A Love Story of the War.
 We were sitting in our room at the Glades Hotel, in Oakland, Maryland, one day with a charming lady who had dropped in on a visit. One of our windows looked into that of another room so placed by the position of the main building that half of its interior could be seen. We were looking up and admiring a little chubby, blue-eyed two-year-old, white as snow, who was pulling a bouquet to pieces and tossing out its fragments, or clapping her hands with delight as a train went thundering by.
 "These rooms," said our visitor, "have some very tender associations for me."
 "Why so?" we asked.
 "Well," she answered, "during the war the greater part of the hotel was seized by the Government as a hospital, and we were crowded into few rooms. My sister and I had this. In that room where that little beauty is were two Union officers, one sick of the fever and another of a wound. It was hard to tell whether they were slowly dying or slowly getting well. I never saw such ghostly skeletons to be alive. We were 'secesh,' and not modest about it, either; but still our hearts ached for the poor young men, so ill, perhaps dying, far from friends and relatives."
 "It bothers one to know how this should be a hospital," we said, "it is so far removed from active operations."
 "It was thought," she answered, "that the mountain air of the glades would be more favorable to recovery than elsewhere, so this was made a hospital. One day one of these officers dragged himself to the window and under the impulse of the movement my sister asked if we could do anything for them, and he answered, gasping for breath, that a little chicken or soup would save their lives. Chickens were rare in those days—an army is hard on poultry. The men will work all night, after marching through the day, to secure a few chickens; so that when the hospital nurse and physician had an unlimited supply of luxuries in the way of wines, potted meats and canned vegetables, they were without anything fresh. We knew where a few chickens were hid in a cellar by a neighbor, and we coaxed one out of the owner, and after a deal of vexatious trouble—for at every turn we were met by a fixed bayonet and an insult—we got the soup ready, and as the guard in the hall would not permit us to approach our patients, my sister attempted to hand the bowl to the officer in the window. Just as he was feebly reaching for it and she stretching herself half out to give it to him, a harsh, ugly voice below cried aloud, 'Look out there—poison!' She nearly dropped herself, soup and all. Drawing back she hesitated a second, and then she took the spoon and began eating the broth. 'Oh, bother!' cried the officer. 'Don't waste it that way; I'm not afraid,' and she gave him the soup. It seemed to revive them, and they continued steadily to improve, as day after day we supplied them with chicken broth until the cellar was empty. During this time we stood at the window talking and we sang to them—sang 'My Maryland' and all the Southern songs we knew, until they were well enough to leave the hospital and return to duty. They both seemed sorry to go, and forced on as a quantity of hospital stores and some coffee, which last we needed sadly. Then one gave a ring and the other a brooch, as tokens of their kind feelings."
 "And did they never return?" we asked.
 "One did not; for, poor fellow, he was killed in the very next battle in which he was engaged. His companion wrote us about it, and the writer insisted upon opening a correspondence with my sister; and soon his letters grew into love letters, and after a time they were engaged. Nearly a year subsequent to this our patient got leave of absence and came on to be married. He put up at a hotel, and—will you believe it?—our own brother, who was in the Confederate service, and knew nothing of my sister's affairs, led a band of guerillas into our town at night and captured his intended brother-in-law from his bed. This not only deferred the marriage, but deprived the young West Pointer of his promotion, that had been promised for gallant service in the field. It was really aggravating, for exchanges had almost ceased, and it looked as if the lovers would have to wait until this 'ordeal war was over' before they could be united."

 "You should have appealed to Abraham Lincoln to give a married brigadier for an unmarried lieutenant."
 "We did better. Procuring passes, we went through the lines and appealed to Jeff Davis. Jeff said he would put my brother's prisoner in his sister's keeping. They have been happily married these many years. He is brevet-brigadier general now, and it all came of our nursing the enemy in that foam."

Here is the foundation of a drama superior to that given by Boncicault in Belle Lumar.—Don Piat.
 A lady with the terrible name, Mad, Nanette Falk Anerback, is singing in symphony concerts at Baltimore. With such a name, it would be needless to sing, "You'll Remember Me."

Seegers' vs. Cincinnati Beer.
 THE Cincinnati Gazette makes the astonishing announcement that Cincinnati beer is no longer pure, but adulterated with colossae, sugar of starch, fuel oil and the poisonous cocculum. The Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report for 1865, says that Prof. Mapes, of New York, analyzed the beer from a dozen different breweries, and found all of it adulterated. Cocculum Indians and nux vomica entered largely into its composition.
 J. C. SEEGERS guarantees his beer to be pure and reliable. He does not adulterate it, but brews from the best barley, malt and hops.
