A ROMANTIC STORY.—The schooner Florida, Capt. Kemine, sailed from New Orleans in 1849, for San Francisco, taking a number of passengers who had been seized with the gold fever, and touched at Port Praya and Rio Janeiro, which port she left in the latter part of the year. A vessel calling at Rio shortly after reported speaking the Florida in the Pacific, just beyond Cape Horn, but nothing more was ever heard of her. The New Orleans Picayune says that a short time ago a friend of the wife of one of the passengers of the schooner read in an English paper that a British naval vessel, driven out of her course, sighted an unknown island in the lower Pacific, and found upon it several persons, who said they were the Florida party, who had been wrecked on the island, and had been there ever since—more than twenty-five years ago. The names given were those of the Florida's crew, and in other ways the identity of the party is said to have been established. It is further stated that the offer to take the men off was declined, on the ground that as they had been lost so long, they preferred ending their days there. Further inquiries are on foot to establish the truthfulness of the account.

A case of insanity lately developed itself in a very singular manner in the city of Richmond. A young lady prominent in society announced her engagement to a certain gentleman, and frequently talked of the matter to many of her friends. The day for the wedding was ultimately appointed, and numbers invited to witness the ceremony. All preparations were made at the house of the lady, the guests assembled, and all was in readiness for the nuptials, but no bridegroom came. He was waited patiently, until it became evident that he would not appear, when the guests departed, filled with indignation at the singular occurrence. On the next morning, the young lady was a raving maniac. Eventually the truth of the matter came out. The gentleman implicated denied any engagement to the lady and all knowledge of the proposed wedding. The whole affair had been but the result of an insane delusion.

PUT ME DOWN FOR SIX MONTHS.—A citizen who was a moderate drinker was besought by a temperance agent to affix his signature to an abstinence pledge. He declined, giving various reasons. At last, however, he finished by observing, "Well, I'm willing to subscribe a little to help you along—but me down for six months."
