The Suicidal Cat. There was a man named Ferguson, He lived on Market street; He had a speckled Thomas cat,

That couldn't well be beat; He'd catch more rats and mice and sich Than forty cats could eat. This cat would come into the room

And climb upon a chair; And there he'd sit and lick hisself, And purr so awful queer, That Ferguson would yell at him— But still he'd purr severe.

And then he'd climb the moonlit fence, And loaf around and yowl, And split and claw another cat Alongside of the jowl;

And then they both would shake their And jump around and howl.

Oh, this here cat of Ferguson's Was fearful then to see; He'd yell precisely like he was In awful agony; You'd think a first class stomach-ache

Had struck a small baby. And all the mothers in the street, Waked by the horrid din, Would rise right up and search their babes To find some worryin' pin;

And still this vigorous cat would keep
A hollerin' like sin.

And as for Mr. Ferguson, Twas more than he could bear, And so he hurled the boot-jack out, Right through the midnight air; But this vociferous Thomas cat Not one cent did he care.

For still he yowled and kept his fur A standin' up on end,
And his old spine a-doublin' up
As far as it would bend,

As if his hopes of happiness Did on his lungs depend. But while a curvin' of his spine, And waiting to attack
A cat upon the other fence, There came an awful crack:

And this here speckled Thomas cat Got busted in the back. When Ferguson came down next day, There lay his old feline, And not a life was left of him,

Although he had had nine;
"All this has come," said Ferguson,
"Of curvin' of his spine." Now, all ye men whose tender hearts

This painful tale does rack, Just take this moral to yourselves, All of you, white and black: Don't ever go, like this here cat, To gettin' up your back.

To determine whether a man is drunk or not, get him to say, "The scenery is truly roral." If he says "trural rury," you may put him down as drunk.
