NEWS OF THE DAY.

...The death of Mr. Dixon, who first ascer tained that oysters were eatable, is announced as having occurred at Crisfield, Md., recently. -Washington Irving's great delight was to read in the open air. "Come and see me," was his invitation to a friend, "and I'll give you's book and a tree."

-Mirza Malkom Khan has been sent to St. Petersburg to announce the arrival in April of the Persian Shab. The Shah will visit St. Petersburg, Berlin, Vienna, London and Paris. and return home by Constantinople.

-Coleridge was a man of infinite title pages. He projected a hundred works, without ever completing one. History, philosophy, poetry, criticism, biography, his fertile brain was forever teeming with new volumes, which never got beyond the announcement.

-The last words pronounced by the Emper or, says the London Figure, in his dying moments, were addressed to his old and faithful friend, Dr. Conneau. They were: "Etlez vous a Sedan ?" (Were your at Sedan?) Subsequently the Empresss held his hand in hers and gently klased it; the Emperor smiled, and his lips moved, as if returning his wife's embrace, but he never uttered another word after that last thought-"Sedan."

The directory of the Gilbert Elevated Railroad, in New York City, have concluded a contract with an English banking company for the sale of bonds of the road to the value of $5.500,000. The contract for building five miles of the road, from Chambers street and West Broadway to Central Park, has been concluded with the New England Iron Company, High Bridge is closing. The contractors bind themselves to complete the work before the have brought the case properly into court close of this year. -Some time ago two youths of Berne, in Switzerland, addressed a letter to President Grant, asking him to aid them in gathering a Bine Ridge scrip is the work of the collection of American postage stamps. "A few days ago," says the Swiss Times, "they unexpectedly received through the American envoy at Berne a fine assortment of United States stamps, accompanied by a letter, in which the President said that his many duties had prevented him undertaking the collection himself, and that therefore his youngest son had taken the matter in hand." -Ia France the roasting of coffee is quite a science, the roaster being required to study the properties of the different kinds of berry, since each sort must be roasted for a certain period of time. The operation is conducted in a hollow iron sphere, by the rotation of which all the berries are equally exposed to the heat. During the roasting the ball is closed and the gases confined, but at the close of the operation the valve is opened and the gases allowed to escape. The roasted berries are then quickly transferred to carefully closed vessels,

-Another miser of the old-fashioned type dled on Staten Island on Wednesday. These men and women who live in squalor, and subsist on crosts and water, will never die out. Elwes and Daniel Dancer will have their prototypes as long as the world lasts and the money continues to be the root of all evil. The last addition to the long roll of departed misers was, strange to say, an Irishman, one of the very tew of his race who have been addicted to such habits, and his name was Patrick Corcoran. He was a morose and solitary man. Few persons ever spoke to him, and he to still fewer. He was discovered dead in his room, and on his person was found the evidence of his possession of four thousand one hundred dollars, thriftly deposited in a savings bank.

The old seaport of Marseilles, in the south of France, besides the Mediterranean trade. has of late years become interesting to the ladies on account of its being the chief depot in the world for the trade in human hair. Upward offorty thousand pounds are brought there annually, Italy and Sicily, and especially Rome and Naples sending the greater portion, while Spain and France supply the rest. Of the provinces of France, Brittany and Auvergne send the most. About three and a half ounces in the weight of a chignon of the usual size, and one Paris house alone sells fifteen thousand of them a year. Some four hundred hair-dressers in Marseilles occupy themselves in making chignons, and they proclaim the Americans and English to be their best enstomers. It is curious to know that the most expensive bair is red, and that near ly, if not quite, all of it comes from Scotland Chiselburst, where the late Emperor breatued his last, continues to be visited by brancer of the sad event. Immortelles were sold outside the churchyard gate, and numerous emblematic devices found ready purchasers at every turn between the railway station and the church. A large box filled with wreaths of violets and other flowers stood open at the side of the porch, and every one who entered was invited to detach a small bunch of spray and carry it off. A beautiful wreath of camelias, violets and lilles had attached to it, by a ribbon of black slik, a little card on which was written, in a clear, fine hand, "De la part de la Princess Beatrice." Next to a white amaranthine wreath sent by Queen Victoria was one which bore the name of Prince Leopold. in an indistinguishable heap were wreaths, from all the members of the English royal family, and they reposed on such a bed of flowers as a hundred different hands at least must have helped to spread. Mass is said daily in the church, and the utmost reverence is perceived in the conduct of those who attend the exercises.

A Brave Beginning.

The Blue Ridge scrip case is decided at last. An application was made to the Supreme Court for a mandamus to compel the Comptroller-General to levy a tax for the redemption of the scrip, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Assembly under which it was issued. The arguments were elaborate, as the counsel on both sides were men of eminence in their profession. Whatever could be said for and against the validity of the scrip, and for and against the constitutionality of the law which brought it into being, was presented to the court with as much clearness as force. The Supreme Court decide unanimously to refuse to grant the mandamus, and it is understood that the decision is based upon the unconstitutionality of the Blue Ridge act. This decision is a heavy blow to innocent holders of the scrip, and, in course of time, some arrangement may be made to settle their claims upon an equitable basis. The one great fact, however, with which we have to deal is, that in opposing the execution of a law believed to be unconstitutional, and in refusing to acknowledge the binding character of claims believed to be fraudulent, the present State Government have given substantial and practical proof of their determination to carry into effect, wherever they can, the pledges made in the Republican Nominating Convention, and during the State Canvass.

Had the Supreme Court determined to grant the mandamus this paper would not have questioned the honesty of the judgment. That they have decided not to grant the mandamus is evidence that the law is plain and conclusive. The members of the appellate court have done their duty, and the opportunity was made for them, and given to them, by the members of the State Government. It is not too much to weuld never have been declared void and worthless had any of the officials of the executive department of the government been lukewarm in upholding the rights of the people. The quiet determination and unflinching courage of Comptroller Hoge would have availed little without the cooperation of Treasurer Cardozo and Governor Moses. Nor could Attorney-General Melton, however patriotic and energetic, had not his colleagues stood squarely by him. The successful onslaught upon the Moses administration. It was not an effort to deprive any person of his just dues; it was an effort to guard the whole people against fraud; it was an expression of the fixed resolution to sift out the grain from the chaff, and admit no debt which was not proved to be lawfully contracted and honestly due. For what they have done, in this matter, the new government deserve

the thanks of the State. It need not be feared that the practical repudiation of the Blue Ridge scrip will have an adverse effect upon the public credit. Thanks to extravagance and bad management, South Carolina has no credit worthy of the name. But we desire to see the fair fame of the State restored, and her securities selling at a high price in the money markets of the world. A wholesale recognition of every nominal obligation made during the past five years would only sink us deeper in the mire. A government which does not command the confidence of its own people cannot retain the confidence of the outside public. Unless a State have both the ability and the willingness to pay, her obligations (as a State cannot be sued,) have only a fancy and speculative value. South Carolina can pay her every legitimate debt, and, when a firm confidence in the government is restored, the legitimate debts will be paid. The opposition to the Blue Ridge scrip tends to restore confidence, and in that way is a step towards the re-establishment of public credit. It may be said that the effect would have been the same, whatever the decision of the Supreme Court. The opposition to the scrip, not the result of the opposition, was the standard by which to measure the good faith of the government. Unfortunately this would not have been the case Had the court decided the scrip to be valid, nine men out of ten would have regarded the decision as a put up job; so convinced were the people that the scrip was a fraud and a cheat. From every point of view, many persons, both English and French. The therefore, the victory now won is a cause for congratulation. It is performance, not promise, and it is an indication of the course that will be taken with such part of the bonded debt as is, also, tainted with suspicion. A brave beginning is made. Let the

The Tax for 1873-74.

The Committee of Ways and Means have determined at last on recommending that a tax for the fiscal year 1873.74 be levled at the present session of the Legislature. It is not needful to discuss the amount of the proposed tax-the question is, Should the tax be levied at once, or next fall? There is, of course, much to be said upon both sides; but the opponents of a levy have evidently the better of the argument. The tax for the year 1872.73 is already levied, and is nearly entirely collected. Unless the Legislature indulge in the amusement of making supplemental appropriations, the receipts from taxes will about cover the estimated expenses of the year, Should there be any deficiency that deficiency can be provided for when the next levy is made. It is the practice to base the tax levy upon the estimates of the Comptroller-General. Those estimates, for 1873-74 cannot be submitted earlier than next November. A levy now would be guess-work; and it will be injurious to the people, because the Legislature will be tempted to make the levy sufficiently large to meet an extreme estimate of current expenses, and it is not likely that, if fifteen mills be levied, less than that amount will, next fall, be found to be sufficient. How, for instance, can a tax be levied for the payment of the interest on the public debt? The amount of the valid debt is unknown. If the Legislature fix it at sixteen millions, they prejudge the validity of the six or seven millions of bonds believed to be void. If the Legislature provide for the interest on ten millions, they may injure the holders of securities which may, hereafter, be decided to be valid. It is argued that, if the tax be not levied until the next session of the Logislature, the taxpayers will, as this year, have an insufficient time in which to meet the demands upon them. There is no strength in this view. The time can be exextended, either specially or generally, as was done last month. It is expected of the Legislature that they make taxation as low as is consistent with the efficiency of the government. And we confess that we do not see how a proper levy can be made at a time when the Legislature have no means of knowing what the cost of the government will be. The wiser and juster way is to let things stand as they are, and pass, the first thing, in the winter session, a tax bill adequate to the claims which the State has to meet. There is no reason why this should produce any inconvenience, and it will certainly be satisfactory to the public.

The New Departure.

A Washington telegram gives the information that neerly all the Ku-Klux prisoners will be pardoned within a very short time, but that the government will prosecute mercilessly all new instances of Ku-Klux persecutions. This is putting the South upon its good behavior; unless the Southern people have failed to learn that it is unprofitable to provoke the intervention of the Federal Government, and the submission of the gown to the sword.

There is no doubt that numbers of innocent men have been harried and torn by the bounds of the Ku-Kiux law, and it is equally certain that numbers of negroes have been badly and brutally used by the members of secret associations. It is immaterial, for the present purpose, to say whether Ku-Kluxism had, or had not, a political significance. The broad truth is that a great wrong was done, and that the long arm of the government reached the gullty, and those who were free from blame. The opportunity is now given to avoid further trouble, and surely nine million Southerners are not willing to be held responsible for the pranks of some thousand bold bad men. That always has been, and always will be, the effect. A few violate the law; the many are the sufferers. We do not think that President Grant de. sires a new Ku Klux crusade. Let him have peace. A solltary murder or beating can be made the pretext of a worse invasion than the last. Is it not then the duty of every Southern man who has his own good. and the good of his people, at heart to avoid violent acts, and to discourage the sentiments which lead to their commission In spite of their efforts some rash spirit may kill an ignorant black, without substantia cause, and then it is the duty of the good citizen to take a personal interest in arrest ing the culprit and in securing to him the punishment he richly deserves.

He who is now guilty of crimes like those which were exposed last year is guilty of the unpardonable sin-the sin against the welfare of his people.

The supplies put into market this season are, as heretofore, prepared under the personal superintendence of Dr. St. Juliau Ravenel, Chemist of the Company, at Charleston, S. U., hence planters may rest assured that its quality and composition is precisely the same as that herecufore sold.

J. N. KOBSON, "Mr. Stanley has given a thrilling narrative of his adventures among a strange people in a strange land. To speak of his book in accordance with the conventional rules of criticism, would require a criticist the coldest blood. The expedition was one of the most remarkable ever undertaken; its influence on science, civilization and christianity cannot be overrated. We rise from the perusal of these marvellous adventures with a dream like wonder at its strange fascination, and realize that Truth is strange fascination, and realize that Truth is strange fascination;" Putnam's Handy Book Series. "This admirable series of books recommends itself to the public, first, because it is a handy zeries; next, the price is within the compass of all, but above all the subjects treated of are of every day interest, suitable for every day people, by authors of undoubted ability and reliability."
