The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Tonic Pills.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the cause may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting, as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neglect of the more grave and extreme forms of

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Is characterized by a general languor or weakness of the whole organism, especially of the nervous system, obstructing and preventing the ordinary functions of nature; hence there is a disordered state of the secretions; constipation, scanty and high-colored urine, with an excess of earthy or lime sediment, indicative of waste of brain and nerve substance, frequent palpitations of the heart, loss of memory and marked irresolution of purpose, and inability to carry into action any well-defined business enterprise, or to fix the mind upon any one thing at a time. There is great sensitiveness to impress, though retained but a short time, with a flickering and fluttering condition of the mental faculties, rendering an individual what is commonly called a whiffle-minded or fickle-minded man.

This condition of the individual, distressing as it is, may with a certainty be cured by THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND LOTHROP'S TONIC PILLS.

Medicines unrivaled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever, Sores, Kingworm, Erysipelas, Scald-head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper-Colored Blisters, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the Flesh, Discolorations, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and Sores of every character, because these medicines are the very best.

BLOOD MEDICINE

Ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most powerful Alternative ever originated by man, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Demencia and Melancholia.

Sold by all Druggists, and will be sent by express to all parts of the country, by addressing the proprietor, G. EDGAR LOTHROP, M. D., 143 Court Street, Boston, Mass., who may be consulted free of charge either personally or by mail. Send 25 cents and get a copy of his Book on Nervous Diseases.

An Exciting Race.

The San Francisco Chronicle tells the following story of an engineer: It was four years ago last winter. I was coming down with a train loaded with cattle. The weather had been bad for weeks, and the snow lay deep, but was melting off fast in the warm weather that had lasted nearly a week. The ground was saturated, and I noticed that things looked shaky on the mountain. I was feeling my way along carefully, thinking the track might spring, as the bed was wet and stumpy, when just as I got around the point of this ridge, I looked up, and it seemed to me that the whole mountain above me had broken loose. For hundreds of feet wide the hillside was in motion, and charging down on me. The slide started a hundred yards above the track and was coming right down on me like lightning. Rocks, trees and snow-drifts plunged down the face of the mountain with a thundering roar, and seemed bent on overwhelming us and burying us in the canyon thousands of feet below. I was never so close to death before, although I have had my share of perils on the road. For a moment I was stupefied, the danger was so great and escape so hopeless, but only for a moment. I determined not to die without an effort, but clapped on all steam, while the brakes were thrown off at the same time. You can see for yourself that the grade is heavy here, and can believe that we made fast time. The engine seemed to know her danger, and to gather herself for an effort. She leaped, quivering and snorting, down the grade in the maddest race I ever saw. Down came the avalanche like lightning directly upon us, throwing up clouds of flying snow and splinters and rock, and away flew the old engine like a thing of life and beauty, as she was, dragging the cars like the wind down the grade after her, abreast of the slide. But it seemed doomed to be all in vain. The avalanche came faster every moment. It was almost upon us. The rocks began to bound against the ears and over them, and the train was hidden in a cloud of snow. But we were flying through the air now; the wheels seemed never to touch the rail, and just as I was giving up hope the engine rushed past that point of land just back there the little ravine comes down. This turned the current of the slide, so to speak, a little, and was our salvation. The engine rushed past the point just as the slide reached the track, and a big pine, uprooted in the edge of the avalanche, fell across the next car to the last one and crushed it. The track was swept away like a cobweb in a gale, and the couplings of the cars broke and the cars fell into the chasm, left in the wake of the slide, and were carried down to the river, a thousand yards below. What there is left of them lies there yet. The jerk made the engine and train jump the track, but she kept on her feet, and we got off with a few bruises. That I account one of the greatest dangers I ever had in my twenty years of railroading.

Mr. Peduncle and His Cow

Mr. Peduncle went out to milk the other day. Now, if there is one thing Mr. Peduncle prides himself upon, it is his perfect command of a cow. With his bucket on the ground he milks with both hands, and sings—milk-while, occasionally bestowing a word of warning upon the cow if she whisks her tail at him or tries to scratch her neck with her hind foot. On this occasion he had nearly finished, and was singing cheerfully: "My soul (so now) be on thy guard. (What in the Egyptian sand-hills ails this cow?)"

"Ten thousand (thunder and bora!) stand still! loes arise!"

And as Mr. Peduncle raised himself up from the barn floor and wiped the milk out of his ears and nose, he saw up in the loft the wife of his bosom, with a long switch in her hand, with which she had been tickling the gentle animal's nose, and she said in an awful voice:

"Oliver Peduncle, I reckon you'll wrap your old tobacco box in my handkerchief again, next Sunday, won't ye?—and have me to take it to church and sling it out on the floor—hey?"

When he milks now, Mr. Peduncle sings very softly, indeed, and keeps one eye on the loft.

A Quaker having married for his wife a member of the Church of England, was asked, after the ceremony, by the clergyman for his fee, which he said was a crown. The Quaker, astonished at the demand, said if he could be shown any text in Scripture which proved the fee was a crown he would give it, upon which the clergyman directly turned to the twelfth chapter of Proverbs, verse fourth, where it said: "A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband." "Thou art right," replied the Quaker, "in the assertion; Solomon was a wise man. Here is thy money, which thou hast well and truly earned?"

Jerrold used to tell this incident from his own experience: A passenger, well-to-do in the world, had fallen overboard at sea, and his life was saved by an Irish sailor, who jumped in after him. As a reward for the service which his preserver had rendered him, the generous passenger presented the man with sixpence! Whereupon the sailor, scanning him from head to foot with a smile of supreme contempt, exclaimed in a rich brogue, "Be jabbers, it's enough!"

In India one hundred dialects are spoken by the two hundred and forty million of people who belong to a great number of distinct races, and whose habit of life to-day are essentially similar to those practiced by their predecessors three thousand years ago. Three hundred years of labor in that peninsula have brought twelve million souls under Russian sway. The English in one-third of that time have extended their power over two hundred million.

A petition is circulating in McKinney, Texas, and numerously signed, asking the Legislature to pass a law to punish horse thieves as follows: First offense, whipping post; second, whipping and branding; third, hanging.

An Appreciative Emperor.

Dom Pedro, of Brazil, is the first reigning monarch that ever visited our country. Wealth, fashion, and official position were ready to kneel in the dust before his South American majesty. Having more than enough of adulation and gilt-edged fuss and feathers at home, the royal visitor to our shores gave notice, in advance, that he wanted none of them while remaining in our midst. His wise determination was not respected—wealthy merchants and prominent officials crowded to fawn upon an Emperor. Dom Pedro dismissed the intruders with cold politeness; instead of making himself the central figure of a fashionable reception ball, or banquet, he went unattended, save by a single reporter, to inspect the workings of a newspaper establishment. When asked to receive, in a private manner, a delegation of fifty leading citizens of New York, he declined, insisting that the representatives of the press should be present. The request was granted. Dom Pedro, in reply to a fulsome address of welcome, made a few pertinent remarks, which, before delivering, he put down on paper, and, to the astonishment of the assembled millionaires, handed the royal "copy" to a reporter, with instructions to give slips to all the papers. American snobishness received a well-deserved setback; the American power that is stronger than money and office combined—journalism—was treated with the consideration that of right belongs to it.

How it Happens.

The Louisville Courier-Journal makes the following explanation in regard to how a paragraph sometimes appears more than once in the same issue of a paper:

It not unfrequently happens that in a newspaper which publishes every day a vast amount and great variety of reading matter, the same paragraph appears twice, or even three times, and no doubt there are readers who marvel much that this should be thus, particularly as all journals are expected to be as fresh and new as possible. One of the chief causes of such repetitions is the number of mighty intellects which a large paper employs to prepare the matter which it publishes. Though each of these mighty intellects has positive orders to read the paper thoroughly every day, so that he may repeat nothing, and is paid rather for this reading than for what he furnishes for publication, he reads only what he himself has prepared—all the bright thoughts and selections of all the other mighty intellects seeming to him not worth his attention—overshadowed, as everybody can see, by the magnitude of his own productions. Of course there is always one supreme intellect to oversee the mighty intellects, but he is so burdened that, with all his great powers, he cannot always keep up with details in the rush and hurry incident to his position. It is the mighty intellects who make the trouble.

Newspaper Advertising.

Newspaper advertising is now recognized by business men having faith in their own wares as the most effective means for securing for their wares a wide recognition of their merits.

Newspaper advertising compels inquiry, and when the article offered is of good quality and at a fair price, the natural result is increased sales. Newspaper advertising is a permanent addition to the reputation of the goods advertised, because it is a permanent influence always at work in their interest.

Newspaper advertising is the most energetic and vigilant of salesmen, addressing thousands each day, always in the advertiser's interest, and ceaselessly at work seeking customer's from all classes.

Newspaper advertising promotes trade, for even in the dulllest times advertisers secure by far the largest share of what is being done.

While the advertiser eats and sleeps printers, steam engines and printing presses are at work for him, trains bearing his wares to thousands of towns and hundreds of thousands of readers, all glancing with more or less interest at the message prepared for them in the solitude of his office. No preacher ever spoke to so large an audience, or with so little effort, or so eloquently, as you may with the newspaper man's assistance.

WHY HE PLEADED GUILTY.—The custom of appointing young lawyers to defend pauper criminals received a setback, the other day, in the San Antonio district court. His honor, Judge Noonan, had appointed two young lawyers to defend an old and experienced horse thief. After inspecting his counsel for some time in silence, the prisoner rose in his place and addressed the bench:

"Air they to defend me?"

"Yes, sir," said his honor.

"Both of 'em?" inquired the prisoner.

"Both of them," responded the judge.

"Then I plead guilty," and the poor fellow took his seat, and sighed heavily.

George, said a maiden, as she smiled archly in her lover's face, "what is there in a grand achievement that reminds me of you?" George's eye lit with pleasure, and there was a loving tenderness in the glance with which he replied, "No, darling; please tell me." "Big feet," replied the maiden. She now flattens her nose against the window-pane, and wonders whether George has committed suicide or gone to China.

The latest amusement is termed the "Printer's Delight," and is performed in the following manner: Take a sheet of note paper, fold it up carefully, and enclose a bank note sufficiently large to pay up all arrears and a year in advance. And what adds immensely to the feat is to send along the name of a new subscriber, with cash to balance. Keep your eye on the printer, and if you detect a smile the trick is a success.

A simple and effectual remedy for ivy poisoning is said to be sweet spirits of niter. Bathe the affected parts freely two or three times during the day, and the next morning scarcely any trace of the poison will remain.

The day has arrived when a fair race horse has only to die to secure a better monument than the friends of the most prominent public man are willing to give him.
