AGRICULTURE.

NUT GRASS.

The Rev. J. W. Burn, of Chesterfield, in a recent essay read before the Society Hill Pomological and Farmer's Club, gives the following as the method adopted by him to destroy this pest of the gardener and farmer:

More nut grass may be killed in a hard winter, than in a summer. To do this, about the last of October, take a long six-inch shovel and break the land, leaving five inches unbroken between each furrow, which will leave the land in small ridges, after solid freeze and thaw, run the same plow in the same furrow; this will bring up a fresh supply of nuts; after another freeze and thaw, split the ridges open with the same plow, and again after again after a freeze and thaw. This last will be equal to two plowings in a winter; and never to be repeated in the same field, if the summer plowings are kept up.

If these plowings have been well done and the freeze hard, the nuts will be killed from eight to twelve inches deep. Commence your summer work about the first of May, and do not allow the grass to bloom, for although the bloom may not produce seed, yet the bloom is necessary to the formation of nuts, no new nuts will form and mature, if the grass is not allowed to bloom. It will not bloom in much less than six weeks so that if it is regularly plowed every three or four weeks through the summer and fall till frost, it will form no new nuts, and a large proportion of the old nuts will die from exhaustion, particularly, the deepest ones. You may now sow the land in wheat, rye or fall oats, and when they are taken off, break the land so as to turn the stable under. In about three or four weeks, start your sweeps, and run them regularly every four or five weeks. (The grass after the first summer's work will be so much weaker, that it will bear to stand a week longer the second, third and fourth summers.) Continue the process for four summers, and you will not be troubled with nut grass in that field again, unless it is carried there. It will always be best if possible, to have your head lands beyond the nut grass, with a well defined furrow, that the plows may not pass in carrying out, have the head lands plowed regularly with the field.

Look well to all trees and stumps, in fact, to all places where the plows do not reach, and have them hoed regularly cut from one to one and a half inches deep which is the depth the plows ought to cut.

and when well set and tempered, ought never to be sent to a smith to be sharpened, but taken to a good stone and ground. Treated thus, they will last five times as long, be always bright and smooth, and do their work well. The advantages of winter killing are, 1st: The nuts will be killed eight inches deep and there will be less danger of their spreading by the plow. Second: The living nut will be beyond the influence of the sun until late in the Spring, consequently the blades will be much later in making their appearance, giving time to plant your crop before the work will be needed in the nut grass field. No hogs should be allowed to go in a nut grass field, as they root deep holes, break the roots, and bury the nuts deeper in the earth. Do not be discouraged because the grass appears after each plowing, after three or four plowings the grass will spring up more feeble, and be paler, as a mighty work is going on below, though you see it not, the work you so much desire, the decay and final destruction of the nut grass. J. W. BURN.

A HUNDRED BUSHELS OATS TO THE ACRE.—We copy the following from the Columbus Enquirer:

Mr. C. A. Peabody has left in our office a cluster of wheat he calls "another of his humbugs." It is a specimen of a new description of oats, the seed of which he procured from Vermont, and which is said to have been introduced into this country from Sweden—on a grain having been found in a package of peas procured by the Agricultural Bureau. There are in this cluster fourteen or fifteen stalks, about five feet in height, and of stems enormously large, and all from a single grain! The heads have not yet made their appearance, the stalks being in the stage called "the boot." It is therefore reasonable to suppose that the stalks have as yet attained not much exceeding half their height! The color is remarkably good, and the growth evidently vigorous. Mr. Peabody has a field of ten acres sown broadcast, beside some patches in the drill and hills. He used 200 lbs. of Pacific Guano to the acre, and sowed about the 20th February. He counts on a yield of one hundred bushels of seed oats per acre, if no disaster overtakes the crop! It is said that these oats have produced even much more per acre at the North. The blades are from half an inch to a full inch in breadth, and over a foot in length. The variety is certainly a wonderful one, and promises to be very valuable.

STAGNANT WATER—Stagnant or foul water is injurious to all animals. It causes blood poisoning, and is one of the great causes of abortion in cows and other animals.—Maryland Farmer.

STATE TAXES.—The Clarendon (S. C.) Press says: We learn that many persons in different parts of the State have determined not to pay the State tax, and that it is to be made a question in the courts, and to be carried, if necessary, to the Supreme Court of the United States, on the ground that it is illegal imposition, even according to the present Constitution and laws of South Carolina, as framed and passed and adopted by the Radicals themselves.

A negro, speaking of one of her children who was lighter colored than the rest, said: "I never could bear that brat, 'cause he show 'art so easy."

M. BISSELL, DENTIST.

WOULD call the attention of those requiring their Teeth filled to a COMPOSITION, FILLING that he prepares and has used for the past ten years, as it can be recommended in all cases where the teeth are so far decayed as to prevent their being filled with any filling requiring pressure. As it approaches nearer the color of the teeth than Foils, it will be found satisfactory in filling the badly decayed front teeth, avoiding the unsightly appearance of the foil showing through the thin plate of enamel. Being nearly as hard as the bone of the teeth it will prove serviceable in the masticating surface. Teeth once several years since have been found within a few weeks in nearly as good a condition as when first filled.

Charges for filling with gold, tin, or artificial Dentine from 50 cents to $2, and teeth inserted on GOLD, SILVER or VULCANITE, from $2 to $8. OFFICE on Broad street, opposite Mr Jas. Dunlap's residence. May 20.
