VOLUME X—NUMBER 140

A CHANCE FOR SOUTH CAROLINA.
When a man like Mr. William Henry Trescott can say of such a State as South Carolina, that among the people of his State Federal politics are obsolete, and that the one absorbing, vital interest is the honest administration of the State Government, he presents a picture of the revolution that has swept over the South, since the war, which an elaborate description of the situation might fail to convey to the mind. South Carolina was the home of Federal politics, and Mr. Trescott was reared in its atmosphere. His writings and his experience lay in the outer circle of Federal and inter-State relations, and those subjects were always matter of absorbing interest to the people among whom he dwelt. If he can find no interest in these questions now among his people, there must be little of such interest in South Carolina; and the fact that the South Carolinians have no such interests, and that Federal politics are obsolete among them, shows how completely the old State has been beaten down. We are all familiar with the events which have effected these mighty changes in the disposition of this people. Men who see the foundations of their homes tottering and threatening destruction; who feel the hands of robbers upon their throats; who hear the burglars cutting their way into their houses, do not stop to indulge in speculations as to the rights and duties of members of society. Just so, the situation is too intense in South Carolina; the pending questions are too near at home; there is too much of a struggle for life and security to person and individual property for men to stop to discuss State sovereignty, or even to consider their aggregate relations with other political communities. Federal politics are obsolete. It matters little whether Republicans or Democrats rule the land. It matters little what powers the Federal Government assumes to itself, or how little recognition is given to the sovereignty of the States. All that the people of South Carolina ask is to be saved from anarchy and ruin; to be saved from being robbed to fill the pockets of scoundrels and thieves; to be established in at least the decency and security that are granted to the most abject provinces of the most arbitrary and cruel despots. The large preponderance in South Carolina of the ignorant and illiterate element in the politico-social system would be a serious obstacle in the way of progress and reform, even if that element were well-advised and subjected to elevating influences. But circumstances, heightened by antecedent conditions on the one hand, and cheap clap-trap on the other, have brought the colored people of the State under the domination—not the influence, for that implies some amount of reasoning and intelligence—of a set of adventurers and pilferers, who use them for no other purpose than their own personal aggrandizement. How can the honest people of South Carolina win enough of these unlettered and easily-beguiled colored people to the side of virtue to enable them to drive out the thieves and vagabonds who are ruining the black as well as the white people and destroying all hopes for a better day? Mr. Trescott has announced himself as an independent candidate for Congress. He has undoubtedly heavy odds against him, but there are indications of a marked reaction in South Carolina against the further rule of dishonesty and corruption, and he has, we think, adopted the proper course to avail himself of that reaction, if it can be carried to the doors of decency and honesty.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Shorter than any line from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore to either of these cities, and many hundred miles nearer to these centres of Western trade than any existing line to Charleston.

The Road that promises to make Charleston the market for the trade of the great North-west, the West India, South America and Europe; also, an important em grant station.

ECONOMICAL IN CONSTRUCTION,
SAFE IN MANAGEMENT, AND PROFITABLE IN RESULTS.

An important enterprise for the development of South Carolina.

Shares Fifty Dollars each, payable in ten installments.

Every citizen of this State should own at least one Share.

CHARLESTON, with her magnificent Harbor and genial climate; her immense undeveloped back country, containing a fertile soil, fine pasture grounds and inexhaustible water power; her contiguity to the West India and South America, and her unparalleled European ocean course, is destined, upon the completion of this important TRUNK LINE, to emerge from her prostrated condition and become what nature has intended she should be—the GREAT COMMERCIAL METROPOLIS of the SOUTHERN SECTION of the UNITED STATES.
