Every wedding, says the proverb, Makes another, soon or late; Never yet was any marriage Entered in the book of fate, But the names were also written Of the patient pair that wait.

Blessings, then, upon the morning
When my friends, with fondest look,
By the solemn rite's permission,
To himself his mistress took,
And the destinies recorded
Other two within their book.

While the priest fulfilled his office, Still the ground the lovers eyed, And the parents and the kinamen Aimed their glances at the bride; But the groomsmen eyed the virgins Who were waiting at her side.

Three there were that stood beside her-One was dark and one was fair,
But nor dark nor fair the other,
Save her Arab eyes and hair:
Netther dark nor fair I call her,
Yet she was the fairest there.

While her groomsman—shall I own it?
Yes, to thee, and only thee—
Gazed upon this dark-eyed malden,
Who was fairest of the three.
Thus he thought—"How blest the bridal Where the bride was such as she!"

Thus I mused upon the adage,
Till my wisdom was perplexed,
And I wondered, as the churchman
Dweit upon his holy text,

The Rev. Dr. Teasdale, corresponding secretary, read the report of the Sunday-School Board, located at Memphis, Tennessee.

The board ably set forth the advantages of its location, and the missionary work which it has and may accomplish, and give a clear detailed account of its public operations. It it has and may accomplish, and give a clear detailed account of its public operations. It pleads earnestly for co-operation on the part of State and district organizations in the Southern States. The report says:

"As to co-operation with Northern societies in our Sunday-School work, we would simply remark, that if it were possible to secure such co-operation on terms of perfect equality, and if it could be done with proper respect to our people, and with due honor of the Master, then we should say with all our hearts, let it be done. But we seriously apprehend that any attempt at organic union for the present would be found to be not only importane and impolitic, but would seriously retard the work of real union by exhuming the seeds of peace before the germs shall have become fairly imbedded in the soil. The acknowledged want of homogeneity between the people North and South will render the work of pacification slow. Meanwhile, let us follow the reiterated conviction of the convention, that while fraternization with Northern Baptists is desirable, and will be sought, separate action in genble, and will be sought, separate action in gen-ral denominational enterprises is the policy of true peace and surest progress."

The report gives a detailed account of the labors of its missionaries, shows the need of its ald, and earnestly appeals for help to do its work. In reference to the ability of Southern Baptists to do their own work, the report says:

"That we have talent in our midst to furnish the most acceptable Sunday-School literature, is obvious from the fact that Northern socieis obvious from the fact that Northern societies find it to their interest to employ Southern writers, at high rates, as contributors to their periodicals, and as authors of their books. One, at least, of the regular contributors to 'Kind Words,' is thus employed by the Baptist Publication Society of Philadelphia; and especial pains are taken to insert her full name and the place of her residence, in connection with every article which they obtain from her talented pen. A Southern man has been made associate editor of one of the papers of that society; and now it is announced that he is solicited to act as one of the editors of another of its Sunday-School periodicals. This appreciation of Southern talent on the part of a great Northern society, is certainly very complimention of Southern talent on the part of a great Northern society, is certainly very complimentary to the intellectual capacity of our people, and shows how well able we are to take care of ourselves in the matter of a Sunday-School literature for our children. Once for all, therefore, we say that if we can command the general patronage of our Southern people, we will give them a Sunday-School paper, at once the most excellent and attractive, which shall be alike free from offensive sectionalism and unsound theology, and which shall be in every respect adapted to the peculiar civilization of the South, and the Scriptural piety of our people."

On motion of Dr. Reynolds, of South Carolina, the report was referred to appropriate committees.

By unanimous consent, E. D. Jones, Esq., of St. Louis, was invited to address the conven-Mr. Jones said he would not have consented Mr. Jones said he would not have consented to occupy the time of the convention, but for the fact that he wanted to give his hand to his brethren here on the great work in which they are engaged. He earnestly argued that the Sunday school work is necessary to the promotion of all of the other enterprises of the denomination. We want a more intelligent enthusiasm on this subject among pastors and the old heads of the churches. He wanted the churches to come to take the same interest in providing for the Sunday school as for pastor's salary and other church expenses. He wanted the churches, as such, go generally and fully into the work. He gave statistics to show that we are not fully aroused, and earnestly urged upon pastors and all others to go nome to establish new schools and make old ones more efficient. He believed in Baptist Sunday schools, and that we should be aggressive in bringing into the schools the children of the land.

Communications from the Baptist Churches in Augusta, Ga., New Orleans, La., and Richmond, Ya., inviting the convention to hold its next session in those cities, were referred to next session in those cities, the proper committee.

On motion of Dr. Jeter, of Virginia, Dr. Boyce, of South Carolina, was requested to address the convention on the interests of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, locadress the convention on the interests of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, located at Greenville, S. C.

Dr. Boyce said that there could be no doubt as to the importance of theological education, and the only question could be as to the manner in which this was given. He called attention to the fact that the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary was different in its organization from all others, and it was not fair to make objections to this seminary which lie against others. He appealed to the work of the young men the seminary had sent all over the land as the best refutation of the objections that were once made to theological seminaries, and was willing that the institution which he represents should be tried by the manner in which these students have done their work. He clearly showed the peculiar reorganization of the seminary. On the one hand, the standard is as high as that of any similar school on the continent, and no diplomas are given unless that high standard is reached; on the other hand, it makes ample provision for the mere Engilsh student to become so taught in the word and doctrine of the Scriptures as to be able at all times to state and defend them.

He ably and eloquently argued that many of our noblest preachers and ablest defenders of the faith had never enjoyed the advantages of classic culture, and that this proved that where men cannot attain the highest standard, they should at least learn all they can of the English Scripture. He exhibited the financial condition of the school—stating that for the last year the professors had been able (by close economy) to live, and could do so another session if the subscribers would pay up their obligations promptly.

He showed that this seminary, with very sion if the subscribers would pay up their ou-ligations promptly.

He showed that this seminary, with very small means of helping the needy, had a larger number of students, than any other seminary number of students, that any in the land. Nearly all of the money given for the support of students for the past two sessions had come from noble men at the North. sions had come from noble men at the North. He could have two hundred students at Greenville in the next two years if he had the money to sustain them. The Northern seminaries support all students who apply. If we could do anything like this our halls would be full. He showed that the boarding expenses were only nine dollars per month for each student; so a young man could go there from this section and return for less than to most colleges. He made an earnest appeal to the denomina-From the Louisville Courier-Journal we get He made an earnest appeal to the denomina-tion for money to sustain these young men.

Dr. Graves rose to a "point of order," which was that he should be one of fifty to give two hundred dollars each to this object.

The chair ruled the "point" well taken, and Dr. Boyce said that he would be most happy to have many such "points of order."

He closed with an eloquent appeal in behalf of this great work. Dr. Graves renewed his pledge, and a number of other responses were made.

LIVERPOOL, April 22.—The demand for sea is land has continued active throughout the week, the business being chiefly in Florida cotton, which has been freely offered at relatively cheap prices. The returns include, 14 bales Fiji sea island taken for export at 50d per lb. The cotton was of great length of staple and of beautiful preparation, and equal in weight to 20 sea island. MESSES. JACOB LIPPMAN & BRO., Savannah, Ga.:

Gents—I have before me your esteemed letter of the 14th instant, containing various documents relative to your "German Bitters." After a careful examination I must confess that your Bitters is really what you represent it to be, an old German recipe of Dr. Mitcherlich, of Berlin, Prussia.
It will no doubt be excellent for Dyspepsia, General Debility and Nervous Diseases, and it is a good preventive of Chilis and Fevers. I find it to be the most delightful and pleasant stomachic.

I remain, yours truly,

MESSES. JACOB LIPPMAN & BRO., Druggists, Savannah, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have introduced your Great German Bitters here to my customers and friends, and I find better sale for them than any I have ever kept before. Those who have tried them approve of them very highly, and I do not hesitate in saying that they are far superior in value to any other Bitters now in use.

Yours, respectfully.

Yours, respectfully, W. KIRKLAND. (Signed)
