The Charleston News.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1873.

THE CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "is designed as the newspaper for the publication of all legal notices, and official advertisements."

"for the County of Charleston, under the act of February 22, 1870, entitled an act to regulate the publication of all legal and public notices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Death is still the penalty for arson in Virginia and Maryland.

The East India cotton crop is one-fifth larger this year than last.

The name "grass widow" is of French origin. It is derived from the French "grace" and originally meant a widow by courtesy.

Cincinnati couples can go to the Rev. Mr. Youm for matrimony, and to Lawyer Severance for divorce.

hundred Italian lazzaroni. All the immigrants seemed to have suffered very much from want of food and proper accommodations in a rough passage. In the two vessels, the Smidant and Columbus, from Bremen, thirty persons died and were thrown overboard. It is stated that for twenty days the immigrants were fastened down in the hold with very little to eat. The New York Sun says: "The Italians are of the poorest classes of Rome and Genoa, many of whom were not able to pay their passage."

Fighting the Blue Ridge Scip. It is many a day since the taxpayers of South Carolina have beheld so cheering a sight as the determined stand taken in their behalf by Comptroller-General Hoge, against levying a tax for the payment of the Blue Ridge scrip. It is plain enough that the Comptroller is thoroughly in earnest. Convinced that the whole scheme for the issue of the scrip was, from beginning to end, an iniquitous conspiracy to defraud the State, he is evidently bent upon exhausting every expedient known in the courts to save the people from the consequences of a silly and unconstitutional enactment of their Legislature. In his plucky resistance to what everybody knows to be a great public wrong, the Comptroller has the zealous and efficient support of Attorney-General Melton, and the eminent abilities of the Hon. C. G. Meminger have also been enlisted in the good cause.

The Louisiana Case. The tone of the entire press of the North—the New York Times always excepted—in regard to the outrageous treatment to which the people of Louisiana have been subjected at the hands of the Federal authorities, is cheering, and indicates a healthy awakening of popular indignation. We give some extracts, chiefly from Administration Journals, which will serve to show our readers the drift of Northern public opinion: "The New York Independent—a politico-religious paper—which has been a thick-and-thin supporter of Radicalism in everything, says: "We are not alarmists, and certainly not hostile to the President; yet the principles involved in this Louisiana dispute go to the very life of our system of government. They raise an issue in respect to which we cannot be indifferent. If the results of State elections can be determined in the way in which they were determined in Louisiana, and if the executive power of the President may be invoked to sustain these results, then, indeed, we have reached the end of State Governments. They exist only by sufferance. The very provision of the Constitution which was intended for their protection in an extreme case, becomes the instrument of their destruction. We can have no sympathy with, and lend no support to, such a fatal centralization as this implies."

And the Golden Age (Theodore Tilton) expresses the same ideas in equally forcible words: "The policy pursued by the administration toward Louisiana is not only in violation of the Constitution and a marked departure from the traditions and spirit of the Government in its dealing with the State; it is a dangerous one. If the President can make and unmake a State Government in Louisiana, what shall hinder his making a government for Missouri or New York? If these recent usurpations in New Orleans are sanctioned by Congress, and allowed to go unrebuked by the people, what shall hinder similar and even greater usurpations in any and every State in the Union? Admit the right of the Federal authorities to unmake and make State Governments at will, and the republic is virtually at an end. Doubtless President Grant did not propose at the first to interfere with the legitimate authorities and local affairs of Louisiana. But the spirit of his administration is military, and he is necessarily inclined to arbitrary methods and acts. He is more of a commander-in-chief than a President, and forgets that the nation is not an army, of which the States are merely corps and detachments."

The Herald, which gave powerful aid to the re-election of Grant, and promised us a world of good things from his second term, puts forth by Heron: "The weakness of Mr. Heron's case shows the outrageous usurpation of Judge Durell's court. Under the cover of a law which confers upon this court special jurisdiction to give relief to a person who, being a candidate for any office except elector for President or Vice-President, member or delegate in Congress, or member of the State Legislature, is defeated in the election and deprived of his office in consequence of the denial of the right to vote of any citizen on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, Judge Durell interposed to prevent the regular State Returning Board from declaring the result of the election, to give a pretended legality to the existence of the bogus Heron Board, and to place in office such members of the State Legislature as Heron and his associates, without a single official record to guide them, chose to declare duly elected. To accomplish this flagrant usurpation Judge Durell, with the co-operation of a partisan United States marshal, surrounded the Statehouse with cannon and Federal bayonets; held armed possession of the halls of legislation, seized upon the State armory, disarmed the State militia, and thus assisted in the displacement of the Governor of the State, the breaking up of independent State courts, the suppression of a free press, and all the other outrages which have followed in the wake of Federal interference. It is these felonious assaults upon the constitutional rights of a State—these indications that the liberties of the people may be held at the mercy of any partisan Federal court, backed up by Federal bayonets—that have started and alarmed the people. Apart from this they care nothing about the squabbles of the Louisiana scoundrels and carpetbaggers, and would be only too glad if their fight could have a termination similar to that which resulted from the battle of the historical cats of Kilkenny."

Good Cooking. A contemporary very clearly states a truth which has often been impressed by practical experience, that the good health of the community depends more upon good cooking than upon anything else. Better, it says, wear ill-fitting clothes, tight boots, live in houses that shrink, and crack, and tumble down, use furniture that comes to pieces, and travel over roads like most of our city streets, than to eat ill-cooked food. Cooking is the only art that is nowhere systematically taught, and great waste of materials is the result, as well as disease. The waste of fuel, also, is enormous, from the ignorance of women in regard to the management of ranges and cooking stoves. More of practical lessons in our private schools for girls in this line would be an advantage. Home education, by competent heads of families, on the subject is also very desirable. If a large portion of the attention which is given to dress, of which there is an over and ally abundance, was directed to the careful study and practice of cooking, so as to attain to excellence and economy in the art, good health would be promoted. Good dispositions would naturally follow; for dyspepsia, engendered from badly cooked food, would no longer beget bad temper, and the peace of the household and the happiness of the family would be generally improved.

The Fuel Question in England. Some substitute for coal as fuel would be particularly acceptable to England just at present. The miners there threaten to strike, the mines themselves are becoming daily more expensive to work, and the price of coal is consequently becoming a serious matter. Wood, of course, there is none; and the use of charcoal, so common in France, would be impossible to an English cook. So, lately, the use of chalk has been mooted. Chalk is known to burn well; and limestone throws out a fierce heat. It retains combustion also for a considerable time. This fuel England can obtain in any desired quantity. The "White Cliffs of Albion" are formed of it, and would last many years. Even if a mixture is made of chalk and coal, there will be so common an article answers just in time so common a purpose. It will be only the case of those "hard, black stones," as coal was at first called, over again. For many years that were known, but it was only after repeated experiments and much ridicule that they were used as fuel.

Railway Means. The New York Observer is anxious to have the European plan of taking meals on railway trains adopted in this country. The writer gives an incident that happened in Europe. Booming hungry, a friend advises him to order dinner: "The telegraph carried the order ten miles ahead in a moment, and when the train drew up at the next station, the door was opened, and a circular basket, three feet high and one foot in diameter, was put into our compartment. Upon the top were knife and fork, spoon and napkin, a bottle of water and a glass, and a large roll. Opening a door in the side of the basket, we saw four shelves; on each shelf a dish. The first was a hot soup, vegetables, and the fourth had a chicken and salad. A bunch of delicious grapes was also found on one of the shelves. At the next stopping place a porter received the basket and the pay. There really is no reason why travellers should not enjoy a quiet dinner or lunch if they please in this way. Everyone who in travelling has taken a well-filled basket, and felt himself indignant at the "twenty minutes for refreshment" bawled in his ears, knows the comfort of the fashion. If the neatness and skill of the French in getting up an appetizing little repast could be transported over here, with the custom itself, it would be a most delightful innovation. We fear that our Mugby Junctions are as yet in little danger of sanitation.

Stanley's Book. How I Found Livingstone: Travels, Adventures and Discoveries in Central Africa, including an Account of Four Months' Residence with Mr. Livingstone. By Henry M. Stanley. New York: Scribner, Armstrong & Co. This is the book for which the reading public have been on the tip-toe of expectation for months. It is a stout octavo of almost eight hundred pages of letter press, embellished with maps and illustrations from the author's sketches, contains a narrative of Stanley's Journey into Central Africa in search of Livingstone, and an account of the geographical discoveries which he made there. As far as comment is concerned, Stanley's expedition is exhausted. Every thing that should have been said has been said, and very much besides that should not. The present book gives all the details of interest to the public in a popular style. Mr. Stanley's writing is very diffuse, though at times not lacking in picturesque effect. The illustrations are very numerous. The work is sold only by subscription. Fogartie's Depository is the agency for Charleston.
