NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Gold closed on Saturday at 11 all ...

-In Liverpool cotton closed heavy, uplands 93d., Orleans 93d.; sales 8000 bales. -The New York cotton market was dull and heavy on Saturday; uplands 18] cents;

sales 1911 bales. -The President has issued a proclamation for thanksgiving on the 30th of November. -Dispatches announce the death of General

Robert Anderson, of Fort Sumter fame, at Nice, Italy. -The Cotton Exchange, New York, have issued an order prohibiting skylarking or games of chance on the floor of the Exchange. -Congress will, at its next session, upon the recommendation of Postmaster General Creswell, give a thorough consideration to the proposition to enact a law establishing a postal telegraph system, to be under the control of the government. -The Treasury Department has directed Special Treasury Agent Hale, at Savannah, to take charge of the Customhouse at that port and settle up the accounts of the late collector, Colonel Robb. A new collector will be appointed on the return of Attorney-General Akerman to Washington.

-The stone so-called fire-proof buildings in Chicago were only fire-proof in name. The material of which most of them were made was a limestone or marble highly charged with petroleum. Under a hot sun the smell of the oil was perceptible. The New York Journal of Commerce reports an eye-witness of the fire as saying that he saw the flames cross streets and lick with long tongues at the stone buildings opposite. The latter, as they became intensely heated, emitted jets of gas, upon which the flames would catch and then go out again, repeating the operation a nunber of times, when, presto! the stone wou'd apparently be in flames. Like coal, these stones were reduced to ashes. Mr. Horace the Cincinnati Commercial, writes: "It is ascertained that no stone ever used in the business part of the city is worth a farthing in such a fire." -A letter from Adjutant-General Gorman of the North Carolina militia, gives a history of the unsuccessful campaign against the negro banditti in Robeson County, who have so long defied both the State and national authorities. He also gives a description of the country in which the outlaws live, their personnel and mode of life. The whole race is of mixed origin and is more or less connected by blood, and some five or six family names constitute the majority of the inhabitants, the the largest in number. It is asserted that nearly the whole community is in active sympathy with the outlaws, many through fear, others ties of relationship. Their predatory and lawless operations are well systematized, and in their forays they are assisted by the desolate and almost impassable condition of the not make headway against them, and not being able to arouse the white citizens from their despondent apathy and secure their cooperation, Gormon finally arranged an interview with the Lowrys, and met them, by agreement, in a swamp. They said that they were tired of their present manner of life, and promised to leave the United States if a free pardon was given them. Gorman assured them that they would have a fair trial and good counsel at court, but they would not surrender. They say that they will defend themselves to the bitter end. The adjutant-general adds that he hopes before long to have the satisfaction of announcing the capture of the

-A Washington telegram to the New York Tribune says: "The investigation by the United States Court of Claims into the various claims against the United States for cotton selzed by the government officers during the rebellion brings out some remarkable developments which tend to throw additional light on the mystery which has surrounded the sale of cotton by the government agents shortly after it was seized from the rebels during the war. The government realized from the sale about $30,000,000, but the examinations of the government agents' books and other evidence which has been obtained through the prosecution of these claims reveals the fact that the cotton was worth over twice that amount. It appears that some of the agents at New York disposed of the cotton at 29 cents a pound, when its market value at the time of the sale was 75 cents per pound. Some of the agents appear to have been in collusion with the purchasers, and the poorest kinds of cotton were shown as samples of the entire lot held by the government, the bidders getting it by this arrangement at the low figure of twenty-nine cents per pound, and subsequently selling it at the market price, thereby securing a handsome profit. The claimants, however, refuse to base their claims at a figure less than its market value at the time of the sale, and it is feared that the government will, in refusing the money for these cotton seizures, be a considerable loser, especially now that the British claimants stand a chance before the mixed commission of being allowed some compensation for these losses. It is now known at the Treasury that several of these cotton agents defrauded the government out of large amounts of money. The accounts show this, but what steps the United States will take to recover its just dues have not been decided upon." The Chicago Times prints a remarkable story, which is credited to a member of the Societe Internationale, whose headquarters are in Paris, and attempts to prove that the destruction of Chicago was the work of incendiaries. The first organization of the Societe in Chicago was made about eight months ago, and when its members found that they could not accomplish what they desired by peaceable means, the burning of Chicago was suggested. Several attempts were made before they succeeded. The author of this story says that George Francis Train, a member of the Societe on Sanday evening preceding the fire uttered these words: "This is the last public address that will be delivered within these Council may adopt. The installation the City of Chicago. More I cannot say; more I dare not utter !" He adds that "it was well for Train that he closed as he did, for there were half a score of hands grasping half a score of pistols that would have checked any further utterance forever." The fire, and asserts that two of the original founders of the organization in Chicago met death in the terrible conflagration they had instigated, and he alone is spared. Seven of the men delegated to assist the fire in its progress also perished miserably, while two others are probably maimed for life. "As for myself," he adds, "I have little hope of escaping the vengeance of the Internationals." In a postscript he says : "Let me add one word of warning. Other cities, both in this country and Europe, have been threatened with fire. The Societe Internationale is implacable." In printing this extraordinary statement the Times remarks : "Though it appears at first to be utterly romantic and improbable, there are not wanting confirmatory circumstances. The original explanation of the origin of the fire has been conclusively disproven. It can be altested by every one who listened to Train, at Farwell Hall, on the night of the fire, that he used the language recited above, &c. Little doubt remains that the city was fired in several different places." The informant, professing to be moved by remorse, does not livulge his name.

The New City Government.

The assempt of a few disappointed political adventurers to set aside the Municipal election of August last, has completely and deservedly failed, and we may confidently hope that no further impediment will be thrown in the way of the installation of the Mayor and Aldermen elect. This result, the knowledge of which sped through Charleston with lightning speed on Saturday night, must be hailed with deep satisfaction by every person who has at heart the advancement and the prosperity of the city. take this occasion, therefore, to congratulate the people on the peaceful victory they have won-a victory far higher than the party triumphs which are heralded by peal of bell and roar of cannon; for its fruits will be gathered by the wnole community, and even, in their degree, by the individuals composing the now shivered Ring.

The application for a writ of Mandamus, to compel the acting Board of Aldermen to receive and consider a protest against the election of General Wagener and his aldermen, was indeed a desperate device. Sev eral weeks elapsed before it was even thought of. And in the face of the notorious facts, White, of the Chicago Tribune, in a letter to it had no chance of success before any judge mindful of his official oath and official duty The majority for General Wagener and his Aldermen was nearly eight hundred; their election had been formally announced by the acting Mayor; the overthrow of the corrupt Ring, who had so long plundered the city, was the united work of all classes and conditions of men. With a firm faith in the justice of their cause, the representatives of the popular will came before Judge Graham on Saturday. At the last moment the Ring Lowrys, the Oxendines and Chavises being sought, by a devilish trick, to deprive them of a hearing; but a timely warning made it easy to hoist the Ring engineers with their through prejudice, and the remainder from own petard, and a simple reading of the answer made on behalf of the people convicted the Ring of gross carelessness as well as deliberate tergiversation. Judge Graham swamp and forest land. Finding that he could discharged the rule. The Ring were beaten on the ground of their own choosing. Never was a cunningly contrived plot against the public welfare more quickly and decisively frustrated.

We may expect, then, that the Mayor and Aldermen elect will take their seats, as required by law, on Wednesday next. Then will begin in Charleston a new era-an era of honesty, economy and intelligence in the Municipal government, and of activity, enterprise and cheerful confidence on the part of the people. A government like that with which we have been cursed these three years, is far more hurtful to a community than pestilence or war. Others rise up to take the place of the dead. The waste and ruin of battle may, in time, be repaired. But an extravagant and ignorant administration of public affairs paralyzes the hand and dulls the brain-under it, both restoration and improvement are impossible. A knowledge of these truths was forced, by hard experience, upon this people. They put politics aside, and chose a government which well represents every class, and which all classes may trust. Capital will no longer fear to abide in Charleston. The days of insecurity are at an end. Upon the streets, this day, every eye will be bright and every form erect. A feeling of sober thanksgiving will be found in every honest home. And, before many weeks, trade of all kinds will revive; the wharves will be piled high with freight; the stores will be crowded with customers; the rhythmic fall of hammer and the cheerful ring of trowel will make music where now are stagnant pools and unsightly ruins. No man is so rich or so poor that he will not share in the advantages of the blithe and hopeful time which begins the day after to-morrow.

But, glad as we are, we want no public rejoicing. It is well enough to shout over the battles which parties win, but we need no noisy outburst to celebrate the success which our honest citizens have gained. We hope that there will be no procession, no parade, no gathering of friends or opponents on the occasion of the installation. We have much to do. There is abundant work before us. And we trust that all our people will, without exception, attend as usual to their business, and only show their gladness by sustaining, in every possible way, the measures of reform which the new walls ! A terrible calamity is impending over | should be a plain, matter-of fact affair, without show and without ostentation. And we believe that our people will consult the wishes of the Mayor and Aldermen elect, as well as the highest interests of the city, by wearing their honors meekly, and avoiding anything in the nature of procession, serenade, or public merry-making.

Well Done !

We learn from the Anderson Intelligences that a number of influential gentlemen pro pose to start a steam cotton manufactory at Anderson, having a capital stock of $150, 000. A public meeting approved of the project, and recommend that the organization be known as the "People's Manufac-"turing Company;" that subscriptions be received for thirty days, and that the company be organized when $75,000 have been subscribed. Among the promoters of the enterprise are Colonel James A. Hoyt, Colonel J. P. Reed, Major John B. Moore, and B. F. Crayton, Esq. It is, indeed, encouraging that, in times like these, any of our people should be plucky enough, and thrifty enough, to devote themselves to pushing forward an extensive industrial undertaking, involving a large expenditure of capital. Al success to Anderson!

The Other Side.

At the annual meeting of the Columbia Board of Trade, held last week, speeches were made by Mr. F. Bush, the president of the Greenville and Columbia Railroad Company, and Major Pearce, the agent of Senator Sprague, of Rhode Island. Both of the speakers are Northern Republicans, and, comparatively, new-comers in South Carolina, but they declared themselves delighted the warmth of their reception. Mr. Bush said, "he felt quite as secure, and "found life in all respects as agreeable, as it 'could be in Massachusetts." How does this square with the statements of the anonymous correspondent of the New York Times, who swears that innumerable perils and privations must be faced by any person who comes to South Carolina, and "attempts to live there in open, yet unobtrusive, loyalty to the constitution and government of the "United States ?"
