VOLUME X—NUMBER 197.

A CRAZY MINISTER AND HIS ECCENTRICITIES.—Some two years or more ago there came to this County a Dr. Elliott, who took charge of a school at Washington. He soon became involved in an acrimonious dispute with the trustees and with many of the patrons of the school, giving rise to no little litigation and to much bad blood in the community. He has managed in some way to get and keep possession of the old court house property, and holds it in defiance of the people of the town to whom it belongs, claiming it as his own. He tried to poison the horses which were accustomed to being hitched to the fence of the court house yard by poisoning the white-wash. The other evening he gave his consent to some kind of an exhibition being shown in the old Clerk's office; but then, as if the natural perversity of the man was forced to seek some outlet, he locked the gate of the court house yard, so as to prevent the ladies from going up the paved walk, and compelled them to wade through an alley filled with the ordure of cattle and horses. Finding there was a scarcity of water, occasioned by the protracted drought, and that the water in the well of the public property had become a necessity to the people of the town, he locked up the well to prevent them from using it, although it was then deep with water, and the people had always been accustomed to use it. On Wednesday night, a number of young men determined to break off the lock. Dr. Elliott seemed to have been governed in his act by no other motive than a morbid desire to kill some one. He lay in wait for them, and upon their approach, came from his ambush and commenced, without warning, to fire upon them with a revolver. To prevent being shot the young men closed with him, and in the struggle he tried his best and nearly succeeded in shooting one of them through the head. At last he was thrown upon the ground, and the pistol, with which he tried to commit murder, was taken from him, and he was then released. He is an old man—a minister in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Seegers vs. Cincinnati Beer. THE Cincinnati Gazette makes the astonishing announcement that Cincinnati beer is no longer pure, but adulterated with molasses, sugar of starch, fusel oil and the poisonous coichicum. The Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report for 1865, says that Prof. Mapes, of New York, analyzed the beer from a dozen different breweries, and found all of it adulterated. Cocculus Indicus and nux vomica entered largely into its composition. J. C. SEEGERS guarantees his beer to be pure and reliable. He does not adulterate it, but brews from the best barley, malt and hops. Jan 23
