BOWEN AND THE COUNTY TREASURY .- In the Columbia Phœnix of yesterday we find the following communication from Representative

Bowen:

In your issue of this morning there appears an article, cop'ed from The Gharleston News, which reads as follows:

"Dividing the Spoils—A Lovely Row.—On Saurday last, the county treasurer reported to the cointy commissioners, as by law he is required do, that he had twenty thousand dolars in the treasury subject to their disposition. Whereupon, as The News has beer informed by a prominent county official, the commissioners first religiously made out their own accounts, and drew what they estimated was due them to the ultermost farthing. Their wives and other relatives in county offices were then also paid up in full, not to mention a check also paid up in full, not to mention a check for seven hundred dollars to C. C. Bowen, for services, the nature of which is not stated." The facts of this transaction, Mr. Editor, are

The facts of this transaction, Mr. Editor, are simply these: Some time ago, being in need of money, I applied to A. C. Richmond, E.-q., clerk of the court for Charleston County, for a loan. He not having the money which I required, assigned over to me a claim which he held against the county for services readered. This claim had been approved by Judge Graham. For this the quarty commissioners gave me a check, stating on its face that said check was for services readered the county by A. C. Richmond, Esq.

was for services rendered the county by A. C. Bichmond, Esq.
And now to all those sore headed grumblers who hold fat offices in Charleston County and wish to obtain the wherewith from the county to lobby through a metropolitan police bili, by which they were to be made police commissioners, I will simply say, it they have failed in their undertaking,

"Let the galled jade wince. Our withers are unwrung."

And when the time comes for their re-election, they will need something more than an injunction on the county treasurer to keep others out of the places which they now occupy. Very respectfully, C. C. Bowen.

A MURDERER'S END.

Execution of Sam White for the Marder of W. B. Fidea-Details of the Awful Scene-How Ran Balden Received the Tidings of His Reprieve-The Last Meeting of the Two Criminals, &c., &c.

Samuel White, the negro man convicted at the last term of the Court of General Sessions of the murder of W. B. Fidea, depot agent at Oakley Station, on the Northeastern Railroad, yester lay paid the penalty of his crime by forfeiting his life upon the gallows. The horrible spectacle, as usual, seemed to have a strange ascination for the multitude, and the gates of the jail yard were besieged at an early hour by crowds of men and boys anxious to see the execution. The hanging, however, was, in measure, private, hardly more than a hundred persons besides the officials being present. Admittance could be obtained only by a pass from the sheriff. The weather was dark, damp and cold, and masses of threatening clouds shrouded the face of the sun, throwing a gloom over the faces of the shivering spec-

At the hour of eleven the sheriff ascended the tower, where the felons are confined, and found Sam White in the corridor preparing for his doom. His countenance was of an ashy, sickening hue; but he listened with attention to the words of the Rev. D. J. Quigley. of the Cathedral, who was his religious attendant in this terrible hour. Balden had not been informed of the commutation of his sentence by the Governor, and, under the impression that he too was going out to be hanged, was brought to White's cell, where the two prisoners confronted each other. Balden here asseverated his innocence, and repeated that he had nothing whatever to do with the murder. Upon being interrogated as to Balden. White confirmed this statement. As to himself, White declared that he had not killed Mr. Fidea, but that the man who committed the crime had escaped. Being asked who this man was, he replied that he (White) was going to die for the deed, and there was no use in saying any more about it. He then asked to

The prisoners accordingly were left with the priest, and the sheriff and his officers descending to the yard, proceeded with the final preparations. There was little to be done. The heavy weight was on the spring, and a strong one inch rope was passed through the top piece, and tied securely to the weight. The other end hung down in the middle, between the posts. A small hempen rope, about a third of an inch in diameter, was quickly fashioned into a running noose, and fastened to the longer rope. The weight was then let down once to ascertain whether it would draw the noose to the required height, and having been again replaced, everything awaited the coming of the doomed man. In the meantime the neighboring plazzas and house tops had become crowded with curious gazers. Among the spectators was the father-in-law of the murdered Fidea, who had come down and wanted "to see the thing done." Those within the enclosure were now marshalled to the right and left of the gallows, and soon a subdued murmur told that the prisoner was coming. He was attended by the priest, and was neatly dressed in a white shirt and pair of brown pants. He wore no hat or coat, and his shirt collar was thrown back, revealing his muscular neck. He walked with a firmness which belied the pailor of his face. On arriving at the foot of the gallows he was confronted by Sheriff Mackey, who read the sentence of the court, and telling him that he was about to be executed for the crime, asked if he had anything to say. White, who had a chew of tobacco in his mouth, cleared his throat, and, with a shake of his head, said he had "nothing." The prisoner now knelt with the priest upon the damp ground, and prayed long and with much apparent fervor, the spectators standing hushed and with uncovered After hearing the arguments on the appeal of the Bank of the State of South Carolina from the report of Registrar Jaeger, in the matter tinually spoke with the priest, and at length broke forth into a hymn. He was now made to stand directly under the fatal noose, and while his hands and feet were being secured he addressed himself to various persons present, particularly one of the turnkeys, whom he exhorted to repent and meet him in heaven, and to whom he also gave a chew of tobacco, and asked him to pray for the giver while using it. He then prayed aloud with the priest, and this being ended the sheriff stepped forward and adjusted a white stockinet cap over the prisoner's head and face. As it came over his mouth, White asked them to stop until he could spit out his chew of tobacco, and having done so the cap was fitted on. The noose was then tightened gradually around the neck, and the knot adjusted with care beneath the left ear. He stood thus for, a moment when the sheriff gave the signal. The Jack Ketch gave a quick pull to the rope attached to the iron spring, and while the weight came down with a crash into the deep hole, the body of White was jerked violently upward, within; a few inches of the cross-piece of the gallows, and then came down with a heavy thud. The rope tightened and cut into the neck as the body swayed from side to side in muscular contortions. For about three minutes, the strong life struggled within the body, and heavy sighs could be heard. Then the limbs grew still, and the widely distended eyes could be seen beneath the stockinet cap as they almost burst from > swung slowly around and faced the vast assemblage on a neighboring plazza, as if in stern rebuke of their idle curiosity. It was Balden's turn next, and, all unconscious of his reprieve, he was brought out upon the scene with the body of White dangling from the tree before his eyes. His ghastly pallor was terrible to look upon, and the sheriff hastened to read the Governor's proolamation. As he read, the prisoner for the first time began to realize his escape, and the spasmodic movements of his body wer curiouse to behold. He began slowly at first to move from side to side, rising a little; then he rose higher and higher by starts, as if each beat of his heart sent him up to the air, until he was turned away and led reeling back to his prison house. He will be conveyed to the penitentiary as soon as possible.

The body of White hung for thirty minutes, and was then cut down. Dr. Robert Lebby and the physician of the Jail, Dr. Bosemon. then made an examination, and, finding life quite extinct, the body was turned over to the coroner to be buried at Potters' Field. The neck had been dislocated, but not broken, Joseph E. Johnson, a colored man, acted as Jack Ketch on the occasion. He was a special detective on the force during the official term of Lieutenant Philippy.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Second Thomas Concert. The weather was not much better yesterday than on Thursday, but the Academy of Music was filled last night by as enthusiastic an audience as we have ever seen in Charleston. Every number in the programme was heartly applauded, but the demands of the audience were only complied with in two instancesthe concert) for violin by Mr. Listemann, and Rubenstein's famous caprice, by Miss Krebs. The chorus and march from Lohengrin, which closed the first part, was a new revelation to Charleston. It was listened to with breathless attention, and cheered vociferously. Schubert's theme and variations appeared to move the audience profoundly, and Mr. Listemann's rondo was received in a way that induced him to gratify the audience a second time. How long is it since so accomplished a violinist has played in Charleston ! Strauss's valse, delivered with indescribable grace and fire, caused eyes to sparkle and neads to wave all over the house. Gounod's saltarello, grandly played, concluded the performance. The allegro from Beethoven's eighth symphony was the gem of the eve-

Miss Krebs was more successful, if that be possible, than in the first concert. She has taken the city by storm.

At the request of a number of amateurs, who appreciate fine classical music, we beg Mr. Thomas to aid to his programme for the concert to-night the Nacht Gesang of Jean Vogt. This, by courtesy of Mr. Thomas, might be given as an encore.

The Matinee This Afternoon. There will be a Thomas matinée at two clock this afternoon, when the price of admission is reduced to one dollar. The programme is as follows:

PART FIRST. Overture-"Martha," Flotow; Andante-Overture—"Martna," Flotow; Andante— First Symphony, Beethoven; Invitation à la Danse, Weber, (Instrumentation by Hector Beriloz;) Capriccio, B. Minor, op. 22, Mendels-soln; Miss Marie Krebs and Orchestra; Introfuction-Chorus and March, Wagner, 3d Ac Lohengrin. PART SECOND.

Overture—"Zampa," Herold; Trasumerie— (by request) Schumann; Waltz—Thousand and One Night, Strauss; Prayer—"Moses in Egypt," B.*sini; Polka Mazurka, Devil's Darning Needle, and Polka Schnell, Thunder and Lighthing, Strauss; March—"Dueppler Storm," Piefae. Anything more attractive than this could hardly be found. We shall be disappointed if the Academy is not crowded to suffocation. The Concert To-Night. The last concert of the Thomas Company takes place to-night. This, after the matinée, is the only remaining opportunity of hearing the finest orchestra in America. We need say no more.

Blind Tom. The bilnd negro planist had a much larger audience last evening than at the two previous concerts. Tom, as usual, seemed in the best of spirits, and played delightfully. His singing was, also, much applauded; and his spelling brought down the house. One of his most amusing acts is spelling out the name of some article by the notes on the plano. One of the audience holds up a handkerchief, for instance, and the manager strikes a few notes from which Tom spells the name of the article with astonishing gusto. His last concert in this city takes place this evening. MONTHLY UNION FOR PRAYER .- At the close of the recent week of prayer it was agreed to continue these profitable gatherings of all the evangelical denominations, statedly, throughout the year. On the Monday succeeding the first Sabbath of the month a union meeting for prayer will accordingly be expected. Each will be conducted by one of the ministers of the city in rotation, while all the ministers and members of the churches also are invited freely to participate in the exercises. The first of these meetings will be held on Monday-afterto participate in the exercises. The first of noon next, 5th, at four o'clock, at Trinity Church, Hasel street. Subject: 'The benefit's of Christian union." If the weather is unfavorable, the meeting will be postponed until the second Monday P. M.

This excellent brand of FERTILIZER comes before the public well recommended. OFFICE OF THE STATE INSPECTOR OF FERTILIZERS, March Sist, 1871.

Messre, J. A. Ension & Co.: Gentlemen—Enclosed please find the analysis of the sample of "Middletoh's F.sh Ammoniated Phosphate," selected by my assistant from the cargo just arrived. The large amount of organic matter, rich in ammonia, and the highly soluble condition of the phosphoric acid, are sufficient recommendations for this article. I feel sure that the planter will be benefited by its judicious application to cutton and other crops. Respectfully, your obedient servant, fitted by its judicious application to cutton and other crops. Respectfully, your obedient servant, (Signed) C. U. SHEPARD, JR., M. PACIFIC GUANO.

PRICE, $45 CASH, WITH USUAL ADVANCE FOR TIME.

Experience in the use of this GUANO for the past six years in this State, for Cotton and Corn, has so far established its character for excellence as to render comment unnecessary.

In accordance with testablished policy of the Company to furnish the est Concentrated Fertilizer at the lowest cost to consumers, this Guano is put into market this season at the above reduced price, which the Company is enabled to do by reason of its large facilities and the reduced cost of manufacture.

The supplies put into market this season are, as heretofore, prepared under the personal superint endence of Dr. St. Julian Ravenel, Chemist of the Company, at Charleston, S. C., hence planters may rest assured that its quality and composition its precisely the same as that heretofore sold.

At the present low price, every acre planted can be fertilized with 200 pounds Guano at a cost not exceeding the present value of 30 pounds of cotton, while experience has shown that under a dayorable condition of season and cultivation, the crop is increased by the application from two to three-fold the natural capacity of the soil, hence under no condition could its application fail to compensate for the outlay.
