Of course the Cathedral was thronged with people. ....The cable announces another revolt in Ferrol, one of the provinces of Spain. Its announcement in the Cortes brought forth a disavowal on the part of the A!phonsists and Republican deputies of any complicity or sympathy with the insurgents. These revolts, except those excited by the Carlists, seem to be an impatience on the part of some of the the solid interests of this city. The City of citizens in the correction of abuses by King Aniadeus, who has, with all his ability, set to work to repair the rotten arches of the monarchy to give strength to a government whose only vitality is in the historic memories of a chivalry that has hardly an echo in Its effete grandees, and whose sterling worth can find no hope of assistance from its de portant, in the fullest sense of the word, generate surroundings. This is the reason its most substantial men seek peace in any burden of oppression. The revolts there are more sporadic than epidemic.

-Many amusing stories are told of the youthful eccentricities of Oscar II, the present King of Sweden. He was early noted for his wayward disposition, and his father insisted that his son should be treated by his teacher with the same severity as ordinary school boys. Dissatified with his frequent whippings, Oscar, at the age of twelve, ran away, and was found in the streets of Copen hagen playing marbles with a parcel of litte ragamuffins. At the age of seventeen he was sent to the University of Upsala, and participated in all the practical jokes of the students. In six months, however, he was recalled to Stockholm, where, among other exploits, he was in the habit of running to all the fires in the capital, and of working with the utmost vigor at the engines. When the Princess Sophia, of Nassau, was selected as his wife Prince Oscar went secretly to Lubeck, and, in disguise, travelled with the lady on the steamer that conveyed her to Stockholm. having adopted this method of ascertaining for himself the character and personal appearance of his intended bride.

-A writer in the New Orleans Picayune recommends the introduction of a kind of ant from Central America to destroy the cotton and boll worm in the Southern States. He says: "During a long residence in Central America I have noticed the habits of a very diminutive ant called the terrier ant. No insect will approach its habitation. It is perfectly harmless to vegetation, and will not permit any insect or even animal to encroach upon their premises under penalty of death. They do not bulki nests like other ants, but live anywhere wuere there is not a dense tropical shade. The first occasion that the writer had to test the destructive attacks of the terrier ant on insect life was when stung by a stinging scorpion contained in the sleeve of his coat-an insect very te nacious of life, yet in less than three minutes after it was given to the ants it was dead. A centipede, covered with a hard armor, suffered the same face in four minutes and a few seconds. A tarantula died in less than two minutes. A anake nine feet long in fifteen minntes. New York: Robert Carter & Bros. Charleston: Fogartie's Book Store. Pp. 218.

Dr. Macduff is very well known as a writer on Scripture history, and his present volume has considerable literary and historical merit. The lives of the Warrior Judges of Israel are narrated with many picturesque details, and in a sympathetic and hearty spirit. His descriptions of the topography of Palestine are based upon the latest and most trustworthy researches, and altogether the book will interest readers of almost any age, and will be especially valuable for its exhibition of the real human interest which clusters around the names and adventures of such patriots and is very plain that if any citizen were to heroes as Barak and Deborah and Gideon and pursue this course in his business dealings Jephthan and Samson. We can cordially recommend the volume.
