Phillips has qualified as Solicitor-General.

The Supreme Court, in Delano against the Merchants' Mutual Insurance Company, from the Supreme Court of Louisiana, the question was upon the authority of the Constitution of Louisiana to render a contract void, because it was based upon Confederate money as its consideration. The court below found that Delano had the prior claim to a certain fund, but that as the consideration which established his claim was Confederate money, it failed, and the insurance company, whose claim was subsequently, but based on a valid consideration, was entitled to the fund. This court says, in substance, that if the judgment below had decided that the contract underlying Delano's claim was void from public policy existing at the time, there would have been no question for revision here; but as the judgment is based upon a provision of the Constitution of the State, framed after the contract was made, which declares all contracts shall be adjudged void which are founded upon consideration of Confederate money, it will have to be revised, as having sustained a law repugnant to that clause of the Federal Constitution prohibiting the States from making any law which shall impair the obligation of contracts.

"CHICAGO BOUND TO BE AHEAD."

An amusing diversion was created by a tall, well-knit and rather rugged specimen of humanity, who stood gazing at the fire with the deepest interest. Every now and then he would take a vigorous bite at a large hook of tobacco and chew with an energy that knew no flagging, but without taking his eyes from the fire, which appeared to fascinate him. As the flames made headway, he moved unceasingly, shifted his weight from one foot to the other, and chewed with renewed animation. Each new building that fell a prey to the fire seemed to cause him to experience the most poignant despair. His glance was not so strongly marked by sympathy as by anxiety. His sallow jaws seemed to elongate with every fresh building that went down. His dress and appearance did not betoken a man who had any enormous amount of property at stake, and the general impression among those who observed him was that his alarm was caused by a prospect of losing his situation. Presently, when the flames seemed as though they would engulf the whole city, he turned his pale face from the flames, and addressing a party by his side, exclaimed, with no less pride than disgust: "Behold it can't be done. The place ain't big enough! The Chicago fire knocked this all to splinters. Yes, it did, I tell you. I was born there, and I ought to know. I tell you, sir, Chicago is bound to be ahead on this fire yet," and he walked away, his face glowing with patriotic fervor and an expression of the most unbounded contempt overspreading his countenance for the miserable failure that was certain to attend all envious attempts of Boston to rival Chicago in the matter of fires.

A terrible incident of the Boston fire took place at the furnishing store of Hickman, on Washington street, where the walls had been wrapt in a deadly embrace by the flames, and had become weak and tottering through the intense heat. At length they fell, and three men were buried up to the shoulders among the heavy fragments of brick and stone. The terrible physical agony of their cries of anguish which they suffered, filled the frightened crowd with horror, but at first no one advanced to their succor. After a few moments, two or three men crossed the street to where a portion of the wall was still overhanging the spot where the poor victims were begging and shrieking for help, and tried by the utmost exertion of main strength to pull and wrench them out of the horrible vice, but these efforts only made greater their sufferings, and the bricks and debris were still falling at every moment. The men relinquished the perilous and fruitless risk, and retreated from the dangerous spot; and shortly afterwards, in frightful paroxysms of pain and with cries that will ring in the ears of many of the spectators to their dying day, the crushed masses of humanity gave up the breath of life, and were a moment afterwards buried by another crashing fall of the wall. It is known that thirty lives have been lost.

New York's accumulation of unpunished murderers is the subject of much severe comment, and talk of Lynch law is revived. Witnesses of the scene in Pine street at the time of the arrest of King for killing O'Neil, say a crowd composed of well-dressed and intelligent men was greatly inclined to Lynch the prisoner, and that a ruse, by which King was taken through an unoccupied building, was all that saved him from summary justice. Even the staid and conservative Journal of Commerce has an editorial headed "The Omen in Pine street," in which the spirit displayed by the crowd of brokers, merchants, and other business men, is considered indicative of a vigilance committee, or some similar organization, at no distant day.

The Great Western Telegraph Company are about to establish additional facilities between England and New York. They also intend to connect the West Indies directly with New York and England, and contemplate telegraphic communication with Brazil.

THE WORK OF THE COMING SESSION OF CONGRESS.

There is every probability that the law of 1867, requiring each new Congress to meet for organization on the 4th day of March, instead of the first Monday in December, will have to be re-enacted. It was repealed last session by a majority of three votes in the House, through the persistency of Mr. Dawes and the aid of the Democratic members. The coming session contains but fifty-five working days, of which the first half would be fully required by the Appropriations Committee if the estimates were now ready so that the bills could be fully prepared in advance of the meeting. But there will be unavoidable delay in this particular, and the days of the session before the holiday adjournment will be wasted as before. There are ninety-three bills on the House docket alone, which are special orders and must come up, and all the important legislation arising from the treaty of Washington has to be considered in committee and passed through each House. Nearly all the old Republican members, who are re-elected to the new Congress, are writing to the committee men, who are already here, urging the necessity of a session of the new Congress immediately upon the expiration of the old, and those here concur in the views of their correspondents.

Wash. Cor. New York Herald.

A SPECK OF WAR FLOATS ON THE POLITICAL HORIZON OF FLORIDA.—Private advices from Tallahassee tell us they are bound to have trouble over the result of the election. It appears that the vote has been very close, and it has not yet been definitely settled whether Hart or Bloxham is to be the Governor elect. Charges of frauds are pouring in from every quarter, and the public mind is greatly agitated by conflicting rumors. The Conservatives claim that the votes of Leon and Jefferson Counties are fraudulently large; that instead of being in ratios of one to seven, which is the usual rate, the actual vote is equal to one-fourth of the entire population. In other Counties known to be Radical, such as Gadsden and Deatur, the vote is also excessive. Besides, the lawless arrest of County canvassers by United States officials has stirred up a great deal of bad blood. The Radical sheets claim a victory by a majority of 2,000. On the other hand, the Conservatives claim that they have elected the Governor, and claim the Senate by a majority of two, but leave the Assembly doubtful. The agitation has drawn large numbers of negroes to the capital. Hence we fear that in the heated discussion of the moment, a collision is imminent, and a single blow may spring a riot.

FORMATION OF A LYNCHING PARTY IN MISSOURI.

The St. Louis Republican learns by private advices that a vigilance committee has been organized in Lafayette County, for the purpose of lynching Col. Turner, who shot and killed Mr. Graves a few days ago, for an alleged libelous publication. The sheriff called on the citizens to assist him in preserving the peace, a number of whom responded, and Turner was protected. Since then the vigilants have notified the citizens who aided the sheriff to leave the County, and they have deemed it expedient to do so.

A THEATRICAL FRAUD.

Some week or ten days ago, a stranger, calling himself D. E. Townsend, came to the city. He represented himself to be the agent of the Horace Lingard Company, and his business to be to prepare for their coming. He engaged the opera house for three nights, had advertisements inserted in the daily papers, programmes published, etc. A day or two ago, having made all his arrangements, he went away. On yesterday, it was discovered that he was a bogus agent, and that Lingard had no idea of coming here.

Judge Shilader Lucas, of Liberty, Mo., has been arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and carrying concealed weapons. It is alleged that several "three-card-monte" gamblers were tried in the Judge's court on Tuesday last, and fined, but the Judge not being satisfied with that measure of punishment, attempted to incite a mob to hang them and their attorneys, which nearly succeeded. The gamblers were followed by Judge Lucas, who, meeting them, conducted himself in such a manner as to warrant his arrest.
