THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1873.

THE CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "is designs "ted as the newspaper for the publication of "all legal notices, and official advertisements, "of February 22d, 1870, entitled an act to regulate the publication of all legal and public "notices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-The ex-Prince Imperial of France will attain his majority on the 16th of March.

-Among the foreign artistes now singing in Italy are two English tenors, bearing, respectively, the celebrated names of Shakspeare and Byron. -A bill "for the prohibition of gift enter prises in the District of Columbia" was passed by the House of Representatives on the 24th ultimo. This is rough on Grant ! -Among the saddest episodes in the late storm in Minnesota, according to a Western paper, was the freezing of the hands, nose forehead, everything except the cheek-of a life assurance agent.

_James W. Wallack, the father of Lester Wallack, was so very anxious his funeral should be private that he enjoined upon his friends that they should not publish the date

-The French census enumerates thirty-one thousand five hundred and eighty-six more married men than married women. How is this? Do that number of French wives keep

-The Princess of Wales set the fashion of great simplicity in her boy's toilette -her fair, pretty little princes are always costumed with the neatness and quietness which are inseparable from elegance and taste. A bright colored bow at their necks is the nearest approach to ornament their dresses ever add to their simple tollettes for any public appear-

-Calcraft, the English hangman, is a robust, benevolent-looking old man, with a alight stoop and a triffe shaky in his gait, who wears a clerically cut black suit and long white hair and beard. His assistant, and probable successor, is a well-to-do Welshman, of thirty-five, who has a morbid fondness for witnessing last scenes. They both are amateur gardeners when not professionally em-

-If Spiritualism ever becomes fashionable in Bugland, it will be difficult to tell how firm a foothold it may obtain It appears that it has already enlisted in its ranks several noblemen, among them an earl, who has now solved all his doubts, as he is dead; a dowager duchess, a captain in the guard-Lord Dundreary, probably-s baronet, several members of Parilament, a barrister, a doctor-there really must be more than one-and a merchant or two. So says the London Times.

-The Credit Mobilier, after having slaught ered a number of precious lives, recently attempted to commit suicide in Philadelphia. A pellion was presented to the Court of Common Pleas praying for a decree of dissolution, on the ground that the petitioner was in needy circumstances, and could not get any more work, but Judge Allison promptly refused the prayer, and "compelled the corporation still to live." Remorse is supposed to have been the cause of the rash act.

-The Boston Advertiser gives us a picturof the streets of the districts devastated by the fire, which very much resembles, on first view, a representation of a dislocated hoopskirt. White lines of this map show the proposed widenings and straightenings of the thoroughfares. If finished as contemplated, a fair disentanglement of this labyrinth of streets, which, as the Irishman said, began nowhere, and ended in the same place, may

-The third annual meeting in favor of woman's suffrage has been held in Boston. There was nothing new in the proceedings. In fact, they appear to have lacked spirit, as if the Massachusetts women had got tired of abusing man in general, marriage, Christianity and morality, and had about run out of stock in trade in the way of exciting "isms." Mrs. Lucy Stone wanted ten thousand dollars for the coming year, and sent her bonnet around, accompanied by Miss Lord's hat, but with what result we have not learned.

-A carious affidavit has been presented to the court by the counsel of Stokes in their bill is constrained to give its approval to the of exceptions. Mary Bean swears that immediately before the murder of Fisk she saw him at the entrance of the Grand Central Hotel with a pistol in his hand; but, being about to enter into the bonds of wedlock, she was persuaded not to tell what she saw, for fear of being looked up as a witness. Just coout that period Mary's desire for a husban. was evidently greater than her love for justice: but having enjoyed that luxury for some time she is now willing to become a witness, even at the cost of being temporarily separates from her lord and master. Mary's present smbition to sacrifice herself on the altar of justice is highly commendable, particularly if, in doing so, she succeeds in securing a little exemption from marital restraint by being locked up in the Tombs. -Mr. George Torrey, a respectable cotton planter of Mississippi, recently went to Engto come hither with a view of permanent set-the 6th ult., Mr. Torrey informs us that he finds some difficulty in procuring emigrants of the proper kind in England, but thinks they may be obtained in any number from Alsace and Lorraine. The cost of passage from these last mentioned places to Liverpool would be about eleven dollars, and from Liverpool to New Orleans thirty-five dollars. Colonel Torrey's letter is accompanied by one from J. L. Finegan, Esq., who is fully endorsed by Father Nugent, of Liverpool. Mr Finegan speaks in high terms of the people of Alsace and Lorraine. He says: "They are remarkable for their sobriety and industry, and are indeed the best agricultural laborers to be found in France." He adds: "Having lived in France for many years, and having only recently returned from France, I could easily open official communication, either in person or by letter, whereby you could obtain one hundred (or more, if requisite) of these people, who would only be too glad to emigrate to Louisiana. I may tell you that, for the most part, these Alsatians and Lorrainers are Catholics, and could readily adapt themselves to the customs and manners of a free country," &c.

"There's Many a Slip," &c.

Things begin to look rather blue for Mr John J. Patterson, United States Senator elect from South Carolina. Everybody knows that he bought the votes which elected him. There is hardly one among his partisans who has the effrontery to deny the fact. The boldest of them have contented themselves with atout denials of the existence of proof to convict. Yet, after all, "Henest John" has not dared to face his accusers in the courts. Taking refuge behind a legal technicality, he has succeeded in dodging, for the present, the judicial investigation which he and his friends have been pretending to court. But he has yet to face a far more terrible tribu-"for the County of Charleston, under the act nal, whose judgment he may not hope to dodge. At the time of his election, he had good reason to flatter himself that the Senate of the United States would make light of the wholesale, systematic and notorious bribery by dint of which he secured his election. It had been the custom of Congress to treat corruption charges merely as the last resort of the defeated. But all this is changed. The sudden fall of Colfax, of Harlan, of Pomeroy, and other great party lights, has made it necessary that Radical public virtue should just now, in every possible way, be vindicated before the people. Every senator is agerly casting about for the means of demonstrating, if not his own incorruptibility, at least his abhorrence of the corruption of others. The spasm of virtuous indignation can hardly pass off before the time at which Patterson must claim his seat. Will he be made the party scapegoat? Or will the Senate accept, as conclusive proof of his innoadvantage of a legal quibble to postpone for a twelvementh meeting the issue which is to decide whether he shall wear the robes of the senator or the stripes of the convict?

The Northern papers seem at last to be generally impressed with the importance to the whole nation of putting the Southern States on their legs again, financially, as speedily as possible; and the pleasantly startling proposition for an issue of one hundred million dollars of bonds by the Federal Government in ald of the South seems to be very generally regarded with favor. Forney's Philadelphia Press, it discussing the matter, says :

"The financial condition of the Southern States is now a more serious problem than their political condition. The war, of course, left them impoverished and burdened with debt. It was expected that they would rapidly recuperate, but instead the indebtedness of many has swollen mountain high, until repudiation or bankruptcy are the only alternatives. The first is now seriously considered by some of these Commonwealths, and may be resorted to unless some plan is devised by which ruin may be averted. In Virginia, the State, unable to pay its millions of bonds, proposes to go into the insurance business, and in every part of the lately insurrectionary section, save only Texas, almost universal poverty, corporate and individual, prevails. In this exigency it has been suggested that the General Government come to the relief of these States. Mr. Hale proposed it in his recent speech on the corruptions of Southern politics, and business men in all the great trade centres cordially approve it. The debt of North Carolina is $30,000,000, South Carolina $16,000,000, Virginia $47,000,-000, Georgia $10,500,000, Alabama $15,500,000, Mississippi $25,000,000, Louislana $21,000,000, Tennessee $31,000,000, Florida $6,000,000, or an aggregate indebtedness in ten States of $202,000,000. The most feasible plan suggested is that Congress "authorize the issue of $100,000,000 of boads by the General Government, to be distributed, under suitable restrictions, among the Southern States, for the purpose of relieving in part the people from liabilities contracted since the war for works of internal improvement by their respective State governments." Either this or some other measure must be adopted for the assistance of the powerless South, or its recovery will be indefinitely delayed."

Even the New York Times, the most malignant and unrelenting enemy of the South, proposed scheme of relief.

Timrod at "the Hub."

Some of the oracular utterances of the Boston Globe in connection with Timrod's poems invite comment, It is well that æsthetics should sometimes displace politics. It is pleasant to know that when some bright particular star shines in our Southern sky, its rays can pierce even Cimmerian darkness and attract the homage of the wise men of the East. The poetic fire of Timrod kindles enthusiasm at the North, just as we at the South appreciate the brilliancy of Holmes, even in spite of those lines, which he may well wish to blot, as to negroes "scooping out rebel graves." Nature land to induce farm and household servants and civilization are not voiceless. Nemesia is not always slow. Every man who has tlement. In a letter written at Liverpool on gained power or pelf by arraying negro bayonets or votes against the Southern people may clearly read his doom-

"Living, to forfelt fair renown, And, doubly dying, to go down.
To the vile dirt from which he sprung,

Unwept, unhenored, and unsung." In one of his last letters, Washington, expecting war with France says: "They 'will put arms into the hands of our slaves.' Strange that the worst crime against civilization which he then feared from infidel, revolutionary France, New England piety and philanthropy should in this age perpetrate, and New England poetry gloat

There are noble spirits in New England, as everywhere else. There are thousands there of clear heads and honest hearts, whose judgments are just, when the means of judging rightly are possessed. No candid visitor to the South from these regions but acknowledges previous error as to facts. And even as to that multitudinous mutual admiration society which 'the Globe represents, may not their mental vagaries be the result simply of ignorance? In some directions their vision is eminently clear. Indeed they know everything, except a few things which outside barbarians value; such, for instance, as honor, good faith, politics, religion. Here their vision is dim. If reverence and love are the essence of religion, what clear idea can they have of it who ignore Bible teachings, and whose very philanthropy is malignant and fratricidal Are not they ignorant of political history who call us "rebels," "traiters," as if we were the subjects of the Northern people, as the great (rebel and traitor?) Washington was a subject of George III? What idea of good faith have they who break their side of a compact, and then murder us for considering it broken? What meaning do they attach to the word honor, with whom Butler

The Globe affirms of all its constituents the warmest good will to the South. With equal sincerity we may attribute all their mistakes to simple ignorance, and we here cheerfully contribute our mite to reinforce their stock of knowledge, especially self-knowledge.

Justice to the South

The New York Tribune, commenting on the action of the House on Thursday in restoring the names of Southern pensioners of the war of 1812, says: "The House was manly and generous, yesterday, in restoring to their place on the pension rolls the Southern sur vivors of the war of 1812. That they should have been stricken off that brief roll in moment of patriotic passion was natural enough, even though it may not have been certain that they voluntarily sympathized with the rebellion; but it is too late now to discuss what peculiar views these aged veterans of another war had in 1862. Nobody will taunt Messrs. Butler, Bingham and Willard with having courage to say now los Southern men good words which they would not have dared to say during the late campalgn. We are heartily glad that these gentlemen can honestly declare there is no longer any use in polishing up the memories of the rebellion in order to keep them

"bright." And the Baltimore Sun says: "The late de store the names of Southern soldiers of the war of 1812 and of their widows to the pension roll is more important as indicative of "a readiness to look over 1861 to 1812, than from any great benefits it will confer upon "the number of persons in the Southern "States likely to be affected by this action of "the House. It is now full sixty years since "the soldiers of that period bore arms in de-"fence of the country, and the number of sur-"vivors must be very small. But the money "compensation to these survivors is the very smallest part of the matter. If the action "of the House may be regarded as indicating "a returning sense of justice and fair play to "the Southern communities, it conveys a sig-"nificance which is of interest to the whole American people."
