The late storm in Harris County, Ga., struck a building in which were assembled a large number of ladies and gentlemen who had met for the purpose of spending the evening in dancing. The awful, appalling roar of the tornado fell upon the ears of the merry dancers, fear took possession of their souls, and amidst the mingled and terrific sounds of the tempest went up many a wailing cry to the Father of Mercies, and earnest vows were uttered that if escape from death were vouchsafed, no more tripping of the light fantastic toe would ever be indulged in by any of that party. We understand none were seriously injured. 'Tis said, strange to relate, that on the approach of the storm, every man present, save two, took flight and sought safety in a neighboring gully, leaving the ladies without partners, one of those who remained being a married man. We think the brave bachelor who stood by the frightened girls, should be the most favored man in all that region. We are glad to know that the party in the gully were not hurt by the storm.

An American clergyman exclaimed to his hearers: "Eternity! Why you don't know the meaning of the word, nor I either, hardly. It is forever and ever, and five or six everlasting a-top of that. You might place a row of figures from here to sunset, and opher them all up, and it wouldn't begin to tell how many ages long eternity is. Why, my friends, after millions and millions of years had rolled away in eternity, it would be 100,000 years to breakfast time."
