

Manufactures in the South.

The importance of diversifying the industry of the South, especially in regard to the increase of manufactures, is beginning to be more appreciated by the people of this section than ever before.

It pays the mill proprietors and it pays the cotton producers to bring them together. For instance, the mills of Columbus took this season 7,251 bales, which netted the producers $700,000, and the mills then put the 7,251 bales into shapes that brought nearly $2,000,000.

The success which the South has already realized in manufacturing is gratifying. It clearly establishes its capacity to compete with any other section in manufacturing heavy yarns and certain classes of fabrics, in which a steady improvement is apparent.

On arriving at the creek, at a point near the butcher-pen, not far from the bridge, Anderson and Hooper undressed and went into the water, leaving Martin on the bank. Martin threw Carter's clothes into the creek, when the latter jumped in and secured them, replacing them on the bank.

Another rope-walker proposes to cross Niagara below the falls on a cable longer and higher than the one used by Blondin; and finally to imitate Sam Patch by jumping into the boiling stream below. When all is over, there probably won't be even a patch of him left.

Col. B. G. Lockett writes as follows concerning the caterpillar-destroyer: "I have used it upon 300 acres, killing the caterpillar in every instance, and that without injury to the plant."

Mr. Nichols, a person who died recently in France, was buried with three skeletons, which he had carefully preserved for the purpose.

A FEMALE FIEND.—On Tuesday night last, the mutilated corpse of a young boy, named Willie Carter, was found under a trestle of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, near Wilmington.

The conductor on the Chicago and Alton Road is reported as having forbidden honeymoon "bidding and cooing." Observing a bridegroom's arm out of place, he forbade further demonstrations.

The officials of the Southern Railway Security Company, of which combination "the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company is a part, deny that the latter company has decided to surrender the lease of the North Carolina Railroad from Greensboro to Charlotte, and thus terminate all suits as to its validity and the right of the lessee to change the gauge of the leased road."

Mr. Benjamin Nunnery, who lives seven miles from Camden, was killed by a stroke of lightning on Sunday, the 10th, while sitting under a tree in his yard with his wife and others.

The Boston Post says it would be a great relief to meet a state constable who was not wearing a diamond pin received as a bribe from some rum seller.

A tomb-stone maker in Boston chisels C. O. D. on a large portion of his tombstones. One of his head-stones read: "Biddy Flamerly, C. O. D. Let her lie, I. P."

THE LEE DUNLAP CASE.—A contemporary thus explains the present status of the Lee Dunlap case: "In December, 1868, Lee Dunlap, a colored man, shot and instantly killed, in the city of Charlotte, a white man, James Gleason.

Mr. Duffie has presented us with a copy of No. 393 of Harper's "Library of Select Novels"—"Too Soon—a study of a girl's heart"—by Katharine S. Macquoid. The novels of this authoress are marked by a faithful delineation of character, purity of sentiment, force of expression and elevated moral tone.

The citizens of Uniontown, Va., feel a little cold toward Henry Snyder. His wife fell down a well, and he rode sixteen miles to borrow a rope to pull her out, when there was a twenty-foot ladder leaning against the house.

The Irish newspapers are bemoaning the increased migration of "the respectable, well-dressed, intelligent and orderly population," who are abandoning their native country in countless numbers.

The heading in a Boston paper, "Anti-Grant Meeting in London," startled its readers until they discovered it related to the grant to the Duke of Edinburgh.

The sale of the Laurens Railroad has been confirmed by Judge Bryan.

CITY MATTERS.—Subscribe for the PHOENIX—don't depend on borrowing. The weather was very pleasant Sunday and yesterday.

Governor Moses has appointed J. J. Richardson a Trial Justice for Kershaw. Nearly all the State papers report casualties by lightning during the past week.

A supposed mad dog was killed in Representative Minor's yard on Saturday last.

Suppose Goodson, (colored,) formerly a member of the Legislature, publishes a card, asserting that his removal by the Governor, from the position of Trial Justice, was owing to his impartial administration of justice—regardless of race or color.

The Gaiety for September is filled with interesting matter. Among others, the following: "The Coming Marriage," "The Wetherel Affair," "Casual Cogitations—Will the Coming American Drink?" "The Anti-Slavery Men of the South;" "The Mammoth Religion of the World;" "The Revolution of 1815 in Berlin—Personal Recollections;" "Rhymes from Ronsard;" "Symbolism and Language." Sheldon & Co., 677 Broadway, New York, are the publishers.

Supreme Court Decisions, August 18, 1873.—The State, respondent, vs. the South Carolina Railroad Company, North-eastern Railroad Company, It. Graham and F. P. Chapeau, F. P. Chapeau and J. P. Hefron, appellants. Motion in arrest of judgment in these cases granted.

CHILD TAKEN UP.—About 7 o'clock, last evening, a small white boy, who appeared to be between four and five years of age, was found at the corner of Main and Gervais streets. He could give no intelligent account of himself or his residence. He gave his name as John Patrick, and stated that he lived near Wallace. Policeman Bright, after earnest but futile efforts to ascertain where the child lived, carried him to the guard house, where the anxious parents may rest assured that their little boy is well cared for; and where they can have him restored to them.

True.—The Richmond Dispatch uses the following language. It will apply to South Carolina as well: "The negroes are not the most acute of observers, yet they can distinguish a jay-bird from a jackass. They begin to see that those who flatter them most do no more for them than those who tell them no lies. They see little difference between whites in their conduct towards them, save that they get all their employment and all their compensation from the Conservative whites. The other side only musters them about and feeds them up with sugared promises that are never redeemed, in order to get their votes. They are neither deluded nor cowed by Conservatives, but we believe they will not again break their necks to vote for the men who have so long deluded them and been kept in good places by their votes."

Not that for this he'd care a straw, Nor damaged reputation; He snaps his fingers at the law— He'd lose the situation. Like Spartan youth to theft he's trained, But not to save the nation; To leave it with its Treasury drained Is finished education. He'll sell the sheds from o'er our heads, The taxes he must gather, And say to us don't make a fuss And never mind the weather. He comes to glean by tricks so mean That even Grant, his master, Called loudly for great James L. Orr To save him from disaster. Orr called a meeting for reform; Some dozen rogues attended, Confessed their faults in solemn form, But never one amended. At scent of cash some native trash— Some Jews around him gather; Like vultures at a carrion feast, These birds all of a feather. But every dog must have his day And so the carpet-bagger, And in good time he'll pass away Without the aid of dagger. Nor should he feel the patriot's steel— 'Twould do him too much honor; Just give him rope, himself he'll hang— The halter he was born for.

THE BEGINNING OF SICKNESS.—Never trifle with what are called small ailments. A disorder easy of control at first, if neglected for a few weeks may become a mortal disease. But especially careful not to let debility gain upon you, for it is the door through which all maladies enter the system.

Taken at his word.—A correspondent of the Knoxville Press and Herald writes: "The cholera at Greenville has developed a few cases of monstrous depravity, one of which I will relate, without mentioning names. An old gentleman, probably nearly seventy years of age, who lived a mile or two in the country, and is noted for his recklessness and utter defiance of the laws of God, came into town one day, and, passing down the street, cried out that he intended to spread the cholera over the town. He then went to an undertaker, and wanted to know if he could make him a coffin, and what he would charge. The reply was, that if he wanted it before his death, he would charge him $25; but if after, he would charge only $14. He told him to proceed with the matter, but to be sure to make it out of two-inch plank, and leave it open at both ends, so that if the devil came in at one end, he could escape at the other. That night he was stricken down with the cholera, and by morning was a corpse."

How THE REDSKINS WED.—A recent visitor among the Indians in Florida gives an account of a marriage ceremony which he witnessed: "The company was composed of the whole tribe, all of whom were dressed in their best finery. A circle was formed, the bride moved to the centre, holding in her hand an ear of corn. Then the bridegroom advanced alongside of her, with a deer's leg in his hand. The mutual exchange comprises the whole ceremony. After the ceremony the whole company advanced and feasted on bear meat and honey for two days and nights."

A FEMALE COLLEGE PROFESSOR.—The feminine college at Evanston, Illinois, is in future to be known as the "Women's College of the North-western University." A rule of the institution is that at least one of the faculty must be a woman. The first feminine professor appointed is Miss Frances Willard. She occupies the chair of esthetics, and has a salary for the first year of $1,800, with assurance of an annual advance for the next three years of $200. Five ladies have been elected to the board of trustees of the university.

The papers are talking a good deal of the Bessemer steamship at Hull, England, designed to prevent sea-sickness. There is only one way that can be done, and that is by never going to sea.
