How the Republican party takes care of the soldiers in the matter of head-gear is shown in a late report from the Quartermaster-General. According to that document, there were in store in June, 1874, 242,528 army hats, and 300,455 caps. This is for our total army of a little over 25,000 enlisted men, give nine and three-fourths hats and twelve caps to each soldier. Who will have the temerity to suggest, after this, that the Government is unmindful of its defenders? There is an expression, "armed cap-e," which we never entirely understood—we never dreamed that it meant twelve caps apiece! If each soldier had even the fabulous nine lives of the cat, the supply of head-gear would be more than ample. Verily, it ought to be a good time for military tailors.

George Washington Jink, a colored barber, was up before the police court for cutting down his neighbor's apple trees. History will repeat itself.
