The Aged Stranger.

AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR.

BY BRET HARTE.

"I was with Grant"-the stranger said: Said the farmer: "Say no more, ut rest thee here at my cottage porch, For thy feet are weary and sore."

"I was with Grant"-the stranger said; Said the farmer: "Nay, no more 1 prithee sit at my frugal board, And eat of my humble store.

"How fares my boy-my soldier boy, Of the old Ninth Army Corps? I warrant he bore him gallantly In the smoke and the battle's roar !"

"I knew him not," said the aged man, "And, as I remarked before, I was with Grant"—"Nay, nay, I know," Said the farmer, "Say no more;

"He fell in battle I see, alas! Taou'dst smooth these tidings o'er— Nav, speak the truth, whatever it be, Though it rend my bosom's core.

"How fell he—with his face to the foe, Upholding the flag he bore? Ol say not test my boy disgraced. The uniform that he wore!"

"I cannot tell," said the aged man,
"And should have remarked, before,
That I was with Grant—In llinots—
Some three years before the war,"

Then the farmer spake him never a word, But beat with his fist full sore That aged man, who had worked for Grant Some three years before the war.

> CHAPTER I. A FATHFUL OATASTROPHE.

A FATEFUL ORISINOTES.

A wild storm was raging upon the Mediterranean Sea, near the close of a dreary November day, and sky and waters were black with the gloom of the sudden and furious tempest, before which a small sailing vessel was soud ding under bare poles. Her build and rigging proclaimed her Sardinian. She was The Gull, claimed her Sardinian. She was The Captain Varino, master, on her way from Cagliari to Palermo.

She had on board two seamen, and two pas-

These passengers were Englishmen who had procured passage on The Gult to Palermo, whence they intended to embark by steamer

Whence they introduce to the state of the Marseilles, the following day.

While the captain and his assistants were attending to their duties, and expressing apprehensions as to their safety, the two Englishmen stood apart, leaning against the low bulwarks, and surveying the wild scene around

These men were both young, apparently of the same age, about three and twenty, but evidently they were not of the same station in life.

One, the more striking of the two, was aris-tocratic in his bearing, tall, slender and hand-some, with a frank, smiling mouth, a pair of barless blue eyes, set under a wide and massive forehead, and tawny hair blowing back from his face. Noble, generous and kindhearted, he had an adventurous disposition and a dauntless courage.

He was Guy Tressilian, the only son and heir of Sir Arthur Tressilian, Baronet, of Tressilian Court, England. His companion presented a remarkable re-semblance to him, being also tall and slender and fair, with tawny hair and moustache, but and fair, with tawny and and noistactic, one he had not the frank smile, the bright, fearless look, or the Joyous spirit that characterized young Tressillan. Young as he was, he had seen much of the dark side of life, and his experiences had been such as to develop in him some of the worst qualities of his nature.

some of the worst qualities of his nature.

He was Jasper Lowder, Guy Tressilian's hired travelling companion and bosom friend. The meeting and connection of the two had a touch of romance. Young Tressilian had spent four years in a German university, whence he had been graduated with konor. On leaving the university, in obecience to his father's written command, he had undertaken a tour of the countries inclosing the Mediterranean Sea. in company with one of his late a tour of the countries inclosing the Mediter-ranean Sea, in company with one of his late tutors. through the streets of Baden, he had been asthrough the streets of basel, he had over as-saulted by a trio of his own countrymen, all more or less intoxicated. It was apparent that they took him for another, and intended to wreak vengeance upon him. Without allow-ing him to speak, they forced him to detend himself. Guy was getting the worst of the conflict, when a stranger came running to his assistance, and in a few moments the two had put the ruffians to flight. This stranger who came so opportunely to Guy's assistance was Jasper Lowder. His resemblance to Young Tressilian awakened in the latter a romantic interest. He questioned Lowder, learned that he was poor and alone in the world, and took him with him to his hotel. the world, and took him with him to his note. Believing that the similarity of features indicated a sinilarity of tastes and natures, he engaged Lowder as his travelling companion, and the past year they had spent together more like brothers than like employer and emmore like brothers than like employer and employed.

"This storm is a regular Levanter," said
Lowder, clinging with both hands to the bulwarks. "Do you think the craft will stand it, Tressilian ?"

Tressilian?"
"Oh, yes," answered young Tressilian, wiping the salt spray from his face. "The captain knows the Sicilian coast perfectly. In two aours, or less, we shall be in the bay of Palermo. In three hours we shall be domicided in the best rooms of the hotel Trinacria, with the best supper which Messer Ragusa can furnish. And to-morrow, at noon," he added, "we shall embark for Marsellles in a Messageries stea mer."

"And from Marseilles you will proceed to England and to Tressilian Court." said Lowder, with some bitterness. "And I—what is to become of me? I have had a year of unalloyed happiness, and now comes back the drudgery, the hopeless toil, the anxieties of the wretched old life. You picked me up at Baden, a poor king to rain a living by teaching English, and the same destiny is open to Tressillan turned his handsome face upon his companion in surprise and affectionate re-

"Jasper!" he exclaimed, "you talk strange ly. Do you suppose I have called you triend and brother so long, and loved you so well, to lose you now? A strange expression passed over Jasper

"No, I have no ties," he said huskily, "and you will go home with me?"
"What will your father say to my coming?"
demanded Lowdor. "He will think your generosity Quixotic. He will dismiss from his the hired companion who dares to re-

I have done so, Jasper. I have never yet loved any woman. And yesterday I received my father's summons to come home. He has recalled me after five years of absence. I know the wish that lies nearest his heart. He wants me to return and marry Blanche. I shrink from the proposed marriage, I dread going home. And I dread offending my dear lather, whom I love better than any woman. It is hard, Jasper, to revolt against the hopes and phans of a kind and generous father, whose very love for me causes him to urge on this marriage!"

"Is it?" said Lowder dryly, and with a strange smile full of sneering bitterness. "My experience has been widely different from yours. Tresslian. Did I ever tell you of my father?"

"No. Licols it for granted that he is dead."

"No. I took it for granted that he is dead."
"Perhaps he is. I den't know," said Lowder, with a reckless laugh, "But if he is living, he is a scoundrel. Don't start, Tressilian, at my undiliat speech. Walt till you hear my story. "Dead!" he said, shrilly, "Dead! And he would have done so much for me it he had lived! And his father and the young girl he was to have nearried will wait in vain for his coming! His place at Tressilian Court is empty. Who can fill it?"

"I have no proofs of it. All I positively know is this. My mother was of humble station, pretty, with blue eyes and an apple-blossom face, and tender, appealing ways. She was the daughter of a widow, residing at Brighton. The widow my grandmother, kept. was the daughter of a widow, resading at Brighton. The widow, my grandmother, kept a lodging-house, and my lather, a gay, dashing young fellow, came to lodge with her. As might have been expected, he fell in love with his landlady's daughter. He offered the young girl marriage, on condition that the union should be kept secret until his affairs brightened and he chose to divulge it. The young girl loved him. Her mother was ambitious and penurious. The result was the lover had his way, and married the daughter of his handlady quietly, aimost secrelly. Then he took his bride to London, to cheap and obscure lodgings, where, a year later, I was born.

The wind for a moment drowned his voice. As it presently fulled, he resumed reckiessly, and with passionate bitterness:

"For years my mother and I lived in those stuffy, obscure foldgings, until her bloom had faded, and she had grown thin and wan and nervous. My father visited us at stated seasons once or twice a week, but he never brought any of his tamily to call upon us. I doubt if his aristocratic relatives even suspected the existence of the faded wife and son of whom he was secretly ashamed. I have good reason to believe that he had fine lodgings at the West End, where he was supposed to be a bachelor, and that he went taits fashionable society. While my poor mother and I lived obsecurely. He was a profighte and a road; but he had an air of fashion that awakened my bojish admiration, and aroased my mother's affectionate pride in him. She was always pleading to be introduced to his relatives, and to have her son publicly acknowledged. But my father always put her off, saying that he was not yet ready. Worn out and despathing, my mother died when I was ten years old."

Again the second to hum as though some demon echoed his words.

The match dropped from his fingers into the water. For a little while he crouched on the water stones in stillence, battling it may be with the better and nobler instincts of his nature.

At last, with sudden and abrupt stendthiness, his hands stole into the broast pocket of Tressilian and drew out his private note-book, a list had an air of fashion that awakened my bojish admiration, and aroased my mother's affection to the broast pocket of Tressilian and drew out his private note-book, a list had an air of fashion that awakened my bojish admiration, and aroased my mother's affection and all lived observed the seanong his own wet garments. "I remained at the old lodgings with our single old servan a month or more, my lather visiting me several times, and expressing anxlety as to what he should do with me. A week after my mother's death he told me that his brother was dead. A month later, his father was killed by being thrown from his horse. My father came into riches and honors by these deaths. "However, I stand no chance of ever receiving Justice at his "What is your father's name, Jasper !" asked Tressilian.

Lowder's face darkened. He bit his lips savagely.

"What I have told you about myself I learned from my own observation, or from chance words of my parents and grandmother. My mother's maiden name was Jeanette Lowder. At our London lodgings, my tather were the name of 1 owder. I don't know his real name, out I should know his face anywhere, although I have not seen him in thirteen years. My mother was actually married, Tressitan, but I never heard my father's name. The clergyman who married my mother was dead; the witnesses also. When my grandmother was dying she tried to tell me the story. She had put it of too long. All that I could understand of her mumbings was the name of Dev renx. I shad never forget that name—'Deveneux!' Proceedy that was my father's name—my own rightful name. But as I should never find him it I sangh; him, and as he would repuise me if I did find him, I stand no chance of inheriting his property. He may he do d. There had been a temporary lall in the storm. But as the two stood there, the tempest revived and swept over the wild sea in maddened rage.

There was no time for talking now. The wind rose so high that words would scarcely have been distinguished. The storm that had gone order had been but play to tais awind on burst. The vessel drove on, creaking and grouning, a mere cockle sheel on the billows.

It seemed to him that some demon at his side echoed the question: Who could fill the place left vacant by noble Guy Tressitian?

Athought came to him—a thought so strange and sinister that he shivered involuntarily. Again he felt of Tressilian's heart. It gave no throb against his hand. He passed his hand over Tressilian's head and discovered a gaping wound in the skall. The hair was clotted with blood.

Shippad during the week hence and from Matanzas, 19 716 boxes and 478 hids, a f weight to the United States, 327 boxes and 48 hids, and balance to Enrope; for Spain 6to boxes, and to Liver jool 179; leaving stocks in the two ports equal to 20,221 be as and 335 hids, against for equal period of 1879 of 60,631 boxes and 321 hids. Next a livice, I will give shipments to date. In molasses there is a yet no accommission of stock, and new crop is not in quantity to suit buyers said to have been made offers accepted at Cardonia and Matanzas for two or three dargoes of form, 30 to 400 bits, each at 5 reals for chyed. said to have been made offers accepted at Cardena and Matanzas for two or three dirgoes of from 300 to 400 libids, each, at 5 reals for chyed, at 6 24 for ma divide. In tobacco—The scason, by abundant leght showers, have been favora lefor toning parts, but holders have not abated from their extreme pretensions; wherefore transactions have been less this week than the previous. New York buyers are not in this week, Cigars hold their own, with orders yet waiting to be filed on the factories of bost regulation.

Boston Market.

Boston, December 22—"Oppez,—The market for codes remains practy much the same. In St. Domago the sales have been 600 bags at about 8%, gild, in bond, for common, and 500 to 600 bags cape at about 90, gold, in bond. Java continues to be taken in small lots at 21%222; gold; and into at 18%218; $\frac{1}{2}$ lb, gold. Mocha is scarce and prices are quite nombol.

COTON.—The market for cotton was quite duiter y in the week, but windin a few days there has been quite a reaction, and the decline has been forly recovered. Manufacturers have been pretty well supplied by recent arrivals, but are purchasing to a fair extent, and we quote ordinary at 12%413/5c; good ordinary at 14%415c; bw Midding Baloke, and maching at 15%216c $\frac{3}{2}$ lb, including Baloke. during upwards and gult. The market closes quite firm at the c prices.

Donestics -There has been rather more ac-bothestics—there has oden trainer and activity in cotton goods, but prices have ruled in layor of buyers, and the market has now reached comparatively low figures for all leading styles. In woodens very lit le has been done. Some light goods have been taken by clothers, but holders of heavy goods are closing out stocks at comparatively low figures.

GUNNY BARS.—There have been sales of 125 bale at 185kings, currency, and market firm.

New York Rice Market,
