TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1872.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Alphonse Karr, it is said, keeps in his study the skull of a woman who, in life, was the lady of his love.

-New York wine dealers threaten a heavy advance in the price of champagne, in consequence of the fallure of this year's vintage in -The International Insurance Company, of New York, will pay its Boston losses in full, from the surplus above its capital. It is now thought that the company may be revived. Its policy-holders are, at all events, secure. -Warrants have been issued by a United States commissioner for the arrest of Susan B. Anthony and fourteen other females who voted at Rochester, N. Y., at the late election. The parties will probably be brought into court next week.

-Japan is rapidly adapting herself to Western civilization. . The department of religion there has issued a document in lavor of tolera-Non to all religious creeds; they have, moreover, adopted the police system of the United States, and their first railroad was opened on the lath of October last from Yeddo to Yokohama, the Emperor presiding over the ceremonies and passing over the road. In the Paris theatres professional laugh-ers are employed, who engage to indulge in the most contagious hillarity, the time for their merriment being previously arranged. A few nights since the programme was changed without the laugher's knowledge, and when he burst forth aproarlously in the midst of a touching couplet about Alsace and Lorraine, the audience nearly killed him.

M. F. Brewster, an American, who killed the Count di Parma, a lieutenant of the National Guard, of Italy, in a duel some months ago, has recently been arrested in Naples. The duel originated in the Count di Parma making insulting remarks about American institutions to Mr. Brewster, in a fashionable cafe in Leghorn, which Brewster resented with a blow, for which he was challenged by the count. They met near Leghorn-fifteen paces were measured, the combatants were blindfolded, pistols were the weapons used, and the Count di Parma fell at the first fire.

...The largest bridge in the world is said to be the Tensas and Mobile bridge, on the Mobile and Montgomery Bailroad. Its length is fif-Rivers, and includes ten draws, one for each of the navigable channels into which the rivers are divided. The bridge itself is constructed of wood, but its pillars or supporters are iron cylinders, which rest on a solid sur face of wooden piles, driven down evenly with the bottom of the stream and the mud and intervening morasses. It has been three million five hundred thousand dollars.

Potatoes have recently undergone a considerable rise in the markets of Paris. This heavy advance is attributed to the large purchases made in France by the English dealers, who are going through the country near Paris and buying up all the potatoes and sending them off by rallway to the northern ports to be shipped to Great Britain. In consequence of this extraordinary rise in the price the French minister of the interior has ordered weekly returns to be made to him of the quantity of potatoes exported in order to adopt the proper measures in case of a scarcity in this useful root. It is, therefore, probable that should the price continue to rise, the exportation of potatoes from France will be prohibited.

-One of the most touching incidents of de votion the world has ever known was the last act in the life of John Walker, the fireman on one of the engines which came in collision on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad a week ago. He was caught between the footboard and the hot wall of the engine's turnace, and, from the horrible position, it was impossible to extricate him. When he first realized the frightful death awalting him he implored those around him to kill him at once, rather than allow him to die slewiy. Then in a moment becoming calm, with that perfect self-renunciation with which life begins, he forgot his own agony, and, with his dying hand, wrote a farewell message to his wite, that she might know his last thoughts were of her. -Harvard University has lost heavily by the Boston fire. It held property in the burnt district to the amount of $562,000. This amount includes the value of the land. It will cost $300,000 to rebuild. Towards this it has $100,000 of good insurance out of the $216,000 for which it was insured. The permanent loss is thus reduced to $200,000. "Ihis," says President Eilot, "we must beg." By the losses of the fire the university is out off from about $40,000 of rents until it can rebuild, Some of the most essential expenditures of the university were made from this income. Several of the professors' salaries were paid from it; a portion was used for the repair of buildings, and the remainder was used in the every-day needs of the college. -The Cincinnati Enquirer says that the great fire in Boston will fall with crushing weight upon Chicago. The East, and Boston especially, has furnished for years the capital which made Chicago blossom. It is Boston's money which is now rebuilding the city. The business men of Chicago are burdened with debt, and their creditors are chiefly Eastern men. They have been obtaining from them unlimited accommodation, extensions, and moneyed favors. All this must cease. The current of sympathy will now set toward Boston, and Chicago's throat for the time is, to all intents, cut. The surplus capital of the East, which has steadily flown westward for investment, will for months to come be needed at home. Chicago has sustained by the Boston fire a loss half as great as her original calamity. -A correspondent of the New York Sun suggests the following device to avert large confiagrations: If a blanket had been steeped in water and hung up in front of the hottest fire in Boston or Chicago, and kept thorough-mained unscorched to the last. If any one will take a piece of paper, and shaping like a cup, filling it with water, the paper thus filled may be held close over a gas-light and an egg bolled in the water, and the water itself pass off in steam, yet the paper will remain unscorched so long as the water shall be supplied to it. Had a woollen vell, anywhere, been interposed between the fire and threatened buildings (in Boston and Chicago,) and this woollen veil kept perfectly saturated with water, is it not clear that no fire could have passe that watered woollen barrier? One word more; bricks, with such good mortar as was formerly used in Philadelphia, are, beyond comparison, in every respect a better fireproof than iron or granite.

-All about London, says an English correscondent, you see advertised, "Cheap funerais." You can be shrouded, coffined and buried, with four mourners, for about twenty dollars. Of course the mourners don't know who you are, where you came from, or where you are going to; but they look as though you were the last friend they had, or expected to have on earth, with a yard of black crape dangling and waving from their hats like so many pirate flags; and when you are covered up they will adjourn to the nearest public nouse, and, over their porter and cheese, pray for some one else to die as soon as possible, with cash enough to be mourned over. No cash here, no mourners. All these professional mourners have red faces and bottle-noses. black suits, second-hand, well luked at the seams, and black gloves one-third too large. The friends and relatives within the carriages have all the semblance of woe upon them. The last appear contented, and many never enjoy a ride in a coach save on such mournful occasions. Who ever saw any one shed tears at a city funeral? If you would have your irlends "weep not for me when I am gone," die in the metropolis. Tears are for the country along with dew, flowers, sunshine, snakes and hoptoads.

IT WILL be seen by the official announcement, printed in another column, that THE CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "is designated as "the newspaper for the publication of all 'legal notices, and official advertisements, for the County of Charleston, under the act of February 22d, 1870, entitled an act to regulate the publication of all legal and 'public notices."

Our Cotton Manufactures.

The census returns enable us to gather some very interesting comparative statistics of the manufactures of cotton in the United States for the years ending with the two decades-1860 and 1870. The returns for 1870 are much more complete in respect to details than those for 1860; and for 1850 very few figures were given-hardly sufficlent, indeed, to institute an intelligent comparison.

A notable circumstance is a falling off in the number of establishments in 1870 of about 12% per cent. This is undoubtedly due to the natural tendency of industries of this nature to concentrate in great establishments; and also to the fact that, at the beginning of the war, many cotton factories vere transformed into woollen mills. That it has no other significance is demonstrated by the fact that the number of looms were increased in the last decade nearly 241 per cent., and the number of spindles more than 28 per cent. There is even a greate increase in the amount of capital employed, about 30 per cent.; but this must be attribated entirely to the increased value of land, buildings and machinery, for with the reduced number of establishments greater number of looms and spindles could be employed with a smaller amount of actual investments. The increase in the amount rse of construction, and cost one of wages paid is nearly 43 per cent., a ratio much exceeding the increase in any other Item but one, and has doubtless proved a serious embarrassment to progress in the development of this branch of our manufactures. The statistics of the materials used exhibit a notable discrepancy. In 1870, as compared with 1860, there was a falling off in the quantity of raw cotton used of 24,402,718 pounds, or nearly six per cent; and yet the value thereof in 1870 was $54,451,402, or more than 94 per cent. greater than in 1860. Let us see, then, what our manufacturers paid for labor and raw materials in the two years under review: 1860. 1870. $ 23,938,236 Labor$ 39,044,132 rials..... 111,736,936 $ 81,223,772 Total.....$150,781,068

81.223.772 69.557.296 or about 85 per cent According to unofficial records, the prices of cotton goods in the New York market were as follows for the two years:

Average for 1870. Standard sheetings, per yard.....14.58 cts. 8.78 cts. Printing cloths, per yard..... 7.14 cts. 5.44 cts.

21.72 cts. The increase in the price of standard sheetings were nearly 75 per cent., but in printing cloths only 311 per cent., the net increase being a little more than 50 per cent, against an increase of 85 per cent. in the cost of labor and raw material. And School of Medicine and the upper School of yet the manufacture of cotton goods has increased and prospered through improved skill and better economy and the concentration of capital. The figures also show that from a smaller quantity of raw material a greater quantity of goods was produced; a fact which is of course to be attributed to the average lighter weight of the fabrics produced.

Of the 956 cotton manufactories in the United States 191 were in Massachusetts, 139 ln Rhode Island, 138 in Pennsylvania, 111 in Connecticut, and 81 in New York; aggregating 667, or more than two-thirds of the whole. New Jersey has 27, New Hampshire 36, Maine 23, Maryland 22, North Carolina 33, Georgia 34, and Tennessee 28. There were none in the Territories, except Utah, and the following States: California, Oregon, Nevada, Nebraska, Minnesota, Kansas, Michigan, Wisconsin and West Virginia.

Some curious facts are ... veloped respecting labor and capital. In 1870 13,341 more hands were employed to manufacture into goods 24,400,000 pounds less cotton than in 1860. To manipulate this reduced quality of raw material $41,200,000 more capital was required than in 1860. The increase in the amount of capital employed was 43 per ly drenched by the engines, it would have re- cent., and in the number of hands 11 per cent. The average annual wages were in 1870 $288 per capita, and in 1860 $196, showing an increase of $92 per head per annum or 47 per cent. The aggregate amount of wages paid is 63 per cent. higher than in 1860; while the increase in the value of the product is 53 per cent; which leads to the very important conclusion that labor now takes a much larger proportion of the value of the product than in 1860. Or, to put the matter in another form, in 1870 the value of the product per head of operatives was $1311, and in 1860 $948, showing an increase of value in the per capita production of $363, or 38½ per cent; and yet with this gain of 381 per cent. in the value of the product of each hand, the average hand gets 47 per cent. more wages; which is but another way of arriving at the conclusion

Emulating John Bull's Muscle.

It troubles a small proportion of the youth of New York that they are physically the inferiors of the English. Roast beef and unlimited beer, they very rationally think, will not entirely account for the fact. The prolonged heat of the climate, that dries up the Americans, and hasty meals and business eagerness and excitement, that bring on dyspeptic gauntness, are also not at the root of this matter still persist these incorri-gible young men. There is this behind all these theories, the fact that the English people exercise more in the open air than we do. Even the ladies brave all weathers, wear thick shoes and waterproofs, and can do their twelve miles any day with ease. The New York Athietic Club proposes, therefore, to try the tonic of the breezy morn; to walk, to ride, to row, and to get up their muscle by every means that can be employed by young men emulative of their brawny cousins across the water. It is a short fever that will soon

The Law's Delay.

In 1864, a suit was tried before the New York Court of Common Pleas for the recovery of the value of a large quantity of cotton burned on the freight pier of a railroad company in that city. The jury gave a verdict of $118,000 damages in favor of the owner of the cotton. The case was then taken up through successive tribunals, until it finally reached the Court of Appeals, which sent back the suit to the Common Pleas for retrial, on the ground that the judge had ruled out evidence that the destruction of the cotton was not owing to any negligence on the part of the railroad company. The second trial of this important case has just begun in New York, and will last for over a week. If the matter is again taken up to the Court of Appeals the plaintiff will probably have to wait eight years longer for his money.
