

A Regret.

I blame not that your courage failed, That prudence over love prevailed; It seemed that we must walk together Rough ways through wild and stormy weather, And you must have smooth paths to tread, And skies all cloudless overhead.

Not loveless and unsweet my days, I still nor miss some need of praise; Only we been with me that had known The grace they lack, and thou hadst grown. O weak but pure and tender heart! To something nobler than thou art.

Ab! better had we both been laid To rest forever, ere the shade Of that cold worldliness had made Division worse than death, and bade Our souls be parted evermore, Still strangers to the heavenly shore.
