CLING TO THOSE WHO CLING TO YOU.

Cling to those who cling to you; More than half our sorrow's made When we are ourselves untrue To the lights of friendship's aid. But how sweet it is to own Some kind heart to thine beat true, After many years have flown ?-Cling to those who cling to you.

Cling to those who cling to you! Think how those who live apart, That sweet solace never knew Friendship sheds around the heart. Who is there that hath not longed Unce to find some friend prove true? That your friendships be prolonged-Cling to those who cling to you.

Cling to those who cling to you: Every link of friendship's cha..., It the heart be only true, Will forever bright remain. Never be the first to break, In the chain the link that's true; Never trust and truth forsake-Cling to those weo cling to you.

STATE OF EUROPE.

The aspect of affairs in Europe is apparently now more threatening than at any period since the general peace. There is hope against hostilities, however, from the exhausted condition of the finances of the great Continental powers. The Austrian Exchequer is next to bankrupt. Russia would have to negotiate loans to supply the sinews of war. France is oppressed with the weight of her pecuniary obligations. The great capitalists of Europe, notwithstanding the abundance of money, must be chary of lending amidst the revolutionary tendencies by which the present period is characterised. Nothing, it appears to us, can unfold the bloody standard of war, under these circumstances, but the urgency of a crisis that might threaten Europe with another inundation of ultra democrat-There may be signs of a renewal of a revolutionary crisis, which may be visible to those in the vicinity of the danger that cannot be interpreted to signify peril at this distance from the theatre of European affairs. A war of ambition, we feel assured, is not about to take place, when the indications are so evident and the materials so abandant for a war of opinions. If a coalition is on foot between Russia, France, and Austria, against Prussia, it is not to despoil the latter power and to dismember her; but there is involved in the quarrel between the Houses of Hapsburg and Brandenburg the principles that would place Prussia at the head of a popular movement in Germany, of which constitutional reform would be the guiding principle and ultimate end. Such reform both Russia and Austria would oppose, and the government even of Louis Napoleon, as the representative of order. The monarchy of Prussia has, of course, monarchical sympathies, but there are also decided tendencies to political progress and social amelioration in the Prussian people. This is counteractive of the desires of the Court to reimpose the ancient rule of arbitrary government. The government of Prussia, therefore, inclines from necessity to the support of the small States of Germany which are aiming at constitutional government. If Prussia takes the lead in this movement, as the patron and dirict it to safe and salutary ends. The other great Continental Powers do not fear so much the aggrandizement of Prussia by such a movement, as the success of the reformers under her auspices, and the undefined aims which may be hidden from observation and shun

We however do not think that Europe is quite ready for this war of opinions. Her governments will try the efficacy of repressive measures in a still greater degree before putting matters to the hazard of war. The movement of large forces is not always significant of hostilities. Armies are frequently the instruments of diplomacy-of the arrangements that are entered upon at general congresses. A meeting of the sovereigns was to have taken place at Warsaw. The marching of armies to the frontiers of the conferring powers may be the means of averting war-the suspended sword may be the real peace-preserver, during negotiations by which conflicting pretensions are to be adjust-ed.—Char. Eve. News.

Progress of Mesmerism .- In the 15th centurv, a cock was burnt alive by order of the magistrates of Basle. in Switzerland, for having laid an egg, the said chanticleer having been convicted of sorcery. And, we read, in the London papers, a recent letter of Miss Martineau, on Mesmerism, and the cure of her sick cow, thereby. All will admit now that we must not laugh at the Medical superstitions.

A subscriber, to whom the publishers had sent a weekly paper on credit, was at last dropped from the list, all measures of collecting having failed. Afterwards the agent was encountered by the delinquent's wife, who wrathfully insisted that "she knew what newspapaper law was - that she did, the printer was bound to send the paper until all arrearages were paid."

There should be no party there but the friends of the country; and let them say to the abolitionists and their negro confederates, Procul, procul, este, profuni! For once let the voice of Boston in pronounced by her respectable, worthy citizens, without being counterfeited by the discordant howl of fanaticism.

Well, we recken that if the negroes of Boston are spoken to in Latin they will give up. Writs warrants, Commissioners, Marshals, Proclamations, Armies and Navies have been A COMPLETE Assortment of the called for, and have failed. Let us now try a netian Carpetings, for sale low by Sept 26.
