SPRING—By J. A. Stuart.

They call the Spring-time gay and glad,
But sad to me is Spring;
I dread the tender memories
Its flowers and wild-birds bring;

Of laughing hearts and lustrous forms
That in my childhood played;
A never-tiring jubilee,
In lone sequestered glade.

And thinking on that kindness,
That instinct used to be,
I wonder how that greenwood now
Is desolate to me.

How each cherish'd school boy play ground spot
Has a churchyard atmosphere,
And the very names are now forgot
That used to make them dear.

My father's in his honored grave:
In the old Spring 'twas his pride
To train his son to manliness,
As I sported by his side.

My mother, now bowed low with years,
Was then a matron fair,
And often blessed her naughty boy,
As she smoothed my truant hair.

And she that was the Star-light
Of my boyhood's early dream;
Whose eye-beam shot a diamond bridge
Of moon-light o'er life's stream.

I little thought, when trembling,
She bid me wreathe her brow,
That her chosen one should be doom'd by her,
To the death, in Life, of sorrow.

Spring!—'Twas a bright Spring morning
When my little daughter died;
Her sister hung upon my neck,
And in agony we sighed.

When a flock of birds dropp'd glittering
On the lawn before the door,
And wanton, wild with music,
To listening Heaven did pour.

We could have daily greeted them,
In hours of joy or ease;
But, then, they seemed to come in spite,
To mock our miseries.

Our crush'd hearts deemed it cruel, wrong,
That any thing was gay,
When our sorrow was so mighty:
Our Emma gone away.

Oh! May dew in the rose's cup
Is memory's frozen tear—
Our hopes ever blighted—bosom frozen,
By the night frost of despair.

And the breathing of the fresh turned earth,
On which my footsteps tread,
Is a whisper from the early lost—
The lost, the loved, the dead.

COURSE OF VIRGINIA.—The editors of that sterling paper, the Lynchburg Republican, in referring to the future course of Virginia, thus strikes the nail on the head:

We are opposed, however, to any more resolutions on this subject, unless bond and security be given that they will be executed when adopted. The legislature has sworn enough in Flanders, and should now act, or forever afterwards hold its peace. The miserable policy of adopting "patriotic" resolutions, just to back out from them when the emergency which they are designed to meet arises, is as disgraceful to a State as a similar blustering policy would be in an individual, and has done more to prostrate the cause of the South, than all other causes combined. Pass strong non-intercourse resolves if you please—do anything to arrest if possible the tide of Northern aggression now threatening us with ruin—but for mercy sake do not make Virginia say the fourth time that if so and so be done, she will do so and so at all hazards! No more platforms, gentlemen, to be broken through, when pressure comes.

Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress is now on exhibition in New York, in the form of a Panorama, and is attracting much attention. It is described as a work of decided merit, on which the pencils of several artists of distinguished abilities have been long and diligently engaged; and is descriptive of Bunyan's beautiful allegory, in which hideous monsters, angelic forms, yawning abysses, with bottoms strewn with human bones, enchanting scenery, palaces and craggy rocks, all perform their part in marking the ever changing progress of the pilgrim.

A Voice from North Carolina.—The Raleigh (N. C.) Standard defines its position on the slavery question in the following eloquent and emphatic language:

"We cannot approve the recent compromise, as a whole. We believe it has inflicted a great wrong upon the South and upon the principles which hold this Union together; but as it is a law of the land, and as we love and cherish the Union in its true spirit and desire its continuance, we are prepared to acquiesce in this compromise, provided the fugitive slave law be enforced. All we now ask of the free States is, to cease the agitation of the Slavery question in Congress and to carry out the fugitive slave law in its letter and spirit. Let them do this, and we march on together; let them refuse, and we Dissolve! This is strong language; but we have weighed it, and we have given utterance to it with deliberation and solemnity. Here we stand. If this Confederation of States must perish—if their common flag, radiant with achievements as immortal as the stars that cluster on it, must be torn and trampled in the conflict—and if brothers must be converted into deadly foes over the very graves of their fathers, who won these liberties—the Ruler of Nations, who judges justly, and all posterity upon this Continent, will hold the slaveholding States guilty of the awful and inexpiable crime."

The Fugitive Slave Law.—It is confidently asserted that the general sentiment in both houses of Congress is against any disturbance of the Fugitive Slave Law. It is confidently asserted that there are thirty-five members of the House, who voted against that law, who will not countenance any modification of the bill, much less its repeal. We shall see. For our own part we think it the duty of the South to "give and take" in regard to the sentiments of our own people, and come to some united preparation that shall look well to the future. Let it be remembered that Vermont has nullified.
Wilmington Commercial.

Darlington Hotel,
DARLINGTON COURT-HOUSE.
THE above House having been purchased and fitted up anew by JOHN DORR, is again opened for the accommodation of the Public. Strict attention to the wants and comforts of guests will be given, and no effort, calculated to merit the patronage of all who may favor the establishment with a visit, shall be spared.

All that the market and surrounding country afford will be found upon the table. Comfortable rooms, for families or individuals, are prepared. The Stables will be attended by careful and attentive hostlers. Drivers can be well accommodated, as any number of horses and mules can be kept in the stables and lot expressly prepared for them.

MANSION HOUSE,
CAMDEN, S. C.
THE subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and the TRAVELLING PUBLIC generally, that he has opened, as a HOTEL, that large and commodious house in Log Town, formerly the private residence of R. Perkins, Esq.

The building is admirably adapted for that purpose, being situated in the most healthy and pleasant part of Camden, combining all the advantages of the town with the balmy atmosphere of the country, and within a few minutes' walk of any part of Camden. The rooms are large and airy, his Servants respectful and attentive, and he pledges himself to spare no pains in keeping up an attractive and well supplied TABLE, and to use every exertion to please those who may call upon him.

His STABLE will be found commodious, and always fully supplied with Provender. The House being conducted on Temperance Principles, he flatters himself that those who favor him with a call will find the MANSION HOUSE not only the comforts and attention of a well regulated Hotel, but the quiet retirement of a Home. Charges moderate.

All the Stages arriving in the place, and the Omnibuses running to the Depot, will call at the House when desired.
