COLUMBIA, S. C., THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 30, 1874.

A NEW ORLEANS ROMANCE. - Every day at one of the recorders courts in New Orleans is to be found an elderly lady neatly, even elegantly dressed, apparently watching with intensy in-terest each trial as it is called, and when the court has a djourned quietly moving away with the crowd. She has a painful and singular history. Childless and alone in the world, she was once the centre of a happy family circle; but a series of misfortunes came circle; but a series of misfortunes came and left her hopeless and aimless. The epidemie of 1855 deprived her of her husband and two ohildren. Of her re-maining sons one was killed in the army, and the other, about a year since, was arraigned before the same court for murder. Before this awful shock the mother's reason had availed shock the mother's reason had recled and left her a harmless maniac. Since then she, each day, imagines her son on trial and watches there for his coming. Day after day she prosecutes in the court room her tireless watch. Disappointment never affects her, for she thinks she will see him to-morrow. Those who have charge of her gratify the barmless delusion, and thus morning and evening she is found at her post, influenced by an affection that defies the flight and wreck of reason.

A San Francisco reporter blushed at some remarks of Victoria Woodhull, and was promptly discharged by his employers for "conduct unbecoming a journalist."

It says that it "has been recently purchased by several influential Republicans, who have contributed their means to its support. The paper was on the eve of suspension, when they stepped forward te save it, and to nail the Republican colors to its mast-head." Here is a combination of men, who unite their means, talents, experience, influence and labors to uphold their party journal. That journal is specially devoted to a maintenance of its party organization. It has rallied every available element and brought it into line for this purpose. It has no thought of the great interests or violated rights of the people. It moves wholly upon the plane of party prejudice, party passion and party ascendancy. It seeks to perpetuate its domination as of the most vital necessity and at all hazards. the importance of the stake and the magnitude of the issue. Having appropriated a fund, and made their journal strong in means; having enlisted the services and interest of several writers; having made a pool, so to speak, of the political fortunes of a number of aspiring men and candi-dates, they are ready to exert its power make its sophistries popular and pre valent.
