THE CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "Is designa "ted as the newspaper for the publication of "all legal notices, and official advertisements, "for the County of Charleston, under the act "of February 22d, 1870, entitled an act to regu-·late the publication of all legal and public "notices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-The Persian Shab is to occupy Buckingham Palace during his stay in England. -Small portable stoves for carriages are used in New York.

-The Prince of Wales will attend the opening of the Vienna Exhibitio . : 1 chairman of the British Commission.

-Gustave Dore has just published his illustrations to Rabelais, on which he has been engaged several years. -Bret Harte says New Jersey is the State in which he wants to reside the rest of his life. That remark will assign him to oblivion within sixty days after it reaches Boston. -Two sisters in Boston, both of whom were married several years ago at the same time, now simultaneously apply for divorces with a view to an exchange of husbands. -Several petitions have been sent into Congress praying that, in accordance with the suggestion of the late Commodore M. F. Haury, an invitation be extended to the governments of the earth to meet in conference for the establishment of an international system of crop and weather reports. -The imperial family at Chiselhurst have an income of £12,000 a year. The Spanish estates and private property of the Empress are worth £6000 pounds a year, and the sale of her diamonds, jewelry and pictures produced about £120,000. The Emperor had hardly any income of his own.

-Mayor Havemeyer, of New York, has published a letter declaring that he was nominated for mayor as a reform candidate and without any party obligations, and that the position he then occupied he now occupies, and from which he is not to be drawn by any man or set of men, be they Democratic or Republican.

-The London Grocer reports that under the factory system of making cheese, established n the United States, the American article is often superior to most of the English make, and in many instances is equal to the very finest Cheddar and Cheshire qualities. Hence American cheese is sold by all aretclass dealers, and is in large demand in England.

A whale has been captured in Hampton Roads by Captain William Bodgers; measured forty feet; yielded four barrels of oil. The Nortolk papers speak of whales as being quite usual as visitors in that section. Now the Chesapeake and Ohlo Railroad is completed, they are expected by the Norfolk citizens to commence coming up in great quantities.

Francis Joseph, of Austria, has done a good thing. He offers a prize of five thousand floring to the journalist who will write the best editorial on Austrian affairs in the German language. Sald editorial is not to contain more than one thousand words. It is immaterial what political party the writer belongs to. The Vienna papers think that there will be several thousand competitors for the

Herr Krupp, the great German ironmaster of Resen, considering that coal is likely to continne scarce and dear in Europe, has purchased for the purposes of his great works at Essen, some collieries in that neighborhood, at a cost of several million thalers. Here Krupp has also purchased, with a similar object, some deposits of iron minerals in the Slegen district. Mr. Cyruz W. Field, in a letter to the New York Tribune, announces that at a meeting of the directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Companies it was unanimously resolved to reduce the tariff on messages between Great Britain, France and New York trom one dollar to seventy-five cents a word, beginning on the first of May. He trusts that this reduction will create an increase of business which will lead to the adoption of a still lower tariff.

A Washington letter says: "The committee of ways and means have agreed to report favorably the bill which refunds the proceeds of sales of lands in the Southern States against which taxes were assessed and not paid. This bill has been before the committee for a long time, and been pressed at eachisession of Congress since the war. The bill now provides that the taxes and costs of sale be deducted from the proceeds, and the difference be refunded to the owner, who, where such lands are occupied by bona fide purchasers, must execute a lease to the occupant. The amount to be affected by the bill is about $700,000. The session is probably too near a close to admit of the discussion that must necessarily follow, and the bill may go over to the next Congress for that reason."

-A Washington telegram says : "The report of Judge Poland's committee on the Credit Mobilier will probably be presented on Monday next. After full consultation the outlines of the report have been fixed. In order to test the sense of the committee, the first proposition submitted was that the testimony taken should be reported, and that action upon it should be left with the House. This, of the general prosperity.

it is reported, was rejected unanimously. The question of jurisdiction then came up, and it was suggested that a strong report should be submitted, condemning the action of the members of Congress implicated, but declaring that there was no jurisdiction to pass judgment upon members of the present Congress Thursdays and Saturdays, one year, $4; six for acts committed in a former Congress. After discussion this was defeated by a vote of four to one. The committee then unanimously decided what their report should be, and the best information leads to the belief among those who have taken some pains to inquire, that while the report will declare that it has no jurisdiction, and can make no recommendations with regard to Vice-President Colfax or the sensiors implicated, (the committee being exclusively a House committee,) they will recommend decisive action in the cases of all those members of the House who have been implicated.

The New Way to Pay Old Debts.

One of the delegates on the floor of the Augusta Convention objected strenuously to a resolution for the appointment of a committee to memorialize Congress for an appropriation to aid in the construction of a railroad from Augusta to Chicago. The main reason for this opposition was that he disapproved of asking any favors from the United States Government. Another delegate very sensibly said that, as the National Government had assisted other sections of the Union, it would be the best policy for the South to take all the assistance she could get. Colonel D. Wyatt Aiken, of South Carolina, followed on the same line, saying that the South should take whatever help the National Government was disposed to give. The President of the Convention thought that the appeal to Congress might produce a division of sentiment among the people of Georgia, and the resolution to strike out the clause authorizing the appeal was agreed to by the Convention.

-There were probably other than political or sentimental reasons why the Augusta Convention should decline to petition Congress for the building of a new railroad line, as well as a system of canals between the West and the South Atlantic ports; but the general question whether the Southern States are justified in accepting such substantial help as the Federal Government is disposed to give is one which cannot too soon be considered and decided. Already Congress is urged to rebuild the Mississippi levees, and to undertake other vast works of internal improvement, for the immediate benefit of the South, and for the benefit, through the South, of the whole country. And General B. F. Butler, squinting at the White House from afar, proposes that the General Government pay off the debts of the Southern States. This scheme, startling as it may seem, bas strength in it. The Southern members of Congress, acting as a unit, can, with a very small support from the North and West, secure its adoption, or can elect a President, the main plank in whose platform shall be, the payment, by the United States, of the funded indebtedness of the South. This proposition can be defended upon the broadest grounds of equity and iastice. In the several States the public debt consists of two classes-that which was contracted before the war, and that which has been contracted since the war ended. For the first class of debts there was security a thousand fold, until the emancipation of the slaves swept away a great part of the wealth of the Southern whites. The slaves were a part of the security to the public for the debts which the South contracted. It is not just that the States should be forced those debts, when property to the value of one thousand million dollars has been destroyed by war, and when, besides, the value of the remaining property is seriously diminished by the changes consequent upon emancipation. The second class of debtsthose contracted since the end of the warrepresents the first cost of reconstruction. It is not necessary to determine what proproportion is due to downright stealing, and what proportion is due to the inexperience of the Legislatures, and to the necessarily heavy burden imposed upon the governments for the education and protection of the freedmen. The debts contracted since the war are the direct and immediate result of that legislation by Congress which placed the Southern States in the hands of incapable, if well-meaning, colored men and shrewd, if rascally, white adventurers. It is not just that the whole South should be made to bear the cost of the work which Congress began and completed. Had not Congress interfered, the debt of South Carolina to-day would not have exceeded seven or eight million dollars. It is nominally twice that amount. Where, then, is the impropriety of requiring of the Federal Government such money help as will give this State, and every other Southern State, a diation and grinding taxation? There are, however, some persons in the South who object to accepting anything from the General Government, because, in their opinion, such a course would hasten the centralization of the government. To these gentlemen we say: "The South can "neither roll back the wheel, nor arrest its "onward course. And the South cannot "afford to play the disinterested patriot, when the North and West are thrusting "their arms to the elbow in the National "strong box. The refusal of the South to "take what she can get will be loudly ap-'plauded, but the men who shout the loudest will be the first to take what the South "rejects. No! The South, for her whole people, has claims equal to those of West or North. And when these sections think "they have spent money enough, and have gone far enough on the road to imperialism, let them set the example of purity "and self-denial and the South will not be far behind. In the meanwhile it is clearly "the plain interest of the South to obtain "every possible subsidy and privilege from "Congress; and in future political cam-"paigns the practice should be to support "the party, whatever its name, which guar-"antees most to the South. Cause this to clevergoblin, of the amiable kind, who pro-"be understood, and the two parties will "bid against each other for the 138 electoral "votes which the South can give. The South then can make what terms she "pleases." And with her debt lifted off her back, and fair play in Washington, the South will stride forward with wonderful rapidity.

The State University.

The General Assembly on Friday elected four of the seven trustees of the University of South Carolina. They are S. J. Lee, James A. Bowley, S. A. Swails and J. R. Jervey; all of them colored men, and members of the Legislature. There is too much reason to fear that this choice is an indication of a determination to raise anew the question of race, and to force colored youths into the highest educational institution in the State. Perhaps one colored boy in a thousand may be able to pass the matriculatory examination and enter the University; and, for the sake of the few, the interests of the many are to be ruthlessly sacrificed. We take it for granted that when the colored students go in the white students will go out. And what will be gained? Only the needless assertion of the right of the colored people to have educational means equal to those enjoyed by the whites. This right we frankly concede, but we do not concede the right of the Legislature to require the two races to sit on the same benches and to stand in the same classes for nine or ten months of the year. The attempt will fail, and the whites, not the blacks, will be deprived of their share of education at the public expense. No one objects to giving the blacks just as good schools as are given to the whites. They are entitled to have such schools; but in what does it advance the dignity of the blacks to put them in a school, or college, merely becar. . has hitherto been attended by whites alone This is not the course which would be taken by those who sincerely desire to cultivate the selfrespect, and elevate the character, of the colored citizens of the State.

After the Scottites.

The members of the Wilmington (N. C.) Chamber of Commerce have taken up the matter of the discrimination against local freights practiced by the railroads under the control of the Southern Security Company. A committee has been appointed "to de-"mand relief," and, failing to obtain it from the railroad officials, to memorialize the Legislature on the subject. The Wilmington Star, which has led the attack upon the monopolists, is confident that the raiders who have seized the lines of trade and "travel" will find that "the voice of an out-"raged people" is more potent than Tom Scott and his cohorts.

Spirit of the State Press.

-The Darlington Southerner doubts the wisdom of the Night School bill, because the class whom it is intended to benefit have not ambition enough to prolong the fatigues of the day by resorting to study at night.

-The Florence Pioneer prefers that the Lumberton folk shall, by the Fayetteville and Florence Railroad, be brought, by way of Piorence, to their natural market-Charleston. It asks, Why is there not more action ? -The Abbeville Press thinks that something ought to be done to encourage immigration, and that right soon. Labor, it says, is the crying need, and three-fourths of our lands lie idle for the want of it. -The Yorkville Enquirer argues that South Carolina does not need fewer agriculturists, but needs more persons engaged in the other avocations of life. It says: "In various sec-"tions of the State there are rich beds of iron "ore. Our prosperity requires that these be "opened. It every bale of cotton that is "raised in the State were manufactured in the "State, things would soon assume a different "aspect. There would be more cotton and "corn, and wheat and rye and oats and barley wand rice made by the same amount of labor "than is made at present; and the price of "these productions of the soil would be greater. There is no reason why this may "not be done. There is water power in the "upper couties of the State sufficient to man-"facture every pound of cotton produced in "the State. This is not a bold, extravagant "declaration. There is water power in York "County sufficient to manufacture all the cot-"ton produced in any ten countles in the State. Unless a diversified sytem of labor is "adopted in our State, things will go on just "as they now are. The land will wear out, "the houses rot down, and the people of the "State get up and go to some 'new country,' "there to pine and grieve and wish they were "back. Some will be ashamed to return, and "others will be too poor to allow them to get "back."

-The Marlboro' Times is confident that President Grant's tour through the South will show him that the ex-rebels are disgracefully misruled and plundered, and that the only seeds of discord here are sown by Northern men. The President will return to Washington a wiser man, knowing that Southerners are not what they are represented to be.

New Books.

Under the title of "Tales Curious and Won-"derful," the Messrs. Harper are now publishing, by rapid instalments, a series of (illustrated) narratives for children. The selection, editorship and general supervision of the volumes of this series have been entrusted to the care of Mrs. Craik, (nee Mulock,) who, as the author of "John Halifax" and a score of other novels, equally able and high-toned and instructive, is universally known, and universally respected. Certain special powers Mrs. Craik possesses, which bent her, beyond almost any other writer of the day, for the dellcate task of preparing mental and moral pabulum, to be administered to the young. In the first place, she is, what many women are not-pre eminently a motherly person; her instinctive attachment to children manifesting itself continually in her works. In the second place, she has retained a great deal of the purity, innocence and enthusiasm of her own youth; and thirdly, her temperament is magnetic, and full of that vivid sympathy which wins the hearts of children without the slightest conscious effort.

The three last volumes of the series now before us are, "The Adventures of a Brownie, "as told to my Child," (written by Mrs. Cralk herself,) "An Only Sister," (from the French of Madame De Witte,) and "Is it True, (a collection of miscellaneous tales in a variety of styles, and treating of many different topics.)

The "Brownie" story is charming. It introduces us to a grotesque, but wonderfully vides for his childish companions many origiual sports, and is only enough of a "tricksy "spirit" himself to garnish his games with a soupcon of humor and arch mischief, neverbe :t remarked-degenerating into spite.

In "An Only Sister" we have a work both opportune and interesting. The author paints therein "real French life, and the real French "woman in her noblest type-highly cultiva-"ted, yet domestic, clever alike-with head "and hands keenly alive to all family ties and "duties-energetic, conscientious, self-deny-"ing, brave." "Such," we are told, "may "still be found in every corner of that suf-"fering land, worthy descendants of the "old Huguenot age, and Catholic dames "too, who once helped to make France glori-"ous." In these dark days, when dynasty after dynasty has crumbled away, when her "lily" lies broken, her "bees" are dumb, and her "eagle" has changed into the commonest of birds, it is pleasant to put forward as a true

Witte's "Elizabeth." Through the tales gathered under the genia title of "Is It True," there is running a clear thread of right and wrong, as is often the case with legends which deal with the supernatural world. In them, also, we find that virtue is always rewarded, and vice punished;

The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small !"

It is precisely this lesson, or the spirit incul cated by it, which consecrates (as Mrs. Craik justly observes) the "true untruth and the wise foolishness of fairy tales, and indeed of "all imaginative literature."

We are indebted to the Harpers for a neat edition (with clever wood cuts) of Charles Reade's last novellette, "The Wandering Heir." Of this narrative, it may be said that incident so improbable, as to verge upon the impossibie, are detailed with a matter-of-fact air, and & minuteness so wonderful and vivid that one is nearly deceived, for a time, into believing the most preposterous extravagances. Indeed the whole story seems to us an odd combina tion of the bizarrs fancies of Dumas, and the plain, sober, yet searching style of De Foe; not the De Foe who composed "Robinson Crusoe," but the De Foe of "Colonel Jack," "Moll Flanders," &c. But whatever may be urged for or against "The Wanderlog Heir" as a work of art, we defy anybody to begin its perusal without going breathlessly on to the dramatic, and exhibitating, and somewhat unexpected denouement!

These books are for sale at Forgartle's.

READY-MADE HOUSES.

The undersigned begs to inform persons in the interior that he is now prepared to ship READY. MADE HOUSES OF VILLAGE CHURCHES either to order u, on plans sent to him or will furnish plans for projected work. The framing, &c., being principally done by steam power upon the Northern plan, he hopes to sup ply all demands upon him at prices that will en courage building. A considerable expense has been incurred, and extensive shops erected to meet this trade, by this plan persons can buy a house cheaply and employ whom they please to put it up, getting at manufactory prices hardware, nails, sash, doors, stairs and all the appliances for a first class house. It is hoped by the projector of these mills that the trade now opened will be as advantageous to Cusomers as it is expected to be profitable to him. JOHN H. DEVEREUX.
