Truth and Falschood. List to a tale well worth the ear Of all who wit and sense admire— Invented—it is very clear— Some ages prior to Matthew Prior.

Falsehood and Truth, "upon a time,"
One day in June's delicious weather,
("Twas in a distant age and clime,")
Like sisters, took a walk together.

On, on their merry way they took,
Through fragrant wood and verdant
meadow,
To where a beech beside a brook
Invited rest beneath its shadow.

There, sitting in the pleasant shade, Upon the margin's grassy matting, (A velvet cushion ready made,) The young companions fell to chatting.

Now, while in voluble discourse, On this and that their tongues were run ning,

As habit bids, each speaks—perforce,
The one is frank; the other cunning.

Falsehood, at length, impatient grown With scandals of her own creation, Said, "Since we two are quite alone, And nicely screened from observation, Suppose, in this delightful rill,
While all around is so propitious,
We take a bath?" And said Truth, "I willA bath, I'm sure, will be delicious!"

At this her robe she cast aside, And in the stream that ran before her She plunged—like ocean's happy bride— As naked as her mother bore her!

Falsehood at leisure now undressed,
Fut off the robes her limbs that hamper
And having donned Truth's snowy vest,
Ran off as fast as she could scamper.

Since then the subtle maid, in sooth, Expert in lies and shrewd evasions, Has borne the honest name of Truth, And wears her clothes on all occasions.

While Truth, disdaining to appear In Falsehood's petticoat and boddice, Still braves all eyes from year to year, As naked as a marble goddess!

Cost of Married Life.

One of our exchanges, in descanting upon the relative cost of married and unmarried life, says:

It has become common for some newspapers to harp upon female ex-travagance, and to assign that as the principal reason why more young men do not marry; thus directly insinuating that it costs more to keep a wife than a mistress. The thousands of unmarried men who throng our cities, and through whose patronage the "social evil" is mainly fostered and made to pay, thus find a readymade excuse for remaining in single blessedness, which they are not slow to avail themselves of.

It is true that the pictures of fashionable society, and the females that mix therein as candidates for matrimony, drawn by Thackeray, Dickens, and the satirists of that school, are sufficient to deter any man, who values his honor, domestic harmings on pages of wind from matrimony, drawn by Thackeray, Dickens, and the satirists of that school, are sufficient to deter any man, who values his honor, domestic happiness or peace of mind, from taking any chances in such a lottery of doubtful prizes, while the description which Jenkins gives, with such pains-taking fidelity, of the frills and furbelows, silks, laces, and diamonds of bewildering magnificence and price, that are the necessary adornments of good seciety at a fashionable, ball, are calculated to frighten any young man of hymeneal proclivities, who does not possess the purse of Fortunatus. But these frivolous caricatures are not to be regarded as representing the true womanhood of the race, and if they are true portaits, they only stand for a certain class of fashionables, and young men are not limited to such butterflies in their selection of partners for life.

Taking society all through, in every grade, there are more women who would make good and exemplary wives, than there are men who would make faithful husbands; and it is unquestionable, that even nice young men spend more money, every year, upon their little pet vices, than would suffice to maintain a wife comfortably men spend more money, every year, upon their little pet vices, than would men spend more money, every year, npon their little pet vices, than would suffice to maintain a wife comfortably for the same length of time.

We are decidedly in favor of early marriages, on the grounds both of economy and morality. It is an old proverb, that, when a man marries, he gives to society hostages for good behavior; he is surrounded by influences that render it difficult for him to do wrong; and he has a personal interest in the preservation of womanly purity, and in contributing to her social elevation. Ill-assorted marriages, based wholly upon mercenary motives, are, of course, productive of untold ill and misery; but it is doubtful if even a bad marriage is productive of so much evil in society as celibacy. The owner of the poorest apology for a game preserve is not so apt to become a poacher as the one who owns wone at all.

ciety as celibacy. The owner of the poorest apology for a game preserve is not so apt to become a poacher as the one who owns none at all.

There was a bit of romance connected with the great Derby race, which took place a fortnight ago. A young lady was engaged to be married to Mr. Chaplin, but, twenty-four hours before the proposed wedding, cloped with the Marquis of Hastings, At the Derby, Mr. Chaplin's horse won, and the Marquis of Hastings, in consequence, lost £120,000—nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in currency. The Marquis is now 'hard up,' and Mr. Chaplin has had his revenge.

Female Suffrage. The Albany Erening Journal takes a novel view of female suffrage. It says:

"Women at the ballot-box will be followed by women in the jury-box. How delightful it will then be to serve one's country. The class of professional jurymen will increase wonderfully. And there will be no objection to staying out all night on a knotty and interesting case, either."

A BEAUTIFUL OMEN .- While the Rev. Dr. Elliot, a native of Boston, and Rector of the Church of the and Rector of the Church of the Messiah, Unitarian, St. Louis, was preaching a discourse on behalf of the famishing people of the South, last Sunday, a dove flew in at the window, perched for a moment on the gallery balustrade, then spread its wings and hovered over the minister's head, and finally seated itself on the pulpit.

Erskine held the great seal for the space of fourteen months, and though the loss of office was a serious though the loss of office was a serious blow both to his ambition and his purse, he could afterwards afford to joke about it. At a dinner party, Capt. Parry was asked, what he and his crew lived upon during the Arctic winter. "We lived chiefly on seals." "And very good living, too," said Erskine, "if you only keep them long enough."

NATIONAL ENTERTAINMENT For the Benefit of the

LADIES' SOCIETY

Suffering and Destitute Poor of the South. Will take place In Washington, D. C., August 1, '67

THE 'Ladies' Society in aid of the Suffering and Destitute Poor of the South' would respectfully and earnestly call the attention of the generous Northern public to the great distress and fearful suffering now prevailing in the Southern States. Letters are daily received from the South, from the Generals Commanding, Governors, ministers and eminent citizens, furnishing the most heart-rending details of the actual want, famine and starvation in their immediate neighborhood. The following few extracts from the very many letters received by the Secretary and Managera of the Society are respectfully referred to:

letters received by the Secretary and Managera of the Society are respectfully referred to:

H'DQUARTERS, 4TH MILITARY DIST., (MISSISSIPPI AND ARKANSAS,)
VICKSBURG, MISS., MAY 13, 1867.

I am glad to see that the attention of the gentle and humane ladies of the North is being turned towards the sad and decolate condition of this once happy land.

You, Madam, surrounded with the plenty and comforts of a wealthy city, can scarcely appreciate the fact that, in many parts of the South, whole communities are, by a failure in crops and the absence of money or its equivalent, left in want of the necessaries of life; and that poor women, with large families of helpless children, so accustomed to depend on the labor of others, that now, with no husband, brother or servant to help, and no money, they do not know what to do or where to go for food; but are left in the solitudes of these Southern forests, in rags and gaunt with hunger, subsisting on what the mother or larger children can shoot or pick up in the woods, or on what the few neighbors, nearly as poor as they are, can bring them.

Officers of my acquaintance have met with such mothers, long after dark, out in the woods, with an old gun just fired, and the coon or possum just killed; have gone home with them and met the group of little starvelings waiting patiently mother's return with some of the only sort of food they had tasted for weeks; and women and children have been found within sixty miles of the capital of a Southern State, during the past year, who had starved to death in their lonecome cabins. These cases of great distress are rare in Southern cities, for there, even the most delicately bred can generally find some work which they can do to keep the wolf from the door; but the farms or plantations in the South are peculiarly secluded, with miles of forest or swamp between them, poor roads, and the stock and animals nearly all taken by the war, the famine, the floods, or the thieves, who in such times infest a country, and the distressed families are o

Your proposed entertainment, Madam, should it produce only funds enough to relieve a small fraction of the destitution of this country, will be a good beginning, and may be followed in other cities North by similar appeals to people who have happily never felt the desolation and the horrors which follow in the tracks of great armies of invasion. God speed your society in the good work, is the wish of, Madam, yours truly,

E. O. C. ORD,
Brevet Major-General.

Brevet Major-General.

Headquarters, First Military Division, Richardor, Va., May 11, 1867.

Mrs. Harione Mather—My Dear Madam: I shall be too glad if anything I can say will aid the society in its noble work. A large proportion of the people of the South have suffered and many are still suffering almost to the limit of endurance from the devastation of war and subsequent failure of crops. They are making every possible exertion to revive their various branches of industry and become self-supporting. The liberal assistance which the Northern people are well able to give, will relieve a great amount of distress, and will no doubt be sufficient to place the poor of the South beyond further suffering for food. The recent manifestations of an almost universal desire throughout the South for a really fraternal re-union with the North, may well serve to stimulate the generous sympathies of the Northern people, while nothing could do more to foster and encourage the growth of a healthy sentiment in the South than the generous aid which it is the mission of your society to invoke. I sincerely hope the noble efforts of the society may result in the most abundant success. I am, dear Madam, very respectfully, your obedient servant, J. M. SCHOFIELD, Maj. Gen.

decided to bring it before the generous people of the North, by giving a Grand National Entertainment, trusting to their active co-operation and sympathizing aid for the immediate supply of means to enable them to purchase and forward food to starving thousands. The Grand National Entertainment will be given at Washington, D. C., August 1, 1867. 300,000 tickets will be offered for sale, at $2 each. Every ticket will be entitled to an award, which will take place at the same time. Half of the amount will be in valuable awards to the holders, and the balance will be devoted at once by the Lady Managers to purchasing food to be sent South for immediate distribution among the most needy. The Lady Managers have entered into an arrangement with Measrs Bentley, Clark & Co. to superintend the disposal of tickets, and conduct the entertainment in a manner worthy the patronage and support of the public.

HEADQUARTEES, SECOND MILITARY DIVISION, CHARLESTON, S. C., May 13, 1867.

The excellent purpose you have in view cannot be too much commended. The liberaiity of the Government of the United States, and the munificent contributions already made for the relief of the widespread destitution in the States, leaves great numbers unprovided with food and clothing. And until an abundant harvest crables the people here to do more for themselves, I trust the ever generous and prosperous committees of the North will continue their noble gifts to this impoverished and afflicted population. With impovery the subject of the success of your undertaking, I remain, Madam, very respectfully, DANIEL E. SICKLES, Commanding Second Military District.
