THE NEWS BY MAIL.

Persons leaving the city for the summer, or any portion of it, may have THE DAILY NEWS sent to their address, for such time as they desire, at the rate of one dollar per month. Orders, accompanied by the money, should be sent to the business office of the paper.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Gold closed in New York, on Saturday, at -The New York cotton market closed dull and nominal at 20ic.; sales 744 bales.

In Liverpool cotton closed steady; uplands 81d, Orleans 81a81d; sales 12,000 bales. -Mr. and Mrs. Brignoli, the twins Brignoll, and Mr. Rosconi are concertizing in Canada. The twins come in strong on the alto.

-Baron Meyer Rothschild, whose horse won the Derby and the Oaks races, is said to be the pauper member of the family, his income being only about $2,000,000 a year. -The recovery of the cable of 1865, broken some weeks since, but repaired on Tuesday, gives us three working cables to Europe once more, all managed by one company. -Alexandre Dumas, Jr., has uttered a bon mot on the woes of Paris. He describes the great influx of strangers to that city at present as "a visit to the universal exposition of human folly." -It is declared in Paris that the French Government has obtained possession of the archives of the International Society, and that they furnish important intelligence upon the subject of the Communal movement. -The vote in the French Assembly for and against the admission of the Orleans Princes to their seat as deputies to that body, was, for 350, against 122. This probably represents the Orleanist strength in that body. -Mr. and Mrs. Jesse R. Grant's golden wedding is to be celebrated to-day at son-in-law Corbin's residence in Elizabeth, N. J. The President and family, the members of the cabi-ticians will be present. Among the features will be fireworks. -Kossuth is reported to have despaired of the cause of human freedom in Europe, and to talk of returning to this country to die, because it is the only country where liberty has been from first to last preserved in its perfec-

net, and many eminent Jersey Radical poli-

-The French Government will not probably order any further executions of the Communist prisoners in its hands, except in cases where, perhaps, crimes punishable under the civil law can be proved against them. It is now taking advantage of every legitimate excuse to mitigate the punishment as much as possible. The trials are conducted with calmness. Probably policy has much to do with this, as even the French enemies of the Commune have murmured at the promiscuous and wanton slaughter that marked the entrance of the government troops into the city.

A statement is made by a London journal to the effect that there-is an understanding between Germany, Austria and Russia for the preservation of the peace of Europe. From the present state of affairs, it would seem that such an expressed understanding is not mere ly a gentle hint to the lesser powers to smother their ambition, if they have any, and keep quiet, but a broader hint to England to content herself with her shops henceforth, and expect no more to shape events among the nations of -The Confederate cotton bondholders in England have become more hopeful of the payment of their claims in consequence of the ratification of the treaty of Washington, and a meeting was held in London on June 7th to consider the course that should be adopted. The bondholders argue that the article of the creaty which provides for the reference to a mixed commission of the claims of British subjects arising out of the war covers their case. The Manchester Guardian, in commenting upon the above circumstances, says, that if there was one document that most people believed to be of equal value with a Confederate shipplaster it is a Confederate cotton bond, but that the holders refuse to believe in the hopelessness of their case.

-From Louislana comes the gratifying news that from present indications this year's sugar crop is expected to reach 130,000 hogsheads, which is more than a fair average yield since the war. In 1861 the product was 449,410 hogsheads, but the late "unpleasantness" almost completely annihilated the sugar interest of the State, and in 1864 the production had sunk to 6668 hogsheads. With the re-establishment of peace it gradually rose again, however, and slowly recovered some of its former significance, notwithstanding the many drawbacks and retarding influences with which it necessarily had to contend, as a natural consequence of the new order of things and difficulty with which suitable, labor was obtained. In 1869 the product amounted to 87,000 hogs heads, which will in all probability be for the present year increased fully one-half.

... The movement to introduce Chinese labor in Louisiana appears to be successful. Many of the richest and most influential planters of the State are engaged in it as stockholders in the Louisiana Immigration Company, just organized with a capital of $250,000, in $100 shares. A Mr. Payne, who is at present in China as the agent of several individual planters, has engaged one thousand laborers in that country, and expects to reach Louisiana with them in time for the planting of the next crop. They have all been selected from the agricultural districts of China, and they have agreed to work for eight or ten years for $8 a month in gold. The Chinese at present in Louisiana live in perfect harmony with the negroes. They are nearly all unmarried young men, and are neat and, excellent workmen. They also appear to be perfectly contented. They are paid $13 a month in currency. Their cabins are kept with great care and cleanliness. No doubt Louisiana will soon have a large Chinese population. -The International Society, to judge from the statements of one of its leaders in New York is a formidable organization, and one whose fundamental doctrines are sufficiently sound and progressive to warrant a considerable amount of martyrdom before their gene ral adoption is secured. It is unfortunate for the society that its first introduction to the uninitiated world was through the bloody Paris Commune, which, although doubtless based goes twenty-four thousand miles through the

on the excellent principle of the decentraliza- earth, and double that distance into space, tion of government, as Mr. Dewey states, did before the body of its victim touches the THE DAILY NEWS, by mall one year, $8; six all in its power to prove centralization much safer for society. Neither will the sane world accept this gentleman's excuse for the destruction of the Column Vendome and the Tuileries, that the one occupied a place where a statue of Ceres would look better, and the other a site much better fitted for a poorhouse or a hospital. It the International purposes to begin its reformatory work by destroying the branches to see if they were thick enough everything in the world in order to subsequently create something better, it will always find a considerable conservative party, with property and lives to lose, which will oppose it. But with so many newspapers in its Interest as Mr. Dewey represents, there is no certainty that it may not convert us all within he next century, and set every man to firing his own house and smashing his bronzes.

-The Paris Commune was about as incongruous and ill-matched a batch as one could expect to meet with anywhere, and under any circumstances. About half of the number were Frenchmen, and the rest were thus assorted, if reports be correct: Poles 21; Italians 9; Germans 7; Wallachians 2; Americans, Belgians, Portuguese and Egyptian 1 each. It is only remarkable that so thoroughly a French community as the Parisians could have ac cepted these foreign adventurers as their leaders for so long a time.

Our Nice Jury Law, Again.

Judge Montgomery Moses last week decided that the juries in attendence at the court for Laurens County had been illegally drawn. He adjourned the Court of Sessions, as Judge Rutland had done in Darlington, and there will, probably, now be no court held in Laureas until February next. The decision of the Judge, in our view, smacks unpleasantly of the nature of a quibble. In the opinion of his Honor, all three of the county officers comprising the Board of Jury Commissioners must be present, when the list of names is being prepared from which the jury is to be drawn. In this instance it so happened that only two of these officers were present, the County Auditor having been appointed at so late a day that opportunity was not afforded him of qualifying and aiding in the selection of names, within the time prescribed by law. It is the opinion, however, of a large proportion of the bar at Laurensville, that the jury was legally drawn, and that the presence of a majerity of the Board was all the law contemplated.

Now this is certainly a very nice state of affairs: though it looks a trifle like clogging the wheels of justice. It is quite difficult enough to maintain order, and secure the public peace, when the administration of justice is properly conducted. What, therefore, is to be expected when lets and hindrances are thrown across its path at every step? What can be more conducive to lawlessness than the all but positive assurance that the villain has every chance in his favor to go unwhipped of justice? And can it be expected that a people, groaning under a frightful burden of taxs ion, will patiently see the load increased, wantonly, we may say, he the caprice of an over punctilious judicial officer. Truly, this is a rare example of straining, at a gnat and swallowing a

About Lightning.

The season of thunder storms being upon us, it may be well to quiet the fears of the many nervous persons who dread death by lightning and are consequently in agony while a storm is in progress. We owe much of this fear to the lightning itself in another form. Before the days of the telegraph, men and beasts were stunned and killed without our knowledge, but now the telegraph tells of a thousand accidents by flood and field of which we formerly heard nothkilled by lightning than ever before. It is not so in fact, onl, in appearance. Electromagnetism has made the whole United States, one neighborhood, so far as violent deaths and remarkable accidents are concerned, and lightning seems to be more dangerous than heretofore because of the wider range of our information. Allowance being made for the increased density of population, the chances are much, the same-about one in a million-that any particular individual will be struck by lightning. But supposing the individual is struck, what then? The question may be answered by two statements to which we are indebted to modern science: First, hard as it may be to realize the fact, it is nevertheless a fact, perfectly well established that, before we can even see the flash, the lightning has struckits work is done and over. We appear to see the flash in its zigzag pathway down the skies at each exact instant of its actual progress, but the bolt has reached the earth before we are conscious of its beginning. Second, it takes time to perceive and to feel. A barefoot boy sticks a thorn in his heel. He thinks he knows more about his suffering than anybody else. He is mistaken He feels more, but he knows less. He does not know that before he can feel at all, the sensation produced by the thorn must travel from his heel to his head and from his head back to his heel again. All this requires time.

Further, every thought, every emotion every sensation causes a certain rearrange ment of the atoms in the nerves and in the brain. Quick as this rearrangement is, it consumes time. Now suppose an injury so violent, a shock so great that this rearrangement cannot take place. The nerve cannot transmit the sensation, the brain cannot take cognizance of it-there is no feeling mhatsoener.

Well, the rapidity of sensation and of thought have been measured; so has the velocity of lightning; and lightning is just about one million times swifter than sensa tion. Helmholtz has determined the velocity of pervous transmission and finds it to be not quite one hundred feet in a second, or less than one-tenth of the velocity of sound in air. A whale fifty feet long, wounded in the tail, would not be conscious of the injury till half a second after the wound had been inflicted. Now, if it takes a tenth of a second for you to feel a sensation, and it requires only the hundred-thousandth part of a second for a rifle ball to pass clear through your head, how are you going w feel any sensation? You can't do it. You are dead before you are conscious of it. But the velocity of lightning is very much greater than that of a bullet from a rifle; electricity darts from the earth to the moon, some 240. 000 miles, in a second. Lightning destroys the possibility of feeling, leaves the man dead

what is the proof of this? Professor ground Tyndall, to whom we are indebted for the facts we have given, tells of a soldier who was struck by lightning while standing under a tree. He did not recover fer hours. When he did, he remembered only looking up in to keep off the rain. He saw no flash-he felt no pain. This, however, is hearsay. Professor Tyndall gives his own experience. While lecturing to a large audience, he accidently touched the wire leading to a battery of fifteen large Leyden jars, and the discharge went through his body. "Life was absolute-'ly blotted out for a very considerable inter-'val, without a trace of pain." Tyndall concludes in these words, which nervous people will do well to remember:

"There cannot be a doubt that, to a person struck dead by lightning, the passage from life to death occurs without conscious 'ness being in the least degree implicated. 'It is an abrupt stoppage of sensation, un-'accompanied by a pang."

A Glimpse of the Future.

The "Battle of Dorking," that, after having first appeared in "Blackwood's," for May, attracted such universal attention, both in England and our side the water, and gave rise to innumerable discussions and reprints, has at ast been answered by the German press, in an article recently published in the Allgemeine Zeitung, purporting to be written by "John "Michael Trutz-Baumvoll, Angio-German poli-"tician of the future," to his Majesty the Emperor of Germany. In this letter Kaiser Wiliam is recommended to invade and conquer England, as the other two Williams of Normandy and Orange did before him, and thus give reality to the scenes that have been so vividly foreshadowed and graphically described in the Battle of Dorking." The writer of this letter further says, that this scheme, although it seems fantastic, would not be by any means difficult of execution, while it would be highly advantageous and desirable; for Germany, with her own magnificent army and Engand's great fleet, would then be de facto the nower of the world. France would be divided mong the warriors of the Fatherland, Austria would give in, and the new German broom would sweep both sea and land. Queen Victoria would be handsomely pensioned; the Prince of Wales would be compensated for the loss of his prospects by an annuity, and a glowing euloglum in the Times, and "an era of real happiness and self-respect would dawn upon "the British Territories of the German Em "pire." Truly, Colonel Hamley, who is said to be the father of the clever English jeu d'esprit tnat has given rise to this sarcastic gibe from the German side, has a deal to answer for in thus having made everyone of his countrymen feel uncomfortable and uneasy, and, at the same time, furnishing a sharp point to all sarcastic darts that may be fired from Germany against the sea-girt island.

A Lovely Lot.

[From the Courier of Saturday.] In accordance with an invitation, extended by a half dozen prominent politicians of "the 'party," a goodly number of the "elect" asembled at the house of Lieutenant-Governor Ransier, Pitt street, Thursday night, D. T. Corbin, Esq., whose name was not among those which appeared on the printed invitations, was present, nevertheless, and presided. Wm. H. Berney, a Customhouse official acted as secretary. After agreeing that no one should hold the floor for more than five minutes, the discussion or "talk" began. Speeches, among others, were made by De Large, Sawyer and Ransler, who favored a "compromise." Solicitor E. B. Seabrook, whose name did not appear either on the printed circular calling the cau cus, made a red-hot Republican harangue, advocating a straight out-and-out party ticket, and expressed his willingness to support for office the party nominees, if they could but make their mark. During the "talk," we are informed, DeLarge threatened to slap Seabrook's face, and that gentleman retorted by saying that the puguacious Congressman was only fit to "black his boots." We are at a oss to understand how Lleutenant-Governor Ransier could have introduced a resolution expressing confidence in Mayor Pillsbury, and commending him as a nominee for the Mayoralty to the Republican Convention, in the face of the speech he made at the meeting in Ward 8, committing himself to the senti ments of those who assembled there, as opponents of the present administration. The caucus developed the intention of the Radical party to run a ticket of their own, and without acting on the Ransier resolution, the "talk" was discontinued u il next Wednes day evening, when it will be resumed.
