> laborious thought, exhaustive study, or indefatigable personal application, our dead friend never thought of self, but always of that end over in his mind, the complete performance of the task before him. A wise thinker has said of genius, that it was the power of con-tinued application to one subject of thought, and in Mr. Talley there may be said to have been eminently developed the genius for labor. Born with a mind bright and appreciative, blessed with an education well calculated to improve it, it is not surprising that before he had at-tained his thirtieth year, his name was known on all hands as a name full of promise for future usefulness and honor.

> Regretting that, I am not fitted, for want of a more extended acquaintance with the early life of my late honored senior, to speak of his rapid advancement in his profession, and of his success therein, I yet claim sufficient knowledge of him to bear my feeble testimony to his pure character and noble qualities. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following resc-

> Whereas death, ever ready to seize upon our strongest and most valued comrades, has attracted forth his all-powerful arm and stricken down, in our midst, our distinguished brother of the Bar, the late William Henry Talley.

ed brother of the Bar, the late William Hehry Talley:

Resolved, That we, members of the Columbia Bar, do most sadly realize that in the death of William H. Talley, we have to mourn the loss of one who, by his unwearied application, his deep study, his thoughtful research, had qualified himself for a permanent place in the front rauks of the Bar of South Carolina; one who, by his devoted and self-sacrificing patriotism in the cause of his country, has entitled himself to a high position in the esteem of those who mourn that country, as centried nimself to a high position in the esteem of those who mourn that country's wrongs; one who, by his undaunted conduct when the clouds of adversity were gathering around him, and by his faithful performance of his private duties, evinced that manly fortitude and simple derotion to duty which are the crowning virtuce of a truly Christian character.

Resolved, That by his death, the Bar of Columbia has been deprived of one of its brightest ornamente; his fellow-citizens of a laborious end public-spirited co-worker, and his State of a useful, brave and devoted son.

Resolved, That we can with pride remember, in the midst of our grief over the loss we have sustained, the manly, open and honorable course of professional dealing that so eminently marked the conduct of our decased brother, whose whole career gave evidence of brother, whose whole carser gave evidence of a heart as well as a hand that could never a heart as well as a hand that could never steep to an unworthy deed.

Resolved, That we do hereby tender our condolence and sympathy to his beceaved wife and family in this their hour of deep distress ever their loss of one who, though well known to us to possess the stronger and manifer qualities that fitted him to shine among men, yet had an even larger share of those kindly, affectionate and simple habits of mind that enabled him faithfully to fill the place of husband, father and son.

From this he never, wholly recovered. The life of our friend was not eventful, but it presents itself to us in its public, professional and private relations. I first knew Mr. Talley, now nearly twenty years ago, as a member of the Legislature. He was then in his youthful prime. His career was marked by intelligent, active business; qualities; and he did not at all attempt, as too many do, to shine upon the floor. He was respected by all, honored by all. In his professional career, all of us remember him. Mr. Talley was not a genius; few can be so classed; but he was undoubtedly an able man—a well-informed, industrious, earnest lawyer. His intellect was not rounded off into a symmetrical whole. On the contrary, it was rather rugged, strong, bold; and if sometimes he entertained an escentric opinion, he was honest and ardent in his convictions. As Solicitor of this Circuit, although from the first he was somewhat enfeetled by the slow, insidious encroachments of disease, we can all attest his able, earnest and faithful discharge of duty. It may be said of him, that he tell at his post. But whatever might have been Mr. Talley's usefulness as a public servant, it was, after all, as a man, in the domestic and social relations, that he shone most brightly, that his life and character were the most charming. Within the precincts of home and family, we may not rudely or too freely enter. As a dutiful son to his aged parents, as a devoted kneband to a no less devoted wife, we may here be permitted to refer to him. As father and friend, he was exemplary, warmhearted and sincere. And long will the respect of this community and the affections of those who were nearest to him and knew him best, cluster with fragrant memories around the name of William Haves Talleys. spect of this community and the affections of those who were nearest to him and knew him best, cluster with fragrant memories around the name of William Henry Talley. Mr. Chairman, I second the resolutions. The resolutions were thereupon unani-mously adopted.

Col. F. W. McMaster offered the following preamble and resolutions:

The providence of an All-Wise God, which has removed from our midst Major John Waties, who, for seventeen years, was a member of the Columbia Bar, demands from his brethren an humble submission to the Divine decree, and a tribute to the memory of one

so much honored by us and respected by the ber of the Oslumbia Bar, demands from his brethren an humble submission to the Divine docree, and a tribute to the memory of one so much honored by us and respected by the whole community.

Misjor Watics was a talented and able lawyer; but eminent as he was in his profession, he was even more conspicuous for his integrity of character and moble social qualities. The purity of his life, his inflexible adherence to truth and honor, combined with great suavity of manner, and kind and tendor affections, rendered him an object of love to many and of admiration to all who knew him. In his death the State has lost one of her noblest citizens and the Bar of Columbia one of its most esteemed representatives. Under a sense, therefore, of the sincere regard and veneration we entertained for him while living, and the loss we have sustained by the sad bereavement, which has separated him from all earthly intercourse with us—his brothers of the Bar—beit Resolved, That in the death of John Waties this community has been bereaved of a noble, high-minded, virtuous and patriotic citizen, and the Bar of Columbia of a most honorable, useful and efficient member.

Resolved, That these proceedings be presented by the Chairman of this meeting to the Court of Common Pless for Richland County, at its next term, with the request that they be entered on the journals of the Court.

Resolved, That these proceedings, cogether with our heartfelt sympathy, to the family of the deceased; and that the editors of the Carolinan and the Pricans berguested to bublish these proceedings, Colonel McMaster then said:

Mn. Channana: It is rarely the case when a Bar is called together on an occasion as solemn as the present, to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of two of its members, of such existed character, such promise of macfalness, wide circle of friends, as Wm. H. Talley and John Waties. They were nearly of the same age, practiced at the same Bar for seventions of the court of Appeals, he was admitted to the man, when he atood forth to

United States Circuit Court, at Commbia, in January, 1872—an occasion well fitted to the man, when he stood forth to defend the dignity of his profession and the privileges of its members. Well do I remember the emotion I folt, when, two days before this trial, I entered my effice, and saw, written in large letters, on a sheat of foolscap: "John Waties is at your service." It was so like him, so generous and brave. An earnest, bold and chivalrous champion of justice, he was always ready, with willing heart, unbianching eye and ready tongue, to speak even to the tyrant on his throne, and defy his power. Amidst the mass of records of the wholesale and wicked prosecutions which are transmitted in what is called the great Ku Klux trials, there is no nobler and boider speech than waties uttered on that occasion; and when the memory of the persecuting Judge, the packed juries and bribed witnesses will only be remembered to be cursed, the name of Wates will take place with that of his illustrious grand-father. His speech, like the elequent oplinion of Judge Waties in the State ts. Lehre, reported in 2 Trendway, will be regarded as the manly, true and noble production of a heightly soul.

As a patriot and defender of constitutional liberty, our country has furnished no better

Mr. Chairman, I feel my inability to portray the character of such a man. Indeed, it is a theme worthy of the poet. In his death the commonwealth has suffered. Such a character is a blessing to say community. Such a character is a divine legacy to his bereaved widow and children, which will snimate and encourage them during their pligrimage in life to deeds of virtue and acts of love. It is better than fortune, more enduring than riches!

Francis W. Fickling, in seconding the resolution, made a very carnest speech, in which he dwelled with great emphasis upon the high moral character of the deceased and his warm advocacy of the side of right against wrong, and his firm adherence to his conscientious beliefs.
