests against the doctrine of Papal infallibility have been heard from Paris and Munich, and from some of the Polish and Austrian bishops, this doctrine, if carefully conditioned, as it no doubt will be, can scarcely be made the ground of a national protest.

It is not in itself political. Much less so is that of the bodily assumption of the Virgin. And so in regard to the affairs proposed for the discussion of the Council. Of these the French Emperor, in the yellow book, remarks that "they are, as a rule, beyond the competence of the political powers of our days."

Hence he has resolved not to interfere in its deliberations, by sending an accredited ambassador. While the Pope, on his part, has abstained from inviting "the Christian princes," to send representatives in this "meeting of princes."

Thus the line of distinction between Church and State has been drawn, as never before in the history of any general Council. The attitude of the European powers is clearly exhibited in the conclusion of Napoleon's paragraph. He says: "However, we have no intention of remaining indifferent to acts which might exercise a great influence upon the Catholic populations of all countries. His Majesty's government would find, in case of necessity, in the laws of the country, the powers requisite to maintain the public rights free from deterioration. We have, besides, too much confidence in the prudence of the prelates—in whose hands are placed the interests of Catholicity, not to believe that they will know how to take account of the necessities of the period in which we live."

On the one hand the prelates claim the right of deciding spiritual and ecclesiastical questions. On the other hand, the princes claim the right of guarding the integrity of their governments, and the political liberty of their national churches. There need be no collision between the two parties. One who will observe the antecedents and constituents of the Council without partiality or prejudice, may forecast the general character of its proceedings. It is strictly an ecclesiastical body. It will neither promulge the divine right of Kings nor of Democracies. It will not anathematize the Czar, nor canonize the Emperor. It will influence the Catholic governments, in common with others, by the agency of institutions and opinions. It will decide cases of casuistry—in regard to marriage, education, church property, family and the like. It will give authoritative sanction and shape to the protests against the new forms of what is esteemed to be error, which have appeared since the Council of Trent. It will be likely to establish a new order or orders to commemorate the year of the great convocation. In other words, its political influence will be indirect, and so much the more potent on that account. It will operate upon governments by operating upon society and upon men. This is the arena where the conflict with the Council will take place.

The Columbia Phoenix states authoritatively, that Judge Orr, is not, and will not be, a candidate for the vacant seat on the Supreme Bench of this State, and adds: "The members of the bar and the public generally, on his circuit, are anxious that he should retain his present position on his circuit, and Judge Orr's personal wish is 'to remain on the Circuit bench.'"
