How Elephants are Educated.

A Detroit paper has the following: "Baby Annie, exhibited on Friday and Saturday, in this city, is as popular and well known as the majority of hu-man actors, who tread the boards instead of the saw-dust ring. Dike them, she endeavors to please, and in her way feels chagrin as deeply when she fails to re-ceive the approbation believed to be merited. She is now five years old and though far from her teens is nevertheless a pretty good lump of a body, weighing 1,800 pounds. Her history has been carefully kept, and McLaughlin, her trainer, can tell you everything about her. "At the time of her capture she was only two years old; but Smith, the caponly two years old; but Smith, the cap-tor, assisted by a party of Africans and dogs, found her as hard to control in her infancy as most women are at mature age. After a few weeks training she was started for the coast, 800 miles away, and Kenyon has yet in his cages two large byens that rode in baskets slung over Miss Annie's back. Her cost in New York was $8,000, and at the time of her purchase she was the amallest ele-phant in this country, and 'is still the only genuine African elephant. Though only genuine African elephant. Though she has never been bard pushed to test her endermore on the road, she once took a stretch of forty-two miles over the rocky roads of Pennsylvania, in eleven hours, and showed not the least sign of exhaustion. "Miss Annie is a model female-one of the old school, and would as soon twist human being who treated her courteous ly. Last winter, in her quarters at Phila-delphis, she exhibited love and hate in a very singular manner. McLaughlin had imbibed rather freely, and returning to the barn, got into a difficulty with a policeman, who was bent on arresting him. The cop had been around the barn a good deal and was somewhat acquainted a good deal and was somewhat acquainted with the elephant. The trainer fled to the barn, and getting behind 'Baby,' re-fused to submit to arrest. The M. P. advanced to bring him out, when the elephant thrust him aside with her trunk. This was repeated several times, the trainer encouraging her, when the policeman gave her an angry blow with his baton, and sought to push by. Blowing her shrill trumpet, 'Baby' caught him around the waist, and giving him a strong whirl, deposited the frightened blowsthirl, deposited the frightened blowsthirl, deposited the frightened bluecoat in a barrel of oats thirty feet away. As he had no instructions to ar-rest elephats, and could not arrest the man with her, he concluded not to press matters further. "At another time, last summer, during a hot night, McLaughlin lay down beside 'Baby' on a bale of hay, and soon fell asleep. Near him was the cage of the Bengal tiger, a fierce and ungovern-able animal, and treacherous to the last degree. By lying down, the beast could get his paws at full length under the bars, and on the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that tore the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of hat very the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very day he had thus given his unsuspecting keeper a stroke with his claws that tore open the morning of that very the morning of that very the morning of that very has the tore open the morning of that very has the tore open the morning of that very the morning of the morning of that very the morning of the morning of that very the morning of that very the morning of the morning of that very the morning of the morning of that very the morning of open the man's cheek in a horrible manopen the man's cheek in a horrible man-ner. Restless, McLaughlin rolled about, and the eyes of the 'Royal' glistened as he saw the body coming nearer to his cruel claws. At length, just as one of the keepers entered the door, the trainer rolled down so near that the tiger reached out and caught his clothes. With a sa-vers enarl he was straigtening hear for vage snarl, he was straigtening back for a pull, to get the flesh under his nails, when the elephant, who had also been sleeping, arose up at the growl, and see-ing the situation at a glance, rushed forward, before the man at the door had scarcely advanced a step, and with a blow of her trank made the tiger let go his hold and scream with pain and fury. "Since her capture, she has increased 700 pounds in weight and six inches in height. Three years ago, she had not a sign of a tusk; now, she has ivories six inches long, and growing finely. In the summer, when the weather is dry, she gets a bath at every creek, and her trainer-gives her a dozen pails of water over the back if standing long in the tent. About twice a year she gets six gallons of linseed oil rubbed over her gations of inseed of rubbed over her skin; without it, the hide would get so dry as to feel and sound like a board. Her usual feed per day is a bushel of oats and 150 pounds of hay, and she drinks, if moderately thirsty, twenty pails of water at a time. As stated, she is very docile, minding readily, if she understands what is wanted. Doing Doing wrong, through ignorance, let her trainer 'bless her eyes' a little, and 'Baby' shows as much sorrow as a repentant infant. As this is her third season, the person must be sharp who can impose on her a worthless gift. About four weeks ago, a man gave her a stick of candy which had been soaked for some time in tobacco juice. Seeming not to mind the joke, That's waited & fillle, mind the jeke, "Baby I wanted a little, and when the joker had almost forgot-ten the incident, she took up a huge piece of liver, lying near the cage of libns and seut the mass full against the fellow's breast, knocking him down, and altogether spoiling the bosom of his white shirt, and his ideas of superior smartness."
