. THE NEWS BY MAIL.

Persons leaving the city for the summer, or any portion of it, may have THE DAILY NEWS sent to their address, for such time as they desire, at the rate of one dollar per month. Orders, accompanied by the money, should be sent to the business office of the paper.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Gold closed in New York, yesterday, at 125a124.

-Cotton closed dull and ic lower; uplands 20c; sales 679 bales. -In Liverpool cotton closed quiet but steady; uplands 8gd; Orleans 8gd; sales 15,000

-Rags to the value of $350,000 are annually shipped from New Orleans.

-It is feared that Mrs. Vallandigham will become insane from her recent severe family afflictions. ... -One New York broker was going heavily into Rock Island, when he thought he would get shampooed. After the shampoo Rock Island was in fragments. He should pension the barber or endow a shampoo asylum. -A Paris housewife has published a book entitled "The Beleaguered Cook," in which she treats of the art of living during a slege, and gives advice how to prepare properly such dishes as were dictated by necessity during the late siege of Parls. -It is said Mr. Vallandigham had writen a complete autobiography, and that one of his pet projects was to deliver an oration at the Centennial Anniversary of American Independence, July 4, 1876, the preparation of which he had already commenced.

-The old style of presenting each guest at a wedding with a box, containing a liberal slice of wellding cake to take home and dream on. has again come in fashion, and is much more sensible and agreeable to all parties than baving a very elaborate cake in the centre of the table for every one to look at.

-Paris gamins turn an honest penny by selling the teeth of the dead Communists to curlous tourists-English especially-as trophies of the insurgent. Twenty-four sets of Dombrowski's teeth have thus been disposed of, all duly labelled, so that there should be no mistake. There was a lively trade done in Cluseret's molars for a while, until it was discovered that he was still alive; from that time Cluseret's teeth became a drug in the market.

_By the constitution of New Hampsh're, Catholics are ineligible for seats in the Legislature, and the attention of the House of Delegates has been officially called to the case of five members of that body who belong to the proscribed church, but it is not likely any further action will be taken, as a number of that faith have had seats in the House for Years past without any attempt being made to oust

-A very interesting letter from Paris in the World gives a melancholy description of the condition of that city. Rents are unpaid, mortality great, strangers are unwelcome, &c., &c. Thiers's furniture, books and large works of art were carried sately to a warehouse, but his papers, correspondence, maps, &c., perished in the Hotel de Ville. The half million dollars' worth of bronzes have dis prined is not known. Thiers himself is represented to be very unpopular; the army detests him and favors Republicanism and Napoleonism both; it has neither discipline nor cohesion. The provinces are not tranquil; an angry feeling exists towards Paris. There is no glass in many Parisian windows; no furniture in many houses, and thousands of families are houseless. It is stated that 14,900 National Guards have perished, and that 30,-000 are prisoners at Versailles. Rossini's villa in the Bois was destroyed, so was Theophile Gautier's, but he managed to save his books and pictures. Chavaune's studio, Prosper Merimee's house, Bertrand's mathematical and scientific library were also all destroyed: - Altotogether the picture is a melancholy one enough of what for years has been "gay Paris." The books of the French Immigration Society of the State of Louisiana have now been opened, and subscriptions are solicited to attract immigration from the Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, whose inhabitants are already, to some extent, identified by feeling and language with the citizens of the section where their presence is desired. The inaugurators of this movement rightly remark, that of attaining to the highest scale of civilization. The introduction of a lower type of mankind may answer the temporary purposes of production, (and they might have added political purposes of parties;) but it is attended with great danger from retrogression. The people of Alsace and Lorraine, on the contrary, are of a high order. Once located in the country, in whatever sphere, their native and natural instincts would impel them to progress, and their very contact, no less than their actual labor, would be beneficial. There is no laggard in their blood, and the soil which they might select as ' leir future homes would soon bloom and prosper as does their native country under their intelligent labor and steady industry. There was certainly no richer or more prosperous portion of France than the two provinces which she has recently lost, and whoever secures the solid thrift and energetic work of such of its former inhabitants as are now on the eve of leaving their old homes for political reasons, cannot fail to profit from the acquisition.

-The annual regatta of the New York Yacht Club, if not the most satisfactory to the vachtsmen themselves on account of several technical blunders made by the vessels during the race, was at any rate one of the most amusing and exciting to outsiders of any in the annals of the sport. As hitherto stated, many of the yachts rounded the wrong buoy, involving a general entanglement of the fleet and mystification in the minds of the judges. The error was occasioned by the sage conduct of an ancient mariner in charge of the lower stake-boat, who deposited himself in the wrong position, and there remained in serene self-confidence while some of the vessels went around his "mistake"-boat, andothers kept on the right course. The scene at the time was inspiriting in the highest degree. The water was dotted with all manner of craft, and the contesting boats made a fine exhibition until the wind died away, after which the larger yachts became comparatively unmanageable. The race abounded in the usual incidents and trifling disasters. Several sails and ropes gave way, and the Idler managed to create a special excitement by "spille ing" a man overboard. Hereupon there was a hub-bub, but when it was found that the fellow could swim like a duck, and that he hailed in profane terms those who offered him assist ance, he was left to his fate, which was to b picked up by a tug. It is more than probable that, owing to the misunderstanding above mentioned, the race will be repeated. -From England comes the news of another strike, but one, it seems, that is fully justified.

The operatives in one of the largest cotton mills in Blackburn have struck, not for higher wages, but in opposition to the practice of introducing steam jets into the work-rooms, by which the health of the men is made to suffer. The origin of this practice among the cotton manufacturers of England arose during our civil war, when "long staple" cotton could not easily be obtained, and, therefore, had to be substituted by an inferior quality, which in frosty weather, or when it blew a dry eastern wind, was very difficult to manipulate By the advice of scientists, jets of steam were introduced into the weaving sheds, and it was soon found that this process enabled the manufacturer, besides utilizing inferior material, to add to his profit by increasing the weight of the product, which, among the English jobbers and large wholesale dealers, is always sold in that way. For some time the operatives did not object, under the belief that this practice would soon be abolished. Finding it not only continued, but, on the contrary, gradually extended on a still larger scale, the workmen now demand its abandonment. They claim that the cloud of steam is often so dense in the work-rooms that they cannot see each other at the distance of a few paces egen, and that the moisture completely saturates their clothes, in which condition, at the close of the day's work, they are obliged to encounter the rigorous out-door atmosphere on their way home. As a natural consequence, the health of the operatives has suffered, and a high rate of mortality from lung diseases is reported, particularly in the Borough of Blackburn,

England and Germany.

"Serious complications have arisen be-"tween Germany and England." So says the Cable. The telegraphic Sphynx gives us only this, and nothing more, and we are left to conjecture as to the cause of these "serious complications." England-or perhaps we should more properly say the Gladstone Government-kept so carefully aloof from everything like interference in the late war between Germany and France, that we can hardly think of a question between them sufficiently grave in character to warrant the omineus words of the ocean wire. True, the close of the Franco-German war left England with an incubus, somewhat analogous to the "Alabama" difficulty, arms and coal having been constantly furnished to the French by subjects of her Britannic Majesty. Sooner or later there must be a reckoning for this. Bismarck is a good accountant, and forgets nothing. The complication spoken of may, therefore, have reference to this palpable breach of neutrality, in furnishing arms and munitions to one of the belligerents.

It may have reference to the reported annexation of Luxembourg, though we scarcely think so. The altered western frontier of Rhenish Prussia makes the incorporation of Luxembourg almost a matter of course. England would hardly deem it worth her while to make this a casus belli; for it cannot be said that such a rectification of frontiers would disturb the balance of power, simply because that balance was so seriously deranged by the war of 1866, and still more by the events of the past and the present year, that there can be no reasonable expectation of restoring it, without a great and appeared, but whether they were stolen or general war of all the European powers. This, certainly, England has no desire to precipitate. The correspondence between the two Cabinets is more likely to relate to the cession of

Heligoland. This island of the North Sea, opposite the mouth of the Eider, Elbe, Weser and Jahde, and therefore virtually controlling the navigation of those waters, belonged to Denmark, then in possession also of the adjoining provinces on the main, Schleswig and Holstein. In 1807, when Denmark was an ally of Napoleon, and at war with England, the latter occupied Heligoland, and has held it ever since. As long as Germany had no navy, it mattered little who occupied the roadstead in her waters: but now things have changed, and Count Bernstorff, the Prussian ambassador to the Couft of St. James, having been directed to mention the subject to Earl Granville, we are told the latter received it in a manner that led the German ambassador to expect a favorable result to his negotiations-especially as the island has in reality no value for England, but is a very important strategic point for Germany. The Tories, unfavorable to the German side all through the late struggle, now are heard in loud routterings against this proposed cession. This, however, is to be expected, for they could not afford to lose so excellent an opportunity for aspersing their opponents in power. Just as Prince Napoleon is heaping all manner of abuse upon Jules Favre because France has suffered humiliation while Favre and his colleagues were at the helm, so Disraeli and his confederates in Parliament, in the Press and in the Clubs, pretend to hold the liberal government responsible for the lossof prestige incurred by England, because of their action, or rather inaction in the present instance. In the proposed alienation of territory, even though it be only of a worthess barren isle, they endeavor to arouse the prejudice of honest John Bull who likes to grab all he can get, but has ever been averse to letting go his hold. The cry of "dismem-"berment of the British Empire" is a fine party slogan. But although this may be good ammunition to the opposition press and to Tory party leaders, the bone and sinew of England is eminently practical, and will hardly be led away by catchwords. The "average Eng-"lishman" knows what war is, and likes it not; and he will not rush to arms for an idea, nor yet for a huge oyster-bed out in the German Ocean.

There are those who foresee the German annexation of Denmark and of Holland; and who will insist on a war that is to be between England and Germany-after the are simply their own enemies. It is guaranteed fashion of the now famous Battle of Dorking, so graphically foreshadowed in Blackwood's Magazine. But sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. Germany has had war enough for the present; and in her assure and conscious strength, we believe, is to be found the best guarantee for the peace of Europe. We are not of those who believe that the price of cotton will be seriously affected in the next few years by the cellislon of hostile fleets in the German Ocean.

Accepting the Situation

Do we accept the situation? In a certain sense, "No;" in another sense, "Yes." Do we accept Ulysses S. Grant? No. His administration, in whole or in part? No. The present tariff? No. The corruption and extravagance which attend the collection and disbursement of the revenues? No. The principles, if any there be, of the party in power? No. The centralizing tendency of Republican construction of the Constitution? No. The infamous Ku-Klux bill? No. We do not accept these things. Far from it. On the contrary, we repudiate them as heartily and sincerely as you do, Mr. Davis, or you, Mr. Toombs, or you, Mr. Stephens. The situation, then, is exactly the thing which we do not accept, never accepted, never intend to accept; but intend to war against until the situation ceases to be, and a better situation is instituted in lieu

But do we accept the Three Amendments Yes. Accept, however, is not the word. Its primary meaning is "to take with a consenting mind, to receive with approbation or "favor," and a well-known distinction is made between receiving and accepting, as when an offer of a commission is received but not accepted. It is hardly necessary for us to say that we do not receive the Three Amendments with favor, much less with approbation. Yet this is the attitude in which the Davis-Toombs-Stephens party choose to place all who have given adherence to the New Departure. It is a false attitude, entirely false and unjust. In this sense, we "accept nothing," as Mr. Davis (who ought to have said nothing) would say. But the word "accept" was unfortunately chosen, and does not at all represent the true attitude of those who occupy the New Departure platform. The Democracy of Ohio put the matter in the right light when they "recognized" these amendments "as accom-"plished facts," to war against which, at this time, is folly. To make these amendments an issue in the approaching campaign is folly. It is a waste of force which, wisely expended, would insure success. We will give these gentlemen, who fancy they love liberty so much more than we do, an illustration: A British officer in India, while at the card table, felt something on his leg. Looking down, he beheld a cobra di capello slowly crawling up to his body. Without moving a muscle, without changing a tone of his voice, he requested a servant to bring a bowl of milk and place it on the floor. It was quickly done, and the venomous reptile, attracted by the odor of the milk. abandoned his leg, and the officer was saved from a horrible death by "accepting the sit-"nation."

Mr. Toombs proposes to lay violent hands on this cobra. We do not. Mr. Davis thinks a loud harangue in the open air will do some good. We do not. Mr. Stephens has an idea that a number of newspaper articles will make the cobra uncoil. Wesdo not. We propose to call for a bowl of milk, and call in such mild tones that the reptile will not take the alarm. Recognizing the character and temper of the Northern masses, we yield to existing circumstances, and propose to im-Prote suces chemistances ov adopting means to ends. In that sense, and in no other, we accept the situation. The end is, the overthrow of the Republican party, the uncoiling of the cobra. The means are, anything but violence or the semblance

The State Tax.

Messrs. Pope & Haskell, attorneys-at-law, on May 25th, addressed a letter to Attorney-General Chamberlain, asking his construction on certain ambiguous points in the Tax law. Mr. Chamberlain replied at length on the 22d instant. Messrs. Pope & Haskell, in acknowledging the receipt of his letter, state that by the recent ruling of the Supreme Court on the question of the granting of the writ of prohibition, had relieved much of the anxiety they felt at the time their letter was addressed to him; for by that writ the legal right can now be telted before the citizen is harassed. MAJOR E. W. SEIBELS, of Columbia, testified before the Congressional Investigating Committee in Washington on Thursday last. The New York Times, of the 23d, says he made out the government of the State to be very bad. THE UNIVERSAL SAFEGUARD. it is useless for State Legislatures to pass laws for the preservation of the public health, if the great law of self-preservation, which depends for ts enforcement upon the will of the individual, is suffered to remain a dead letter.

There is scarcely an adult member of the com munity, of either sex, in the country, who has not seen the testimony in favor of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, furnished over their own signatures by persons of acknowledged eminence in science, literature, art, commerce, and every depar ment of business and professional life. These witnesses have declared in the mos explicit terms that the preparation is a safeguard against epidemics, a sovereign remedy for dys pensia, a valuable anti-billous medicine, a promo ter of appetite, a genial and harmless stimulant a good acclimating medicine, a strengthener of the nerves, a general invigorant, a protection against the deleterious effects of malaria and im pure water, and that it imparts a degree of vigor and activity to the vital forces which is not communicated by any other of the tonics and stomachies in use. Under these circumstances the self-preservative law of nature should teach every rational person who, either by reason of in nerent debility, or in consequence of exposure to nawholesome influences, is in peril of losing the greatest of all temporal blessings, health, the im portance of using the Bitters as a defensive medi cine. Dyspentics who neglect to give it a trial to cure indigestion in all its forms, and the bilious and nervous will find nothing in the whole range of officinal and proprietary medicines which will afford them the same relief.
