TUESDAY, MARCH 15, 1870.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed in New York, yesterday, unsettled at bids of 12.

—Cotton closed firmer and quiet, with sales of 3000 bales at 21c.

—In Liverpool, cotton closed steady at 10 1/2d. Sales 12,000 bales.

—Mr. Seward says that specie payment will be resumed in ninety days.

—The reported death of James Robinson, the bare-back rider, is denied.

—Models for the new fifty-cent notes have been completed. We don't think they will improve upon the model of the old silver half-dollar.

—A lunatic who brings a claim of $25,000,000 against the California Bank of San Francisco, has undertaken to enforce payment by breaking the bank windows. He has broken them once, and announces that he intends to keep on until his claim is paid.

—General Sherman writes to General Sheridan that the winter campaign against the Plains was undertaken at the request of General Sully and those in the Interior Department, and for them now to shift the blame is unfair.

—Intelligence from Caracas to February 25th asserts that the disturbances now extend through the entire republic of Venezuela, and that the government of Monagas is in a critical condition. President Monagas, with 1000 soldiers, is reported to have marched to Coro to attack General Blanco.

—A bill has been introduced in the New York Assembly defining the rights of married men, and equalizing the rights of man and wife.

—The bill provides that a husband having children by his wife shall have an estate for life in property left by her. He shall not be liable for debts contracted by his wife before marriage, nor for debts contracted by her without his consent, except for the support of herself and children. He may sell his real estate without the consent of his wife, and at his death the wife shall be entitled only to dower in his real estate.

—While Senator Revels is comparing himself with true dignity in the United States Senate, or delivering lectures in Baltimore, his countrymen in Africa are denouncing each other with true cannibal relish. In a small African hamlet, called Young Town, a native chief, named Yellow, captured two women belonging to the Eweka tribe, and in honor of this martial achievement a "grand party" was held.

On the morning after the capture, the younger of the two captives, a girl about fourteen years of age, was killed, cooked, and eaten by this monster, Yellow, and his savage confederates. The other captive was in iron, and was to form the subject of a future feast. Strange as it may seem, while these occurrences were taking place, one of her Majesty's gunboats was lying not far distant from the town, with the "sassy ensign" flying at the peak.

At Wydah, the seaport capital of Dahomey's kingdom, a European, who was engaged in trade there, has recently been subjected to most cruel punishment; the poor fellow was stripped of his singlet and trousers; the sleeves of the former were rolled up above his elbows, and his trousers above his knees. He was then taken to a stake and exposed to the fierce burning rays of a mid-day tropical sun for several hours; and many more such horrible atrocities are perpetrated upon inoffensive people by these "men and brothers" at the fountain head of the African race.

—John La Mountain, the famous aeronaut, died at South Bend, Indiana, on the 14th of February. La Mountain's life was full of daring adventures and of incidents, which were frequently more interesting than agreeable. He was among the most fearless aeronauts in this or any country, and pursued his chosen profession with a higher object than to merely make money. A pet theory of La Mountain was that there was a current in the atmosphere corresponding with the Gulf Stream in the ocean, and flowing steadily from west to east. He was ambitious to be the first to cross the Atlantic, taking advantage of this current, and built the famous balloon "Atlantic" for this purpose, and tested his theory by a land voyage first; his party were in the air over nine hours, and while passing over Lake Ontario a tornado seized upon his craft, and it was left a wreck in the woods in Jefferson County, New York. The last serious adventure of La Mountain occurred in Michigan, and probably hastened his death. An impatient crowd cast him off before he was ready, without an orercoat or instruments, and the valve-rope of several feet above the basket. He shot like a rocket up into a heavy cloud of mist and sleet, which froze the valve-rope fast. He climbed, with frost-bitten fingers, up the net-work, and tore the balloon with his teeth. The opening extended so far that the balloon collapsed, discharged its gas, and fell with great velocity from a height of nearly two miles. The aeronaut was picked up benumbed and insensible, though not dangerously injured. His age was 41.

—The gibbet and the hangman have just rid the world of a brace of hardened wretches in Pennsylvania. On Wednesday, Albert Von Domburg and Gottlieb Bohner, alias Dutch Charley, suffered the extreme penalty of the law for the murder of Peter Peightal, a farmer of Huntingdon, Pa., his wife, and a little boy who lived with them. After their conviction, Bohner's principal study was how to escape death on the gallows; he feigned sleep on one occasion, and while the guard's back was turned, sprang upon him with the force and ferocity of a tiger, and with a screw taken from his bedstead, knocked him momentarily senseless; the desperate man then rushed through the corridor to a cot on which the deputy sheriff usually slept, and where a loaded pistol was kept, but before securing the murderous weapon, the guard, recovering his wits, a desperate fight ensued with varying success, until the arrival of a prisoner on the scene, who, with a large iron poker beat the murderer over the head until, from sheer exhaustion, he succumbed, and was taken back to his cell. When led out for execution, both prisoners ascended the scaffold with a firm tread, but when the platform was reached Bodeberg was noticed to quiver considerably. Religious exercises were gone through with, occupying a quarter of an hour. In the meantime their feet had been bound, and both men placed on the drop. At this moment Bodeberg turned to his companion, and imploringly asked: "Am I not innocent?" "No," replied the other; "we were both in the house; both killed, both guilty, both die together." "Oh, God," said the other, "you can say that at the last moment? You ain't human." The ropes were then placed about their necks, when Bodeberg cried out, "O Lord beyond the skies, take my soul into Thy Kingdom." The black caps were pulled over their faces, and at 12.40 P. M. the upright was jerked out, the trap started, and the murderers fell about three feet, dying without a struggle.

—The Macon Journal is the title of a new and lively daily which last week made its appearance in the ranks of the Georgia press. It is a decidedly handsome sheet, made up with evident care and taste, and edited with marked vigor. Best of all, it is published, like THE NEWS, at a subscription price which everybody can afford to pay—six dollars a year. The proprietors, Messrs. Neville, Harrison & Ricks, we are confident, will win the success which they so richly deserve.

—The Income Tax. The income tax is an outrageous imposition. It relieves the rich and oppresses the poor. According to the present programme of taxation, the merchant who makes and spends from ten to twenty thousand dollars a year may pay nothing to the government. He may contend that he makes no "gains." But his poor bookkeeper, who supports a family of 10 children on two thousand dollars a year, is required to pay fifty dollars on his "income." The big fly breaks through the web in which the little fly is taken captive.

Now it is manifest that nothing can be more unfair in legislation. Just governments live upon the superfluous means of the people. They do not levy upon "the children's bread." Yet this is what our precious Congress is doing now. One is treated as a criminal who lives by the brain and by the pen. Grant has great respect for capital; he would create a monied aristocracy if he could; and he is encouraged by the precedents of the party to which he belongs. Under the present regime the bondholder prospers, his employee starves.

What makes this discrimination more odious is the fact that it is unconstitutional. The tax was imposed in 1862. By an act of March, 1867, it was limited in its duration to the year ending December 31, 1869. To extend this odious and oppressive tax beyond the close of the last year, Mr. Schenck has introduced into the House of Representatives a sort of snap-legislation which is worthy of the occasion and of the man. This gentleman, who is chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, knows very well that a continued income tax cannot be laid save by a new bill, and that, presented in this form, the measure is certain of defeat. He has accordingly endeavored to accomplish this end by the introduction of a joint resolution. Its design is, as he explains, to declare "the meaning of the laws now in force to be that incomes accruing during 'the year 1870 are subject to the tax.'" That a tax cannot be extended in this way is apparent to the simplest comprehension, and that, should the resolution pass, it will be universally resisted, is not less clear.

Indeed, under such provocation, the question may naturally be asked whether that tax ever was lawful. According to that somewhat obsolete instrument, known as the Constitution of the United States, all direct taxes upon the people are to be apportioned to the numbers of the population. The right of direct taxation extends, according to Story, to the real estate and to the person of the citizen solely. It is restricted to the land tax and the poll tax. Hence an inquisitorial investigation into the private affairs of the citizen, as a ground of taxation, is nothing more or less than public oppression and robbery.

Had not the necessities of the country been so urgent, we doubt not that the right of the government to tax the incomes of its citizens would have long since been subjected to the supervision of the courts. But the laws have been silent amid the clash of arms. The government has been allowed the benefit of a constitutional doubt, and of the love and fear which its perils or its prowess have inspired. But if this iniquitous and cowardly measure of Mr. Schenck is pressed, there will certainly be opposition to it in the country at large. The state of the finances do not any longer require the maintenance of unpopular and illegal exactions, least of all, of one that spoils not the estate but the family whose means of living it ruthlessly bears away. We wonder that, in the beginning the tax was not made more equitable. A citizen sustaining a large family with his income should never have been taxed as heavily as one having a small family or no family at all. But it is not worth our while to urge this consideration now. The time when the tax expires by its own limitation has arrived. And a joint resolution must not and cannot galvanize it into a new lease of life.

Congress and the States. Events are furnishing ample vindication of the wisdom of those at the South who so long, so gallantly, and, alas! so vainly fought the battle of States' Rights against Federal consolidation. Measures now before Congress point to the most startling innovations upon the previously received theory of our government. The Washington Chronicle, the organ of those who are the real masters of Congress, throws off the mask entirely, and marks out the path the revolutionists intend to march:

"Reconstruction (it says), strictly so called, may speedily become a thing of the past. But another great practical question will take its place, and already looms up in the near future. Indeed, it is already before Congress in the various bills and resolutions which have been presented upon the Tennessee question. As this is a subject which no longer has to deal with the admission of States from outside the pale, but rather with the mode of keeping them to their pledges within the Union, another world should be substituted to express the 'appropriate legislation' which our amended constitution empowers Congress to enact in behalf of the vested rights of all American citizens, of whatever shade or color."

And again, the same paper boldly declares: "That the recalcitrant State of Tennessee will be, and properly may be, subjected to a process equivalent to a second reconstruction, we do not for a moment doubt. It will be for other States to determine by their future conduct whether the same process shall or shall not be applied to them. If it be true that the perjury of the rebels who have obtained full control in Tennessee is the most damning instance of its kind, it is no less true that other States, especially Kentucky, seem inclined to repeat the experiment. The time when Congress may properly pause to question its own constitutional right to guarantee to every State a 'republican form of government' in its fullest sense, and subject to all the limitations of the Reconstruction acts, has passed, and it only remains to march with firm tread toward the vindication of every right of every citizen."

These paragraphs undoubtedly exhibit the real sentiment of the dominant faction in Congress. That faction has long ago resolved to disregard the voice of the people. The States of the North, as well as Maryland, Kentucky and Tennessee, must look for the bayonet and the fetters whenever they go counter to the Radical will. The only question remaining is, will they stand this new-fangled tyranny?
