The Charleston News.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 9, 1873.

THE CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "is designed as the newspaper for the publication of all legal notices, and official advertisements, for the County of Charleston, under the act of February 23d, 1870, entitled an act to regulate the publication of all legal and public notices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Mr. Samuel Sinclair has offered his resignation as publisher, to the stockholders of the New York Tribune. It was accepted.

—It is reported that a French surgeon has now inserted successfully into the skulls of his dogs watch crystals, through which he can observe the processes of the canine brain during sleep, in digestion, when influenced by rage or other emotion, and its normal movements.

—A party of boys have been arrested near Albany, living in a hut, where they "played Robinson Crusoe," and supported themselves by killing the hens and chickens of the neighborhood, under the apprehension that they were wild animals. The savages in the guise of policemen appeared on the scene and overthrew the encampment.

—A great cock-fight, Troy vs. New York, took place on the 27th, somewhere between Albany and Troy, or between New York and Albany. Each party entered fifteen birds—500 on each fight, and $5000 on the odd. Troy won. A great deal of money was lost and won, and the fighting was bloody enough to satisfy the greatest thirst for blood. The place of combat and the parties were kept concealed to avoid the police.

—Some of the mercantile firms of Boston, whose houses escaped untouched during the late fire, have since devoted a good deal of attention to the subject of fire extinguishing appliances. One of the leading dry goods houses has just been provided with force pumps of such power as to be capable of sending water from the engine-room, through iron pipes, to the top of the building, each floor having a connection to admit of the use of a special hose. The clerks, to the number of sixty-five, are being drilled, so that upon the slightest alarm they may be available for duty.

—A New York reporter has scouted out a new business. He saw a sign, "Dress coats for balls and holidays, &c., for hire," and of course went into the shop and interviewed the proprietor. Swallow-tailed coats are hired three dollars a wear—twenty-five dollars deposit—sometimes vests, but never pants. A gentleman never likes to wear another man's trousers. The proprietor says he is the only man in the business in the city, and he has a good thing of it. His principal customers are not men who are too poor to purchase dress suits, but those who want to go to a ball, or to a fancy party, and who do not want to go home and dress for the occasion. Impertinent inquiries might be made and objections interposed in their own dressing-rooms, and so they just step into the accommodating coat-lender's and avoid trouble and contention, and he is quietly making a fortune.

—The English ship Challenger has just been placed at the command of a surveying expedition that will be one of the most important of the century. Our little Hassler expedition sinks into insignificance beside it. The Challenger will be gone three or four years. By dredging, and by extensive observations of every description, the ocean—its depths and its inhabitants—will be thoroughly explored. The vessel will visit Bermuda, the coast of America, the Cape of Good Hope, New Zealand, New Guinea, the Celebes, the Torres Strait and the Aru Islands and India Ocean. Then, again, into the Pacific, when she will touch at the Pelow Islands and Japan, and cross over to Vancouver's Island and to Valparaiso, and then through the Magellan Straits, and to Rio Janeiro. The Challenger will circumnavigate the globe, and traverse the three great oceans from north to south, and from east to west, and make one of the most thorough explorations of modern times.

—The Mississippi levees following so soon upon the epidemic, have interfered greatly with business along the commercial line which the Father of Waters is usually depended upon to accommodate. Over 1500 bales of cotton have been sold at Memphis within the last three weeks and not yet paid for, because bills of lading are not obtained, and await shipment. By the close of navigation on the Mississippi the railroads are overrun with freight, and notwithstanding extra rolling stock, the Memphis and Louisville and the branches are so blocked as to interfere with their regular shipment of what little cotton is turned out by their presses. Usually the receipts about holiday time are the heaviest of the season, but this year it has been much injured. With the close of last week the six days receipts of cotton were only 829 bales against 19,092 for the week preceding. The number of boats sunk by the ice at Memphis is seven, and the damaged rafts thirteen. Seventy coal and produce rafts were sunk or carried away. The total loss of property will be about $250,000.

—Even those young ladies who decline to take the smallest interest in political matters will prick their ears to hear of a new bill which it has been suggested might be brought before Congress. It is called "An act for the abolition of Chaperons and for the introduction of more free, simple and natural modes of Social Intercourse." The bill—to be shortly called the Chaperons act—after reciting as preamble the "divers great inconveniences arising from always keeping young ladies under the eyes of elderly persons at balls, croquet parties, and other social gatherings, and from discountenancing their walking, riding and driving with young persons of the other sex," proceeds to enact that after the passing of the act the lady of the house in which any entertainment is given shall be deemed the chaperon of all young ladies present to all intents and purposes. Further, a whole string of penalties are directed against dowagers, sisters-in-law, cousins and others who shall endeavor to abridge the freedom of young persons by making malicious remarks or spreading unfounded stories concerning them.

—The State Treasurer of North Carolina paid, on the 31st inst., to Wm. Wilson, of Robeson county, the man who killed Andrew Strong, the reward of $500, offered for Strong's capture or death.

The Conviction of Stokes.

Murder trials in New York have so constantly of late years been a mere mockery of justice, that the sentencing of Stokes to death on the gallows for the murder of Fisk, twelve months ago, has taken the whole country strangely by surprise. The verdict was evidently as unexpected to the prisoner as to the public. The New York papers, while conceding the guilt of Stokes, had uniformly treated his escape from hanging as a foregone conclusion. As late as Saturday morning the New York Tribune said, briefly:

"The verdict in the Stokes case will doubtless be reached to-morrow, and the long and tedious trial be forever ended; for whether the verdict be acquittal or a disagreement of the jury, it will probably never be tried again."

It was even announced in the newspapers, a few days before the verdict, that Stokes, in expectation of some such result as that foreshadowed by the Tribune, was making his preparations for a voyage to Europe. Yet, now that a jury has had the firmness and common sense to do its duty regardless of the wealth, influence and social position of the murderer, not a voice is raised, outside the circle of the immediate family and friends of the doomed man, to question the justice and propriety of the verdict. With the facts of the case our readers are sufficiently familiar. It is scarcely necessary to say who Fisk was, or how, from the wagon of a New England peddler, he suddenly burst upon New York as a daring speculator in stocks, and ultimately, by bold and unscrupulous means got, with his associate, Jay Gould, control of the Erie Railroad and its enormous revenues. Of Stokes, also, brief mention will suffice. He is a man of good family, of a speculative turn, and, like his quondam companion Fisk, of loose habits. At one time, these two men were partners in an oil refining establishment, carrying on an extensive business. But they quarrelled with each other about an abandoned woman, and had suits at law—Stokes against Fisk, and Fisk against Stokes—in which Stokes was badly worsted. From first to last it is a dreary and disreputable story—terminating in the death of Fisk, the arrest of Stokes as his murderer, and his trial, ending on the first occasion with a disagreement of the jury, and on this, the second trial, with a verdict of murder in the first degree.

It remains to be seen whether the righteous sentence pronounced against Stokes, on Monday last, will be executed. New York lawyers are ingenious and persistent, and it is not likely that any expedient will be left untried to save the murderer from the halter. But, whether he be hung or not, the effect of his conviction and sentence cannot fail to be salutary.

A Wise Conclusion.

No class of advertisers are more shrewd than those who endeavor to meet the public demand for amusement. To attract and to catch the eye of the most people is to them an aim that has been with many a life-long study. Not a line, not a heading, not a little paragraph as a preliminary puff, but is carefully weighed. Something new is always offering. The need of constant variety, to suit all the kinds of entertainment, keeps the wits alive and invention on the alert. When, therefore, the managers of the New York theatres meet, as they have met, and resolve to discard most of their placards and handbills, it is fair to conclude that they have found that these means of attracting the public, after long trial, do not justify their cost. This is the most effective blow yet struck at the defacement of the streets by posters. After all, the managers, in common with other observant men, are coming to the right conclusion that a few lines in a newspaper do more good and reach more patrons than a hundred scattered here and there aimlessly.

A Growing Evil.

[From the Wilmington Star.] We have more evidence of the inexorable detention of freights on the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta Railway, and will produce it if necessary. We assume that this evil grows out of the "cheap and rapid system" or "through freight." We hold no "local management" responsible for this gross outrage. The officers here are mere agents of a higher power, and are powerless to remedy the evil complained of. We do not expect them to supply the road with rolling stock or a double track out of their private funds. But the evil exists nevertheless.

The Case Plainly Stated.

[From the Washington Chronicle.] Hon. John J. Patterson has issued a pamphlet containing what he calls a refutation of the charges of bribery brought against him. We doubt whether this will help the case. The mistrials are, that prior to the election there was a bold and defiant admission of the purpose to control the senatorial election by the use of money. It was just as well understood in Charleston, on the testimony alike of the press and the people there, that the election was to be controlled by the longest purse as that an election was to take place. Those who were defeated may have been just as corrupt, just as willing to traffic for votes, as the man who was elected, but that falls to relieve the result from its fearfully demoralizing character. The poor, blighted creatures who sold their votes are to be pitied. Their unfitness to occupy the position of legislators is thus made too painfully evident. But we do not see how that lessens the guilt of intelligent men who thus make a seat in the United States Senate a matter of merchandise. The senatorial election in South Carolina is, unfortunately, not the only one in which it has been publicly charged that money was used without stint, and the result compassed by that means, it unchecked, will rob the Senate of that exalted character that has made it the pride and boast of the nation. Colonel Patterson may not be a slinger above all others, but the charges in his case have been so explicit as to make it unpleasantly prominent. The publication of this pamphlet is a proof of that fact.

Comfort and Respectability.

It has long been known that some people in rich or comfortable circumstances are not respectable, and that some respectable people are not comfortable. An English investigator has ignored the claims of moral respectability upon all classes of the English people for the purpose of measuring the whole population by a money gauge, and designates two classes—comfortable people and respectable people. The first includes those in wealthy and easy circumstances, and the second comprehends those who do not possess the adequate means to secure the constant enjoyment of the desirable things of this world. This statistician induced Parliament to give him a list of the assessed rental of all houses in the kingdom, and from the data thus acquired he has made his computations. He concludes that people occupying houses, the rental value of which is assessed at $100 or more a year are comfortable. He estimates that a house rent at this rate implies an income of $200 in the city, and $300 in the country. There are fewer than 60,000 of these comfortable people in all England, or not quite 14 per cent. of the entire population of the United Kingdom. Many of these, of course, have immeasurably larger incomes than are represented by $100 rental, but the great majority are people who scarcely come up to the rank of the comfortable by this estimate. The respectable class is much more numerous. About 150,000 families pay a house rent of from $50 to $100; 250,000 more pay from $30 to $50 and 350,000 pay $20 and over, annual rent. Counting five persons to a family it is thus ascertained that there are about 3,500,000 people in the kingdom, or one-eighth of the whole population, who come up to the grade of respectable, according to the definition of this statistician. The political economists are informed that the taxation of the country, rich as it is, falls upon a people seven-eighths of whom live in houses worth less than $20 a year. The assessed rental of $200 and upwards, is made upon only 8123 buildings, and among these there are only 758 buildings which have an assessed rental of $1000 and more. So that the number of families who may be regarded as rich are exceedingly small.

CLEAR AND HARMLESS AS WATER.—NATTAN'S CRYSTAL DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.

A perfectly clear preparation in one bottle, as easily applied as water, for restoring to gray hair its natural color and youthful appearance, to eradicate and prevent dandruff, to promote the growth of the hair and stop its falling out. It is entirely harmless, and perfectly free from any poisonous substance, and will therefore take the place of all the dirty and unpleasant preparations now in use. Numerous testimonials have been sent from many of our most prominent citizens, some of which are subjoined. In every instance in which the article was used, the objectionable CRAYAL DISCOVERY is perfectly warranted to contain neither Sugar of Lead, Sulphur or Nitrate of Silver, it does not soil the clothes or scalp, is agreeably perfumed, and makes one of the best dressings for the hair in use. It restores the color of the hair "more perfect and uniformly than any other preparation," and always does so in from three to ten days, virtually feeding the roots of the hair with all the nourishing qualities necessary to its growth and healthy condition; it restores the decayed and induces a new growth of the hair more positively than anything else. The application of this wonderful discovery also produces a pleasant and cooling effect on the scalp and gives the hair a pleasing and elegant appearance. Price $1 a bottle.
