NEWS OF THE DAY

-Gold at New York yesterday closed at 94a

_The New York cotton market closed active; uplands 22½c; sales #189 bales. -At Liverpool cotton closed quiet; uplands llallid; Orleans 11; sales 10,000 bales. -Adelina Patti is coming to America next

-Mr. James R. Doolittle and Judge R. B. Carpenter will canvass Connecticut for the Democrats. -Forged Bank of England notes are reported to be in circulation. They are printed on a portion of the bank paper stolen some years

-A German correspondent writes to the Pall Mail Gazette: "The Queen's speech contains a titular mistake. The official title of the Emperor William is 'German Emperor,' and not 'Emperor of Germany,' as he is styled in the speech."

-Three hundred thousand shares of Erle Railway stock were sold on the New York Stock Exchange last Saturday. The entire number of shares issued is about eight hundred and sixty thousand, so that this day's sales are more than one-third of the entire capital.

-The more shrewd and crafty of the Grant Bepublicans are studying how they may capture the Cincinnati Convention, on the 5th of June, and turn it over to Philadelphia and General Grant at a later day in the month-The "little game" is to defeat a nomination, and resofve the meeting into words, "reform" resolutions, &c.

-A New York telegram of Wednesday says "General Sickles stated to-day that he had negotiated a loan of $2,000,000 at five per cent. for the new Erie board, upon securities rating as high as seventy. The new loan can be readily paid of with the earnings in a very short time, and itself is only needed to tide the company over the rough places left by five years of Jay Gould."

-A Washington telegram to the Boston Globe says: "A gentleman just arrived from Columbia, S. C., says Congressional Represen tative Elliott, who has been in Columbia all winter, assisting Governor Scott to fight off impeachment, has made at least $150,000 clear cash on account of the assistance rendered. He has not occupied his congressional seat a single day since Congress convened."

-The Ohio Falls Car Works, at Jeffersonville, Indiana, were destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon. The works were extensive, employing about seven hundred men. Sixteen passenger coaches, nearly finished, and a number of freight and other cars were burned. The loss will reach $500,000. The insurance is about $200,000, mostly in Northern companies. One man is missing, and it is feared he was burned to death. -San Francisco thinks of run street cars with ordinary illuminating gas as a motive power, which it is claimed is cheaper then borseflesh. At the late Mechanics' Fair in that city a gas engine was exhibited by Mr. Pioche, and worked satisfactorily. It will oconpy but tour feet square, and may be run for twelve hours at an expense of not more than three dollars, and one man may act as engineer, conductor and driver." It is claimed that no noise, smoke or danger of explosion will attend its use. -The Western States are now deliberating whether the disfigurement of a wife's complexion by small-pox ought not to be added to the list of legal grounds for divorce. The question has been brought up by the action of several estimable Chicagoans who claim to be justified in deserting their better-halfs for this reason; and it is plausibly argued that, since much less obnoxious conduct on a man's part is daily admitted as good cause for freeing his wife from nuptial bonds, she ought not to be allowed to pit herself against him for life without any chance of his escaping.

-The captain of a steamer from Genoa thus reports the stormy weather which raged in the Atlantic recently: "After leaving Gibraltar the vessel met with fine weather for six days, after which it encountered a continuation of gales from west southwest to north northwest, veering every few hours, and accompanied with squalls of terrific force. During twenty-five years' experience affoat I never encountered such weather. In the squalls the water was actually torn up in sheets and hove in the air. Rain poured in torrents; the mastheads were enveloped in clouds; the lightning fairly blinded us, and the thunder cracked as it were amongst the masts, deafening all on board. Never in the tropic or near the line have I been in such close proximity to the lightning. This weather continued more or less up to the 15th instant, when it gradually moderated, enabling us to make some headway." ...The latest effort to determine the exact spot where once stood the great City of Troy _the Lilon of Homer's Illad—is being made by Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, a German savant, whose name is familiar for his scientific travels in Nicaragua. The doctor commenced his investigations of the basin of the Scamander River in 1871, and selected the site of New lilon, a city built in the sixth or seventh century, B.C., on the supposed location of Troy, but which now no longer exists. The great disadvantage connected with this most interesting research is, that nothing absolutely certain survives to indicate, to begin with, that Troy, even in the days of Homer, was anything more than a fable and a tradition. Dr. Schliemann, however, steadiastly upholds the opinion that a city called Troy once existed, but that its remains have not yet been dis covered. If these ruins can be discovered he says, they may be found only on the spo where New Ilion stood. He has pursued his investigations on Mount Hisarlik, a lofty hill bordering on the alluvial plain of the Scamander. He has dug to a depth of thirty- for these services. As woman's life is one of three feet below the surface of the hill, and has discovered many interesting remains of ing trait in her character should be illustrahuman handlwork in the shape of stone implements of rough manufacture, bronze and copper articles, wide earthen burial vases, urns, tripods, drinking vases, hand-mil's of stone, and house walls, consisting of large marrying young men. It ought never to be stones cemented by mud, idols of a priap-like | done.

exterior, and also rough drawings of owl heads. In the layers nearer the surface, he found a great number of articles made of terra-cotta, and resembling boys' tops. One of these contained a nicely engraved inscription in Phœnician characters, consisting of six letters. Dr. Schliemann does not, however, connect these discoveries with Troy, but, on the contrary, is of the opinion that these mounds are much older than the Trojan war probably by a thousand years or more. An interesting archeological fact in these discoveries is that implements of the stone period are found in layers above that of the bronze or copper period.

For the Benefit of Wall Street.

From the beginning it was evident that the grand object of the late Legislative session was to strengthen, at any cost, the monetary credit of the State. It is true that our legislators held few bonds or stocks themselves, and cared little for the interests of Northern capitalists; but they were given to understand that to leave the State in the financial slough would ruin the Radical party, and that the payment of their own "six dollars a day and mileage" depended upon their prompt adoption of the entire series of monstrous measures offered for their acceptance. They squirmed and protested, but ended by complying with the behests of their masters. The interest on the public debt remained unpaid: the Legislature passed a law requiring the annual levy and collection of a tax sufficient to pay that interest in full.

Doubts were cast upon the validity of several millions of the new bonds: the Legislature passed a law declaring every bond already issued legal and binding upon the

The conservative press had included the railroad endorsements in their reckoning of the State debt : the Legislature gave the Blue Ridge Ring $1,800,000 in consideration of the cancelment of the State endorsement to the amount of four million dol-

It was thought that the Financial Agency might be in the way of the speculative saints who proposed to restore the fiscal fabric to its ante-bellum completeness : the Legislature passed a law authorizing a settlement with the Financial Agent and the suspension of the Agency.

Rumor said that the famous Sterling bonds were about to be issued : the Legislature at once repealed the law and appointed a joint committee, who certify that the bonds are cancelled.

Lastly, at the suggestion of THE CHARLES TON NEWS, the Legislature adopted unanimously a resolution for an amendment to the constitution prohibiting any addition to the State debt, except with the consent of two-thirds of the people at a general election.

This completes the list of remedial financial measures; excepting always the License law. There is not one of them, save the constitutional amendment, of which the mass of the taxpayers approve. They are the work of the officials and the Ring, who, trusting to retain for a decade the control of the State, are determined at all hazards to go on validating and taxing until they have restored the credit of the State in Wall street, and forced its bonds back into the seventies. And the taxpayers are powerless, or, which is much the same thing, they believe that they are so. The legislation of the session has already caused the bonds to advance nearly ten per cent. This may be all very fine for the money lenders and stock jobbers, but it is a terrible wrong to the people of the State.

About Marrying

Forty years ago a bloomit young girl of sixteen married an old man of sixty for his money, expecting that he would soon die and leave her a wealthy young widow. Last week the lady died at the respectable age of fity-six, leaving a husband aged one hundred, and four children to mourn her loss. four children to mourn her loss.

-The above is going the rounds of the press as "a sad mistake." Sad, why sad? We see nothing sad about it. The man at the time of his marriage was not such an old man. Many older men have married. Last year a man ninety-two years old was married in Florida, and he was so fat that he couldn't pull his marriage license out of his breeches pocket, and it had to be cut out with the bride's scissors before the ceremony could be perfected.

As for the young girl of sixteen who married a man of sixty, the assumption that she did so for his money is purely gratuitous. No woman marries for money; and if this one did marry for money she got forty years of comfort and four children. Was there any "mistake" in that? True, she was not left a wealthy young widow. But if she expected to kill off a man of sixty simply by marrying him, she was a great goose, never read her Bible, and knew nothing of the history of Solomon.

No; women do not marry for money or wed with murderous intent. We go further and say that women marry solely out of compassion. Motives of a selfish or mercenary nature never actuate them. They give all to get nothing. Pity is akin to love, and what is more pitiable than an old man? Women ought to marry old men and none other. What earthly use has a young man for a need her. He can drink whiskey, smoke cigars, ride horses, play cards, sit up all night, fly around generally, jump, run, walk, swim, play on the accordeon, eat what he pleases, wear fancy clothes, tight boots, has got no corns, no asthma, rheumatism, is not bald or hip-shot, wears no spectacles, can sleep in damp sheets, and go to the theatre and join the masons, fish, hunt, fight duels, travel, play billiards, part his hair in the middle, get in debt and enjoy himself in every conceivable way. To such a man a wife, especially a young wife, is a superfluity. An old wife, who would act as a mother and guardian to him, might be of service to him. But when a man is in the sere, spavined, wheezy, purblind, broken down, used up and played out, then he really needs a wife, and a young, able-bodied one to take care of him, irritate his scalp with a fine-tooth comb and smooth his pathway to the tomb. And he ought to be able to pay handsomely self sacrifice, that most beautiful and touchted, brought out and developed. This can best be done by marrying an ancient and dilapidated man. The "sad mistake" is in Good Signs for the South.

[From the New York Tribune.] The Southern papers are filled with advertisements of land fertilizers, and the merchants appear to be competing greatly for the sale of them. The demand, it seems, is something quite extraordinary in the South, and is an encouraging sign for the beginning of the plauting season. It is evidence that if the lands are worn their owners are not disposed to leave them in that condition. Proprietors of small cotton mills in the North are beginning to discover that there is some truth in the idea of concentrating their resources, and there are indications that during the present spring a large number of that class of manufacturers are preparing to carry their machinery into factories in the old cotton districts. They will save freight on the raw material, they will get fresher and cheaper labor, and they will find unrivalled natural agencies. With improved and reinvigorated fields, and with a home market for cotton and labor, the South can get along very well, without much politics.

A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By Joseph E. Worcester, LL. D.

2. A COMPREHENSIVE DICTIONARY OF THE ENG-LANGUAGE. By Joseph E. Worcester, LISH LA

A PRIMARY DIOTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By Joseph E. Worcester, Boston: Brewer & Tileston. New York: J. W. Schermerhorn & Co. 1871.

We have received from Mr. George F. Phelps, the Agent of Messrs. Schermerhorn & Co., of New York, copies of the above-named works. The first in the list is the new edition of Worcester's quarto dictionary, which has been prepared with great care, and deserves the high praises which it has everywhere received. As well as we can judge, it is both accurate and complete. The introductory remarks are lucid, and, upon disputed points. present the opinions of the most eminent philologists. We find the definitions clear, impartial, concise, and well sustained by authority. The latest terms in science and art are described, and abundant notes give the student valuable and interesting information on various subjects of importance. Vccabularies are furnished of geographical and proper names, ancient and modern, and there is a full collection of phrases from toreign languages, as well as a key to the pronunciation of classical and scripture proper names, and a list of abbreviations used in writing and printing. 2. The second work on the list is a comb nation of the Comprehensive Dictionary of 1830, and the Pronouncing Explanatory and Synonymous Dictionary of 1855. A large number of words have been added, and in its present form it is admirably adapted for use in high schools, in families and in the counting-room. 3. The third work on the list is a small volume of 388 pages, known as the Primary Dictionary. Technical terms and words which are obsolete, provincial or without authority are omitted, and also many compound and derivative words. It is simple in arrangement,and easy of comprehension, and makes an excellent school manual, and, like the quarto and Comprehensive dictionaries, it is illustrated.

We have only glanced at the main points of the three dictionaries, and return to the big quarto Worcester, with its 104,000 words, for the purpose of showing that it has qualities even more important than its careful arrangement, its thoroughness, and its admirable typography. The popular tendency in America is towards slang, and towards the formation of bastard words which brutalize the language and grate intolerably on the uncultivated ear. Preaching and newspaper writing will not correct the growing evil. They may prevent its increase, but they do not effect a radical cure, which can only be secured by diffusing a knowledge of the origin, structure and laws of our mother tongue. The introductory essay in the quarto dictionary may a taken og anthority upon these subjects Dr. Worcester understood his work, and, of course, avoids the orthographical barbarisms in which Dr. Webster took delight. It is true that, in the later editions of Webster, many changes for the better have taken place. The "Leperd" in 1806 is "Leopard" in 1838, and we "do not read now that "It haz been said that "coquetts often looze their reputation, while "they retain their virtie;" but in no sense are we willing to accept even the last edition of Webster as a safe guide. Worcester, on the other hand, may be trusted. And what we have said of orthography applies to pronunciation.

We do not, in all things, agree with Worcester.

We do not, in all things, agree with Worcester. We do not, in all things, agree with Worcester; but in Webster we have no confidence whatever. The remaining objection to the modern Webster is that its definitions of political words and terms are frequently sectional and unjust, and convey to the reader a wholly wrong idea. We pointed out the other day the changes made in Webster in the definition of such words as constitution, compact, nation, congress and republic. All these words have been defined by the present editor of Webster's Dictionary so as to furnish arguments against the democratic view of our institutions, and against the views of Dr. Noah Webster himself, whose definitions were accepted as correct. Indeed, Dr. Porter's edition of Webster's dictionary is no longer Webster at all. In marked contrast to it is the quarto Worcester, which is colorless in its de-American dictionary, and is the equal of any dictionary now published.

We warmly commend the several editions of Worcester's Dictionary to the favor of the ATMOSPHERIC POISON.—THE Spring sun calls up something besides the flowers wife; what good can she do him? He don't and grasses. It evolves from the damp earth, tur bid rivers, stagnant pools and black morasses, the gaseous provocatives of diseases. From the offal and garbage of unclean cities, too, it inhales an effluvia destructive of health and vigor. Period. ic fevers of various types are now raging with unusual virulence in various parts of the country, and there are complaints from all quarters of singularly unheathy spring. What is to be done in this emergency? The answer is simple and to the point. Strengthen the body. Weakness predisposes the system to disease. Commence at once a course of the most genial of tonics, HOS-TETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Be assured that the germs of epidemic and endemic fevers will never infect the physique that has been fortified and regulated by this glorious vegetable ristorative. A moist at nosphere aggravates dyspensia, and all diseases of a billions type, and the sudden thermometrical changes common at this season are a severe trial even to strong constitutions. There is but one way of combating these deleterious agencies, and that it by invigorating the body, and imparting a healthy activity to all its functions. The only specific required for this purpose is Hostetter's Buters. Of all vegetable tonics and alteratives, it is the purest and the best. Its medicinal ingredients include all the juices and ex tracts of the most approved tonic, anti bilious and antiseptic products of the Botanic Kingdom, and they are combined with a stimulant far superior in quality to the alcohol uses in preparing the tinctures and extracts of the "regular" pharmch18-wfm3D&C
