-George Francis Train is still imprisoned in the New York Tombs, on the charge of sending obscene matter through the malls, refusing to give ball.

-One of the critics aptly described Bulwer as "a man of letters among men of the world, and a man of the world among men of letters."

-Onslow and Whalley, members of the British Parllament, have been fined one hundred pounds for publicly accusing Sir John Duke Coleridge of conspiring to deprive the Tichborne claimant of his rights.

-With the death of Right Hon. Stephen Lushington, the eminent English jurist, in The State and city taxes are about 31 per Great Britain, perished, it is believed, the secret of the Byron scandal, which Mrs. Stowa gained a questionable notoriety by publishing a few years ago. He was Lady Byron's counsel. The deceased was ninety-one years old, and was greatly honored and esteemed.

-It is related of a certain minister of Maine, who was noted for his long sermons, with many divisions, that one day when he was advancing among the teens he reached at length a kind of resting place in his discourse, when, pausing to take breath, he asked the question, "And what shall I say now !" A voice from the congregation earnestly responded "Say Amen."

and when nearing New South Wales, his attention was attracted by the cries of the seamen on the foretopsail yard, who directed his attention to a strange-looking object only five or six feet from the ship's weather quarter. As near as he could estimate from an unsteady view of the reptile it was not less than fifty feet in length and two feet in diameter, with a head somewhat larger than the body. When the monster was about twenty feet astern of the ship it lifted its head above the water, opened its mouth and looked at the ship with apparent surprise. Its color was a deep rown, with occasionally a light spot on its ides. In less than five minutes after passing this monster another of the same species, apparently, appeared on the other side of the ship within fifteen feet of it. The weather was as clear and calm as could be imagined, and all the ship's crew witnessed the two monsters as they lay colled up on the surface of the sea. The captain insists upon it that his is not another Nahant story, but a true record of his experience while on his voyage. An Unjust Tax.

~ The general tax law provides that "all "real and personal property in this State "shall be subject to taxation." There is no warrant, either in the organic law or the statutes, for taxing the same property twice; nor is there any shadow of authority for taxing what does not exist. One of these things the State contrives to do.

As the law stands, real estate in South Carolina is taxed at its full value, whether it is encumbered or not. This is the grievance. The nominal owner of mortgaged real estate pays taxes upon the full value of the property, and the holder of the bond and mortgage pays taxes upon the amount which the mortgage covers. In this way the same property is taxed twice; first, as real estate, and second, as personal property. There is, in practice, a greater wrong than this. A person who buys a piece of real estate for $20,000, paying one fourth in cash and securing the balance by bond and mortgage, is not, in law or in fact, the owner of that property, until the last cent of the sum for which it was mortgaged is paid. The nominal owner can sell the property subject to the mortgage; in the case given he sells an interest of $5000 in property worth $20,000, and mortgaged for $15,000. The debt of $15,000 due by the mortgagor is not taxable property. It is a liability, not a thing in possession. Yet the State compels the purchaser of the real estate to pay taxes upon what he has not paid for and does not own.

When the time for making the tax returns comes round, the parchaser of the piece of real estate, costing $20,000, is assessed upon its entire value. Having paid $5000, he is taxed as though he had paid $20,000. In other words, he is taxed, by the State, upon $15,000 which are not his, except in name. cent. In the case cited, the tax is levied upon $20,000, and amounts to $700. This is actually the tax upon the $5000 in cash paid on account when the property was bought. Upon what the purchaser really owns, the tax is just fourteen per cent. This grossly unjust plan is not adopted to prevent the mortgaged property from avoidng taxation. The holder of the mortgage is compelled to return the accompanying bonds as personal property, and pays taxes upon them. As before shown the mortgagee pays taxes upon the identical property upon which, in the form of real estate, the mortgagor has already paid the tax. The equitable plan clearly is to exempt the real estate from taxation to the extent of the mortgages upon it; or else to exempt rial charge of the Florence Pioneer. the bonds and mortgage from taxation. Which is the better course? It is fairest difficulty has been experienced by planters in servant has but one eye, and the effect of an that the real estate should go free. The getting an adequate amount of laborers mortgage is a tangible possession, bearing interest. But the mortgaged property, nominally owned by the mortgagor, is the property of the mortgagee, and it is a great wrong to compel the mortgagor to pay taxes upon what is not his. The enactment of a law providing that, in returning real estate for taxation, the amount of the mortgages may be deducted from the gross value would be a measure of Oglesby; Nevada, John P. Jones, (all Republi- public justice and practical reform, and we trust that the members of the Legislature will give the matter their immediate attention. The whole State is interested in it, and there is no danger that the bonds and mortgages would escape taxation, as the mortgagor might be required to report, in making his return, the names of the holders of the mortgages upon his property. These would pay no more than they now pay, and the mortgagor of real estate would cease to Messis. H. T. Peters, R. C. Barkley, Samuel Gar be taxed upon what he does not possess.

What has become of the bill to exempt buildings in the burnt district of Charleston from taxation for a term of years?

Help for Charleston

The bill to aid and encourage manufac tures sails smoothly along, but the measure which would lead to the prompt rebuilding of this city slumbers in some pigeon-hole and, unless waked up soon, has no chance of passing. There may be some objections to the form of the present bill, inasmuch as a direct exemption from taxation is not constitutional. But this difficulty is easily avoided, as in the case of the bill for the encouragement of manufactures, by allowing drawback equal to the amount of the State tax upon the improvements put upon the property. It is not expected that the vacant lots be exempted from taxation; the object being to encourage rebuilding, without reducing the gross value now subject to taxation. The claim is only for the exemption of the new buildings, and other improvements, in the burnt district.

The members of the Charleston delega tion know how important it is to the city, and the State, that the burnt district bill be pressed upon the notice of their colleagues We wish to think well of them, and they will merit hearty encomiums if they take the measure up and consent to no further delay in its consideration and passage.

-During the past week elections of United States senators have taken place in the Legislatures of several States, as follows : Pennsylvania, Simon Cameron, re-elected; New York, Boscoe Conkling, re-elected; Wisconsin, Timothy O. Howe, re-elected; Illinois, Bichard J. cans;) Georgia, General John B. Gordon, Conservative, and famous as a Confederate General during the war. The main competitor of General Gordon was Hon. A. H. Stephens, who has since been nominated to Congress to take the place of Representative Wright, deceased. As all candidates in this field have withdrawn in favor of Mr. Stephens, there is no doubt of his election.

-The "Count Pierreiond," as Louis, the son of the late Napoleon III and the Empress Eugenie, is now called, is said to be attentive to his studies in the military academy at Woolwich, England. His most intimate companion is the son of Dr. Conneau, the Emperor's physician. He, however, not only goes up to class and drills with the other youths of the same standing in the college, but joins with guage to the same extent as other students. Special privileges are allowed him. Instead of residing in the college he has a house of his own outside the wall, young Conneau living with him. Then a special bell has been put up in front of his house to give him notice of drill hours, &c. He is particularly boylike in all his deportment.

-Port Deposit, Md., has for several days been one of the points of interest, on account the peril in which it was and is placed from ice and flood. Monday the ice collected and dammed the Susquehanna, so that its waters poured through the streets of the town with a sweep that took almost everything movable in its course. The whole front of the town for over a mile in length, and extending backward an average distance of five hundred feet, rushing waters. In the main street the water feet of it, and it was only checked at the centre of the town. The railroad track was inundated, the telegraph office flooded, and the operator forced to move his business back upon the hill. At McCall's ferry ice was piled up thirty feet high, and wedged in between the banks of the river. In its course through the town the flood swept away everything not very substantially grounded, like wharf buildings, sheds, small offices, &c. Only two or three houses in the town escaped injury of any kind.

-An interesting narrative about some sea serpents, rivalling in its strange and exciting details the fiction of Victor Hugo, is given by a sea captain who has just returned from China, atter a voyage of ninety-nine days. The captain states that one afternoon while How many are willing to go to Columbia on the outward passage from San Francisco, to secure its passage?

-The bill which Mr. Hurley is striving to defeat is worth having, and is, therefore, worth working for. But it is very difficult to persuade the citizens of Charleston of the necessity of taking a personal interest in schemes of public importance. They are TON, S. C., JANUARY 23, 1573 .- NOTICE .- All ready enough to scold and pout, when a proposition which they support is defeated: forgetting that organized work, on their part, would probably have changed the reselt. This is not the way in which great cities are made. Look at Savannah and Augusta, Wilmington and Richmond! These cities, by sheer importunity, obtain what has been submerged, and houses with their they want. Whenever any project looms up furniture have been left to the mercy of the which places their interests in jeopardy they besiege the powers that be until it receives kept rising luch after luch until there was six its quietus, and whenever something beneficial is proposed they use like means to insure its carrying out. Sometimes they fail, of course; but they are not disheartened. and, as soon as occasion serves, they try > again. More of this temper is needed in Charleston. Faith without works does not make a city. There is more help in the man who gives a day to the task of promoting wise, and defeating unwise, legislation, than in a score of men who are blandly confident that things will, somehow, "come out right."

> Suppose that the experiment be tried in the matter of the Charleston Water bill? Every thoughtful citizen is in favor of it.
