A private letter from Lexington relates two remarkable incidents that occurred the day General Lee died." A large portrait of the General, which was hanging in the parlor of his house, fell to the floor, breaking the heavy frame surrounding it. A large photograph of him has the photograph gallery in the town, fell about the same time, and broke into pieces. There was, apparently, no disturbing cause or force to produce these actidents. No one was in the parlor when the portrait fell but Mrs Lee, who was sitting quietly in the room.

The Pall Mall Gazette contends that the business of telegraphing has declined in England since the postoffice department has taken the charge of transmitting messages. The estimates of the chancellor of the exchequer assumed $600,-000 as the profits of the first year of the underreas the returns, it is said, now show that the carnings will not pay the expenses. The English postudice department has encountered great trouble in operating the country lines, which are the most expensive and least remune-rative, and the deficit in the accounts may have arisen from this cause. Specificania in New-York city recently received It in Germany a collection of twenty of the photog ap uc heads of the leading commanders of the Prussian army now in France. The photographs were confined to the heads, and no indication was given of the profession, position, or names of the parties represented. The whole of them were submitted to a noted phrenologist and physiognomist for his judgment upon themno hint being given him concerning them. After studying them for some time, he said, in reply to an inquiry, that not one of these persons was possessed of a military head or expression !

-There is now in course of construction at Woolwich, in the royal gun factories, a piece of ordnance which bids fair to surpass in range and calibre all previous attempts in modern artillery. The thirty-five ton gun will be capable of firing a the weighing seven hundred pounds, solid projectile weighing seven hundred pounds, and a shall of even greater weight. The ordinary cartridge will contain eighty pounds of powder, while the battering charge will amount to one hundred and twenty pounds. It will be rifled with nine grooves, the twist of the rifle increasing from nil at the breach to as much as one in forty calibres at the muzzle, so that a shot when leaving the gun will revolve once in 460 inches. The velocity of the projectile is calculated to be not less than 1200 feet per second, while the range affair, while France shows plainly enough will probably be nine or ten thousand yards, or between five or six miles.

-Paris advices of the 14th contain the follow ing: Meat is scarce, and no individual is allowed to buy more than a quarter of a bound per day. The health of the city is good. Smallpox, however, is prevalent. Out of 1483 deaths last week, 211 w-re from smallpox, 50 from phenmonta, 51 from typhus fever, 56 from bronchitis, and 59 from diarrhoes. Furty-seven of the old commissioners we been set adrift. The principal papers are published in pamphlet form every two days. The gates of Paris are opened at daylight and closed at 6 P. M. Omnibusses are not allowed to run after half-past 10 P. M. Paris secretly prays for peace, but the people are afraid to say so aloud. There is no lack of pluck and patience, but the situation is terribly distressing, and there is an enormous amount of poverty and suffering. It is thought soup kitchens will be organized to deal out rations to all who have certificates. -A correspondent writes that a peculiar scene was enacted at the surrender of Toul. Instead of the bitter feeling on the one side and the exultation on the other usually aroused on such occasions, both parties, when the gate was opened, seemed to meet like the best friends. The French garrison were delighted to be out of it, and the German bestagers no less so to find their work at an end. There being many Alsatians among the garrison, besiegers and besieged jat once entered into corresation, shared the contents of their gasks with each other, and but for the stringent rules asparating prisoner from conqueror, would and reorganized her shattered legions. doubless have made a night of it. evastate the fair face of the Gem of the Antilles; the elements seem to conspire to utterly ruin lovely but unhappy Cuba. Details of the terrible hurricane last week give an appalling picture of the loss of life and property which it entailed, especially at Matanzas, where nearly 400 houses were swept away and 482 dead bodies have been found and buried. The pecuniary damage is estimated at $5,000,000. Besides the dead, there are many missing, and reports that there must have been at least 2000 swept seaward. Among the most orrible features of the calamity was the uprooting and sweeping away of a cemetery and the scattering of the corpses through the adjacent country. The San Juan and Yumuri valleys were wept clean of every living thing and the people carried away amid the wrecks of their dwellings A piano was picked up at sea fourteen leagues rom Matanzas, and many bodies were seen and some persons saved by vessels at sea. The bridge of Baiten, a magnificent structure over San Juan not far from its mouth, costing more than $100 .-000, was destroyed. The bridge over the Yumuri. leading to Versailles, was also washed away. 'Th San Louis bridge, near the Havana Railroad station, still stands, though much damaged. A pas senger train arrived at the depot of the Havana and Matanzas Railroad just before the overflow took place. The depot, engine, train, passengers and employees, all disppeared in the flood. Thousands of horses, cattle and other animals perished, and the damage to shipping is very great. In Cardenas, and vicinity, the loss is nearly $2,000,-000, and the smaller villages have nearly all the houses wrecked. The Captain-General has authorized a government loan of 800,000 escridos, equal to $400,000, to help those who are left entirely destitute.

WE beg that the correspondents of THE News throughout the State, as well as the County Chairmen, will forward to this office, as soon as possible, their reports of the result of the elections.

Great Germany and Little Britain. The timid and vacillating policy of the British Cabinet is fast depriving England of every vestige of the influence she once exerted apon the public polity of Europe. It may not have been in her power to prevent the war apon which France was bent, nor may she have been able to guarantee to Germany that peaceful unity and homogeneity which King William fights to secure. There were, however, two courses which remained open. One was to place herself diplomatically by the side of Prussia, and give to her every support save that armed help which Germany does not require. This would have effectually prevented the interference of any third power, and, while drawing ber closer to a nation with which she has so many family alliances and traditional friendships, would have given England a claim upon Germany which might have been turned to good account when Turkey was again In danger, and the Muscovite legions pressed further forward in the passes of British India. The other course was for England to enter into an alliance with France against Germany, a proceeding which, however calamitous in its results, would have been at least straightforward and manly, and which would have given to the Cabinet of St. James's the certainty of the assistance of France, at all times, in developing the Franco-British policy in the East. Between these two courses England has halted half-way. The consequence is that Germany is irritated, and repudiates English meddling in German that the cold-blooded neutrality of England is neither forgiven nor forgotten. Both belligerents have come to the conclusion that England cannot be kicked into a fight, and Germany at all events, does not care a fig for any 1 stest or remonstrance that England m: choose to make. And why should Germany allow a halfenemy or very lukewarm friend to rob her of the substantial fruits of the genius of her generals and the valor of her sons? Germany has poured out the blood of her children like water in order that she might accomplish that German unity against which France has intrigued and fought. Woerth and Sedan settled that question. Germany may work out her destiny without the interference of France or any other European power. But more than this is needful. The policy of Germany is peace, and there cannot be a lasting peace unless France is so tied down and fettered that she cannot go to war for ten or twenty years to come. Were Germany to withdraw her forces across the Rhine and conclude a treaty of peace, there would be another and more desperate war clasp hands in good faith with the mighty cheir long the class hands in good faith with the mighty their long the class hands in good faith with the mighty cheir long the class hands in good faith with the mighty people who have annihilated their armies, pountry were immediately undertaken, and civil matched unchested through the fairest proans and officers the latter released on parole, were seen driving about and inspecting the position which had so recently menaced them.

Not alone do the passions of men continue to thom." The French may be ready to make peace, but only in order that they may reopen the struggle with some chance of succeeding. It would then be a waste of life and treasuresfor the Germans to leave their work half done. They have France almost at their mercy, and it is not unnatural that they should, as France would have done, exact the payment of their debt to the very last farthing. France is only suffering the pangs which she hoped to inflict upon Prussia, and peace at any price is about all that she can expect. The cession of Alsace and Lorraine, and an indemnity for the expenses of the war, are no more than Germany may properly demand, and if she refrain from seizing a portion of the conquered territory, it will be for reasons of public policy, and not because to retain what she has won would be unwarranted by the condition of affairs, or by the precedents of French and English history. It is useless to kick against the pricks, and France may as well admit at once that she now occupies the second place, and that Germany, wisely and liberally roverned, must remain, what she now is, he first power in the world-first in arms and first in progress and enlightened civilization. When the French reach this point, peace will be possible.

England will doubtless plead and pray for a suspension of hostilities, but unless she is eady to fight for her opinions-and there is no sign of the will or the power to do thather entreaties with either of the contending powers will have no weight whatever.

The Way Scott Won.

In Orangeburg County there were many more votes, in a number of the ballot-boxes, than the poll lists called for. The box from Avinger's was handsomely stuffed, and at Jamison's the polis were opened two hours later than the lawful hour, and closed a half hour too soon.

Governor. President. Governor. At Blackville, in Barnwell County, the Election Commissioners were, all three of them, candidates for office. They refused to allow any one to witness the counting of the vote, and did their work with closed doors.

In Sumter a colored man who desired to vote the Reform ticket, at the Stateburg precinct, was beset by a mob of Scott's bullies, who so abused him that he fled from the polis without casting his ballot. At Concord Township, in the same county, ninety persons voted who were not sworn, and, at this place and at Mayesville, persons were voted who were under age and had not resided for twelve months in the State. These facts are taken from the Sumter

In Newberry, according to the Herald, far more votes were cast than there are voters. The voting population is 3600, and about 400 persons did not vote at all, yet 4549 votes were deposited-thirteen hundred of them clearly illegal. Hundreds of minors voted in the county. The colored men were told by their leaders to vote as often as they could. A colored Reformer was assaulted and beaten, and was told by a second gang of negroes whom he met that they had voted three times for Scott. Notice has been given that the election will be protested.

These, and a host of similar facts already published, show that the Scott Radicals have "counted themselves in," as they threat-Richland the Radical majority is 2118. In ened to do. The only surprising thing is Colleton the Radical majority is 2285. In that, while they were about it, they did not make Governor Scott's majority a round hundred thousand.

Never Give Up the Ship.

We commend the following resolutions, printed in the Newberry Herald, to the serious attention of the honest citizens of the State: Resolved. That it is the sense of this meeting that the efforts of the good citizens of this county, to remedy the inefficiency and corrup tion now prevailing, should not cease not that the present political campaign has closed.

Resolved, That a meeting of the citizens of this county be called on the 1st Monday in November next, at Newberry, C. H., to consider the best means for advancing the public welfare, and what line of policy will be most consistent for us to adopt in the future.

There is sound sense and practical wisdom in the proposal of the citizens of Newberry to continue an organized opposition to ignorance and corruption. We have already made an excellent impression upon both whites and blacks, and what we need now is to stand to the principles of the Union Reform party, to oppose the Scott clique, foot by foot, and inch by inch, in all their oppressive and injurious acts, and to fight it out on this line until we have accomplished the redemption and regeneration of the State. Then, and not before, will the Reform party have completed its glorious work.

Some interesting information concerning the proposed disarmament of the militia, the fate of Joe Crews. General Dennis's cool suggestions, and the armory shooting affair, will be found in our Columbia letter, printed this morning.
