COLUMBIA, S. C., WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 31, 1875.

VOLUME XI-NUMBER 8.

The symptoms of liver Complaint around easiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stemach is affected with loss of appetits and sickness, bowels, in general, costive, sometimes alternating with lax. The headis troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, censiderable lose of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirite. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved:

D.P. LIGHTING

This is the irreverent way they have in England of talking about our American revivalists, who are now engaged in converting the people of that benighted and heathen land: "A man who is unable to 'get converted' unless he is rated and roared at, and without writhing and screaming himself into hysterics, would better remain where and what he is, (whatever that' may be,) since he is almost certain to relapse as soon as the excitement is over. Conversion coming from God's grace is the calmest operation known to the soul, and cannot ever result from man's bellowing, carroling and grimaces."

Archbishop Lynch, of Canada, has been lecturing on Irish characters. The Irishman's love for Canad Can to 'get converted' unless he is rated

He said that the Irish do not drink more than other people, but are less able to bear the effects of strong liquors. "His language was: "Their blood is so hot, and their nature so fervid and exuberant, that, by adding to it the fire of alcohol, the Irishman becomes
