FOR THE JOURNAL.

To the young gentlemen of Camden and the vicinity, of classic education.

For our mutual benefit, I propose that we form an association, to be called the Camden Classic Reading, or Quiz Club; or by any other stylc.

To meet an evening, semi-monthly, to converse upon such parts of some two of the ancient Classics, (Greek and Latin) as may be then under the reading and review of the Club.

At every monthly meeting, in addition to the classic conversation, a question to be raised by the president at the same menting on one or two chapters of Hume's England or Gibbon's Rome, shall be discussed. The chapter or chapters to be attentively read and reflected upon, by every member of the Club, prior to the meeting.

That the Club begin with Virgil and Zenophon, and go regularly through the col-lege course of the series. That Hume and Gibbon be read from the beginning to the end, with maps, ancient and modern. That in the progress of the Club, other subjects, Political Economy, Metaphysics, Belleslettres, &c. be added.

That twice a year an oration on some scientific subject, legitimately embraced within the prescribed reading of the Club, shall be written, and read or delivered before the Club, and such other citizens as may choose to hear it, by a member, in al-phabetical rotation. That the Club pur-chase jointly, a classic and scientific li-

That every member, at the expiration of three years from the date of his membership, shall pay annually ten dollars for that purpose.

To raise a contingent fund, every member of the Club shall keep a correct and true account, from the date of his membership to the first meeting in January in succession, of the amount of money he may pay, or be charged with, for wine, segars, &c. & ...; and shall exhibit the same to the Club, to be read and recorded; and of the Club, a sum of money double the be paid by capitation assessment.

After the Club is formed, no person shall be admitted to membership in it otherwise than by the unanimous vote of the members present at a regular meeting.

A NEW SPECIES.

POR SALE, at the Post Office by P. Thornton. The Cultivator's account of them is as follows:

"This is a new and extraordinary variety, which has latley appeared in Switzerland, and has been cultivated in this country but two years; It surpasses all others in size and productiveness—is quite farinaces and of excellent flavor."

Judge Buel, in the Cultivator, of November last, says: "We obtained two tubers from France last fall, and through the kindness of an esteemed friend, we have been enabled to increase orr seed 12 pounds. We divided the tubers into setts of two eyes each, and we planted one sett in hills four feet apart, in a piece of ground much shaded and rather low condition .-We dug, weighed and measured the crop on the 28th September. It weighed 525 pounds, and measured nine bushels. They undoubtedly the most productive varity of potatoo we ever met with. The 3 tubers first imported, cost 45 dullars."
