CONGRESSMAN Joe F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, has written a denunciatory reply to General Butler's letter defending the back pay Act, and assailing the press, explaining why he did not himself take the pay, charging Butler with quarreling with everybody, and applying a good many hard epithets to him.

United States securities forwarded for redemption should be addressed to the Loan Division, Secretary's Office, and all registered bonds should be assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury for redemption.

Among the arrivals by the Harmonia, yesterday, were nineteen families, numbering one hundred in all, of the sect of Memnonites. The Russian Government gave this class ten years in which to emigrate or Russianize themselves. They say, notwithstanding the permission given to emigrate, authority to do so was obtained only after repeated applications to the Provincial Governor, to the Governor General, and finally to the Ministers at St. Petersburg.

CHICAGO, August 16.—The farmers of Champaign County have put their theories and co-operative plans into practice, having obtained license from the State to act in a corporate capacity. They have clubbed together, and have just sent nineteen car-loads of corn to market on their own account, and by this operation they expect to save $500. They intend to forward their whole crop in this way. A large convention was held to-day by the farmers in Champaign, and an independent ticket nominated.

"WHAT KIND OF ELASTIC?"—A dry goods man, who is well known for his politeness, has a father who is an excellent citizen, but not a very smooth talker. They were so busy at the store Saturday afternoon, that the old gentleman was called in to help. Among the customers was a young lady, who appeared to be waiting to trade with him whose elderly appearance invited her confidence. Soon an opportunity offered, and leaning over the counter as an invitation for him to do the same, she whispered her order. He bent close to her and said, "What's that?" in a voice that started the perspiration to her forehead. Again she whispered, "Oh, elastic," said he, in a tone that could be heard on the walk, and looking much pleased with his success. "What kind of elastic?" he added, bending his head closer to the burning face of the perspiring maiden. Once more she tremblingly whispered, "For garters, hey?" he repeated, even louder than before, without noticing the horror-struck expression of the almost fainting young lady. "Something fancy, I suppose?" he went on to say, in happy oblivion of the storeful of people; "young people now-a-days want things nice. My old woman uses a shoe-string, and sails around without noticing the difference." Then he got down with the box, and turned to show it, but the customer was gone. He stood around with the elastic some five minutes in waiting, but she did not return, and it is likely he has forgotten all about the circumstance now.—Danbury News.

AERONAUTIC STEERAGE.—At the last meeting of the Aeronautical Society, London, two rather important steps of progress were reported. One is that by M. Dupuy de Lerne, who sends information that by means of a screw worked by eight men, in a balloon weighing altogether four tons, he has been able to cause the balloon to deviate twelve degrees either way from the direction in which the wind was blowing. This, as the chairman remarked, would have enabled balloons to go into Paris, as well as out of it. A step in the direction of motive power, combining strength with lightness, was exhibited in a small machine occupying less than a square yard, in which steam was got up by the use of gas, in less than two minutes, to a pressure of 100 pounds to the square inch. The machine weighs only forty pounds, and is of four-horse power. On the same principle, it was observed that another engine could be made of 100-horse power, that will weigh within 700 pounds. One is ordered for a balloon that has been constructed for the Aeronautical Society of Vienna, at a cost of £1,200.

A Paris letter gives the following strange intelligence: "Among the diamonds brought by the Shah are said to be some of a kind totally unknown in Europe. They have all the properties of other sorts, the same transparency, brilliancy and hardness, but they are reported to possess the property of emitting a perfume in an apartment where many persons are assembled; or, better still, in that of a ball room in the midst of the animation of the dance. These gems are found in a remote part of Persia, the soil of which is composed of ferruginous and carboniferous strata. The scent they exhale resembles that of amber, a little incense, and a special odor peculiar to the forests of that district."

The trousseau of a young Austrian bride was seized by the custom house officials, a few days since, and confiscated for non-payment of duty. Our custom house regulations, as they effect travelers, are about on a par with the most barbarous nations of the earth. It is notorious that many custom house inspectors are easily bribed to pass trunks filled with dutiable clothing, and it is reasonably probable that in every case where personal effects are seized, it has been because of resistance to extortion or ignorance of rules, on the part of the person so molested. Here is a matter, also, which emphasizes the demand for an improved civil service.

While an old hen and chickens were scratching vigorously on a pier, at Richmond, Va., the other day, a rat stealthily approached from the wharf, and seizing one of the brood by the leg, attempted to drag it to its retreat. In an instant, the old hen pounced upon the back of the invader, trampling him ferociously, while another hen joined her, and with two successive strokes of the beak, expeditiously plied, succeeded in cutting the rat's throat as cleanly as if it had been done with a knife. A number of persons saw the contest, and applauded the result.

A colored man of Wilmington, N. C., by the name of Sandy Johnson, has a tame coon which follows him about the streets like a dog. The Journal says that he is not only a civilized but an educated coon, as he understands an order, and does whatever his master tells him. They sit down and eat their meals together, the coon imitating his master, not only in taking up a piece of bread in his paw and biting it, but in lifting a cup of water to his mouth and drinking as naturally as anybody. The animal is christened Bill Johnson, and his master, Sandy Johnson, calls him "Brother Bill."

A vein of mica has been discovered in Cherokee County, Ga., and they talk of getting the Mikado of Japan to come and develop it.

President Grant's cook at Long Branch being asked by Jenkins, the other day, what the General's favorite dish was, replied, naively—salary.

An unknown man, with a bottle of whiskey by his side, was run over and killed by a train on the Macon and Augusta Railroad, on Friday last.

A young Englishman has recovered heavy damages from a tailor who sent him an insolent dun on a postal card.

The story of Jean Valjean, one of the most powerful in all the literature of fiction, has been paralleled in real life by the adventures of Alfred Eripe. At the age of twenty-four, Eripe was in receipt of a salary of 1,450 francs per annum. Yielding to temptation, he became in want of money, and obtained large sums by several dishonest transactions. Failing to appear at his trial, he was sentenced by the Seine Court of Assizes to ten years' hard labor, but getting hold of the registry of birth of one of his friends named Jules Victor Adolph Lemaitre, he assumed that name and escaped. He entered the army and served for seven years in an exemplary manner. At the end of that time, however, he deserted. The true Lemaitre being arrested for this offence, the deception of Eripe was brought to light, and he was sentenced by default to an additional term of seven years. Escaping arrest, he obtained, by means of his scholarly attainments, a professorship in a school at Nogent l'Artaud, and afterwards held similar positions in Belleville, Genesee and Fer-en-Tardenois. All this time he was known as Lemaitre, and everywhere his conduct was good. At the last named place he married a young lady with some prospects. In 1863, he lost his wife, and in three months married again. He was now established in the world as a respectable and useful citizen; but one day he was recognized by the man whose name he had assumed, and who on that account had been brought into trouble. The consequence was another trial. The defence was confined to an eloquent advocate, and his recital of his unfortunate client's efforts to reform and escape the disgrace of the evil courses of his early life appears to have profoundly moved the jury and the audience. A verdict of acquittal was rendered.

THEY ORDER THINGS BETTER IN GERMANY.—They treat dishonest bankers in Germany somewhat differently from what we do in America. Fraulein Adele Spitzeder established the Dachaer Bank in Munich five years ago, and for a while did the largest business in the city. Her plan of operations, like all the works of genius, was simple, and it was eminently successful. She commenced by borrowing small sums for a short time from any one who would lend, paying ten per cent. interest (a high rate for Germany) in advance, and covering her maturing bills by new deposits. Her business began to flourish almost immediately, and she extended her operations with great tact and audacity. Twenty-five clerks were scarcely able to attend to her customers. To agents who brought deposits she paid from five to seven per cent. She lived like a princess of the blood royal. Of course this kind of business could not last long. One fine morning Fraulein Spitzeder decamped, leaving no assets, and liabilities amounting to more than three millions of dollars. Well, the fugitive was followed and apprehended, and so little sympathy have the German laws for theft and thieves that she was sentenced to three years imprisonment. In this country Fraulein Spitzeder would have undergone no such punishment. She would have offered the prosecution a compromise of fifty cents on the dollar. It would have been accepted, and she would retire upon a million and a half. Whoever heard of the American courts sending a million dollar rogue to the penitentiary?

REMEDY FOR THE BITE OF A RATTLE-SNAKE.—A Mr. Phillips, of Jacksonville, Florida, who was engaged in removing a couple of rattlesnakes from one box to another, was bitten on the hand by one of the reptiles. His assistant, without loss of time, immediately procured a bottle of whiskey and poured it into a bowl, and into this Mr. Phillips thrust his hand. The poison was thus effectually neutralized, and Mr. Phillips experienced but little inconvenience from the bite. This involves a slight change in the whiskey practice for snake bites, and will, we fear, be not half so popular as the old plan of making an internal application of the fluid—to get a prescription of which "old soaks" have been known to wade around snake haunts for hours, with their pants rolled up, as an invitation to the poisonous reptiles to come and nibble them.

ANOTHER CASUALTY.—During the storm Wednesday, in which Rose Young and Dr. Robertson's saddle horse were killed, the lightning struck and killed John Gill, a colored man, originally from Chester, but lately employed on the same place. Three different casualties on the same plantation and same day is remarkable. Several years ago, three men were killed by lightning on this plantation.—Wilmington News.

Justice is meted out with a rapidity in New York, which is in keeping with the age. A river pirate was caught stealing from a vessel in the river, and in less than three hours afterwards was sentenced to five years in the State prison.
