-It is now said that the unfortunate woman

telopes and a watermelon, which was her last banquet. -The ex-Empress of Mexico, Carlotta, it is positively stated, cannot live through the coming autumn, as she now has periods of perfect prostration lasting forty-eight hours, and her death is expected almost any day. She is on'y thirty-one years of age, having been married to the unfortunate Archduke Maximilian when she was but seventeen years of age. -The San Francisco Call has been making a census of the rich men of the city, and in a late issue gives the names of all who are worth half a million of dollars or more. The list comprises seventy-eight who are worth from a half a million to a million dollars each; thirty-two over one and under two millions; eleven over two and under three millions, four over three and under four millions; four worth from four to ten millions. -The Rothschilds are said to be such firm believers in luck that they will never employ any one in any capacity who has been unfortunate. They always ask the man who applies to them for a situation, however humble, "ave you ever had any bad luck ?" and if the ... ply be in the affirmative, he is rejected without any further discussion. To this apparently severe and unjust mode of dealing they attribute much of their extraordinary success in business.

-A Berlin letter says there is much bitter tribution of the four million thalers (about three million dollars) which has been voted by the German Parliament for the reserve and the landwehr, and of which two and a half millions fall to Prussia. This is an average of three dollars for each man which, when compared with the equal amount divided among the generals, makes a strange contrast. In the first place it is four millions divided among 700,000, and in the other, tour millions

-It is amusing to observe the many modes people have of dead-heading their way through this world. A Michigan farmer went into Detroit and bucked the tiger until he got bucked out of the currency he possessed. He valuely sought various means of transportation home, and finally concluded to offer a tract of land for sale cheap, and thus induce some one to go out with him and look at it. This bait took. Next day a gentleman started with him, and after two days' travel, arrived at a little station and put up for the night, only five miles from home. Next morning the farmer was gone, and investigation proved that he didn't own any land, but he had sold the would-be purchaser nevertheless.

Monday by royal commission until November 7. The Queen's speech acknowledges with satisfaction the provision made by Parliament for the Princess Louise and Prince Arthur. The announcement is made that the relations of Great Britain with foreign powers are of a friendly character. The treaty of 1856 having been revised by the conference recently held in London, a hope is expressed for continued tranquillity in the East. The speech dwells with satisfaction upon the freaty of Washington, and hopes for a general recognition of the trals. Full reliance is, placed upon the disposition of Americans, to carry out all the provisions of the treaty. The Queen is anxious to meet the expressed wishes of the French Government for the alteration of some of the provisions of the commercial treaty of 1860, but would witness with concern any change which would restrict commercial intercourse. The Commons are thanked for the liberal supplies they have granted. Extraordinary powers granted for the repression of agrarian outrages in Westmeath have thus far answered their purpose, while in other portions of Ireland there is a gratifying immunity from crime. The remainder of the speech is devoted to topics of a local character.

An English Estimate of the South. An article in the Saturday Review of August 5, reviewing Professor Draper's History of the American Civil War, is worthy of notice as a pleasing evidence that, in England at least, the principles involved in the war between the States are reasonably well understood, and, also, that a disposition exists to do full, though tard, justice to the defeated South. The reviewer says, with reason, that a fair history of the war is not such a history-dealing impartially with the motives and actions of both belligerentswill ever be written. Those histories, therefore, "must be regarded as comparatively "fair and honest, in which the conduct and "claims of the South are not wilfully dis-"torted and misstated-in which the writer, "if himself unable to apprehend, and there-"fore incompetent to present to his readers, "the political aspect of the dispute unen-"cumbered by ethical questions, which "neither of the parties to the Federal com-"pact were entitled to import into it, at least endeavors to give the facts as they "really occurred, and to repeat the arguments of the South as they were actually "stated by Southern writers and orators." The reviewer is of opinion that no other Northern author has approached so nearly to the comparative standard as Dr. Draper, who "makes an evident and studious effort "to be not only accurate, but liberal-not "only to state the facts correctly, but to do "justice to the motives and the convictions of men whom he regards as utterly and un-"pardonably wrong." From such a source this is high praise indeed. The reviewer, however, believes that a careful reader will find in Dr. Draper's pages "abundant reason "to doubt whether the North was really so "thoroughly in the right as it appears to "this Northern author." He says : "The reader will find, in short, that the case of the North res's entirely on the assumption that slavery is a crime; and however little he may be disposed to dispute this assumption, it will occur to every one not blinded by partisanship, or rendered careless by preconceived judgment, that it was one which the North had no right to import into its Federal relations. No point was more clearly ascertained, more distinctly laid down in the very formation of the Union, than the uninterrupted and inviolable sovereignty of the States over their own domestic institutions. The right of the South to maintain slavery within her borders was constitutionally indisputable; it had been donbly recognized by the North, in the clause forbidding Congress to prohibi the slave trade before 1808, and in the fugi tive slave law, which formed an article of the constitution; and having once entered into union on equal terms with the slave States, the North was bound, within that Union and during its continuance, not only to make no attacks on slavery, where it existed under State laws, but to recognize its existence as an institution coequal with freedom within the area of Federal jurisdiction. It is absurd in New York, whose demise furnished the to suppose that the slave States were to admit basis of the segsation story of the cholera having appeared in that city, was taken off by just own system, and to accept its exclusion from such an attack as one might expect to follow a the Territories in which they had an equal repast of twenty over-ripe peaches, two can right-most of which were, indeed, originally their own. This fact once understood-it being once perceived that, so long as the Union subsisted, the South was equal with the North, and slavery as good as freedom, in point of all Federal rights-it is impossible for a reader of Dr. Draper's History not to perceive that in the political battles waged between North and South, the latter was usually acting in self-defence, and that in nea to every case the North was the aggressor, and was en croaching on the equality and infringing the rights of the South. The commencement of the fend was the attempt of the North to exclude States claiming to enter the Union with slave constitutions, at the same time that free States were admitted without dispute. It was clearly impossible that such a pretension could be tolerated: it was clear that those who advanced It did in fact deny the equality of the slave States, and violate the first condition of Federal unity. The Missouri Compromise, which grew out of this dispute, gave un the larger part of the Federal territory to the North, and gave the South only an equal right in the remainder. In the annexation of Texas and the Mexican war the South might seem to be acting aggressively. But Dr. Draper himself shows that she was unimated solely by considerations of self-protection. Immigration had given the North an overwhelming ascendency in the House of Representatives; the only security of the South lay in maintaining equality within complaint in Prussia growing out of the disshe should have the means of forming new slave States, to counterbalance those rapidly growing up in the Northwest. All her alleged rapacity of territory arose from this one cause. She had more land than she could cultivate with her actual population; in Texas and in

From the moment that she gave up the hope of maintaining equality in the Senate, it became evident that secession was only a question of time. From the moment that party formed on the principle of sectional hostility to the South acquired the control of the Federal Executive, it was obvious that the time had come. And no one has ever been able to maintain that the South cou d safely have remained in the Union save on the inadmissible hypothesis that she should have made up her mind to submit, and not only to allow her institutions to be remodelled, but to allow them to be remodelled by Northern legislation. No people ever accepted such subjection till they had ment of battle." -The British Parliament was prorogued on Than this, no more compact statement of the position occupied by the South, and of the necessity as well as the right of Secession, could, under the circumstances, be made. Dr. Draper makes it evident to the re viewer that "the bombardment of Fort Sumter was in reality an act of self-defence, forced upon the South by Mr. Lincoln's deprinciple for guiding matitime conduct of neu- | "declaration of war against institutions as "warmly cherished by the poorest white as "by the richest slave-owner;" and it is "an "absurd misconception of the whole situa-"tion" which ascribes the action of the South to "a conspiracy." This is candid, and to the purpose.

Of the Southern temperament and character the reviewer writes as follows: "The course of the war presents another point on which his history contradicts his theoretical doctrines, as-to those who read it with vigilant and open minds-it does in almost every page. Dr. Draper believes profoundly in the influence of climate on national character, and is perhaps the more tolerant and temperate in his treatment of Southern polity, because he imputes the preference of slavery, the flery temper, the independent spirit of the South to the influences of isothermal lines. But the records of the war show that the climate had not affected the military character of the Southerners. They still resemble Englishmen more than they resemble any Southern nation; are still distinguished by the pertinacity, the endurance, the discipline, and the steadiness of the English soldier, while the Northerners showed more of French impetuosity in the onslaught, and French liability to panic in repulse. Much more truth lies in the contrast between the family life and doyet to be expected, and he doubts whether mestic ideas of North and South, as drawn, however reluctantly, by our author; and a perusal of his work will leave the thoughtful reader impressed with new respect and sympathy for the thoroughly English character of the South, and with an earnest hope that, when she emerges from the gloom that still hangs over her, it will be found that the best features of her social life have survived the tall of slavery-that the love of home, the reverence for parents, the womanly and wifely virtues of one sex, the chivalry and henor of the other, still remain, as on the testimony of an enemy they once were, the characteristics of the Southern American, as of his English ancestry."

During the war the Southern people had little reason to bless their English cousins, whatever the attractive force of the noble qualities which they possess in common, but it is none the less gratifying, on this account, that the first critical journal of the day should write so warmly upon subjects which lie near the Southern heart.

MAJOR D. B. TOWNSEND is the President of the Cheraw and Greensboro' Railroad Company, and not of the Cheraw and Darlington Railroad Company, as stated, by inadvertence, in THE NEWS of yesterday.

Upon the subject of the Conference proposed to be held in the fall, the Marion Star says: "We doubt the policy of these confer-"ences of 'leading men,' and are inclined "to think we had as well expend no gas so "early in the campaign. 'Tis a poor general "that betrays his plans to the enemy. When "the organization of the party for the Presi-"dential campaign commences, will it not be "time sufficient for a conference of the 'lead-"'ing men?"

> Dearest father, thou hast left us, Here thy loss we deeply feel, But 'tis God : hat hath bereft us, He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee, When the day of life is fied, Then, in Heaven, with joy to greet thee, Where no farewell tear 15 shed.

In Memoriam. BURNS.—DAVID JAMES BURNS, eldest son of Davit M. and Lavinia A. Burns, of Charleston. S. C., died 24th August, 1870, in the seventeenth year of his age, of bilious fever, after an illness of one of his age, of billious fever, after an liness of one week.

This day completes a twelve month since loving hands laid his lifeiess form in the tomb. He was attractive in appearance, gentle in manners, quiet, thoughtful and moral. His employer commended his fitclity, his friends saw in him the worth of a noble youth, but to the eye of a parent he revealed a tenderness and respect, which held him to their hearts with hooks stronger than steel. He was a guardian to the younger members of the family. From early life he had been so trained in religious duties, that he grew up with plous inclinatious. He was regularly at the house of God, and united himself with Spring street and Trinity Church Sabbath-schools.

His last hymn of praise was, "All Hall the Fower of Jesus's Name" He closed his eyes in the spirit of prayer, hopefully trusting in the merits of the Son of God.

It seems but vesterday that thou wert here.

It seems but yesterday that thou wert here.
And yet thou hast been gone a year.

MEDICAL MISTAKES .- IT TOOK the faculty about a thousand years to discover that the best way to cure disease was not to render the patient too weak to contend with it. Within the last twenty years, however, the whole eystem of medical practice has been changed for the better. In diseases or complaints caused by excessive heat, for instance, the dectors no longer recommend the reduction of the invalid's strength by prostrating medicines. The vast suc cess which has attended the use of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS as a remedy for debility has given even the most prejudiced members of the old school an insight into the only true and rational theory of cure. Cantharides, calomel, and overpowering doses of oplum are now among the obsolete nostrums of another age. The lancet, once as much the legitimate weapon of the physician as the sword is of the soldier, is seldom drawn from its case. The principle of life is no longer drained from the (veins by the quart, and water-gruel for the strengthless invalid has ceased to be considered an appropriate diet. Vigor is the motto of the rational members of the profession, and they understand at last the value of a steriing vegetable tonic. So also with the people at large; and without consulting medical men at all, they have adopted the Bitters as a nousehold remedy, thereby economizing both cash and health. Note the fact that HOSTETTER'S STOMACH

BITTERS is sold in bottles only-never in bulkand that the abortions springing up in various parts of the country, and sometimes offered as substitutes for the great national specific, are all aug19-stuth8D&C

Nothing will be left undone in imparting to the pupils confided to their care a thorough education, in the highest sense of the word—not alone instructing the intellect, but with maternal care guiding an I training the heart.

The situation of the Convent is all that can be desired for health and beauty. The buildings are on elevated ground, about two miles from the Capital, and in the midst of an oak grove of wenty acres. It is within half an hour's drive from the depot, where omnibuses and baggage wagons await the arrival of passengers.

No distinction of religion will be made in the admission of pupils, nor will any undue influence be used over their religious principles; but, for the maintenance of good order, all will be required to attend the exercises of Divine Worship prescribed for the Academy.
