

Humorous.

From the Legends and Stories of Ireland.

PADDY'S STORY OF A FOX.

"Paddy," said squire, "perhaps you would favor the gentleman with that story you once told me about a fox?"

"Indeed and I will please your honor," said Paddy, "though I know full well the devil a word of it you believe, nor the gentleman won't either, tho' you swim me for it, but only to laugh at me, and call me a big liar, when my back's turned."

"Mabe we wouldn't wait for your back being turned, Paddy, to honor you with that title."

"Oh, indeed, I'm not saying would 'nt do it as soon for my face, your honor, as you often did before, and will agin plaze God, and welkim—"

"Well, Paddy, say no more about that, but let's have the story."

"Sure I'm losin' no tellin' the gentlem before hand that it's what they'll be callin' it a lie, and indeed, it is uncommon, sure enough, but you see gentlemen, you must remember that the fox is the cunning't baste in the worle barrin' the wren."

Here Paddy questioned why he considered the wren as cunning a baste as the fox.

"Why sir, bekase all birds build their nests with one hole in it only, excep'n the wren, but the wren builds two holes on the nest, so that if an imny comes to disturb it upon one door, it can go out on the other; but the fox is cute to that degree, that there's many a mortal a fool to him; and, be dad, the fox could buy and sell many a Christian, as you'll see by and by, when I tell you what happened to a wood ranger that I knew wanst, and a dacent man he was, and would 'nt say the thing in a lie."

Well, you see, he kem home one night, mighty tired, for he was out with a party tired, for he was out with a party in the domain, cock-shootin' that day; and when he got back to his lodge, he threw a few logs 'o wood on the fire to make himself comfortable, and he tuk whatever little mather he had for his supper, and, after that, he felt himself so tired that he went to bed. But you're to understand that, though he went to bed, it was more for to rest himself, like, than to sleep, for it was airy; and so he just went to bed, and there diverted himself lookin' at the fire, that was blazin' as merry as a bon-fire on the hearth.

"Well, as he was lyin' that a-way, just thinkin' o' nothin' at all, what should come into the place but a fox. But I must tell you, what I forgot to tell you before, that the ranger's house was on the borthers o' the wood, and he had no one to live wid him but himself, barrin' the dogs that he had the car uv, that was his only companions, and he had a hole cut in the door, with a swingin' board to it, that the dogs might go in or out, accordin' as it pleased them; and, be dad, the fox came in as I told you through the hole in the door, as bold as a ram, and walked over to the fire and sat down forinst it."

"Now, it was mighty provokin' that all the dogs was out; they wor rovin' about the woods, you see, looking for to ketch rabbits to ate, or some other mischief, and it so happened that there wanst so much as one individual dog in the place; and, be dad, I'll go bail the fox knew that right well before he put his nose inside the ranger's lodge."

"Well, the rangers was in hopes that some o' the dogs id come home and salt-pothre would 'nt save you, and that a strong pickle!"

"So, with that, he watched until the fox wanst mindin' him, but was busy shakin' the cinders out o' the pipe, when he done wid it, and the ranger thought he was going to go immediately after gettin' an air o' the fire and a shaugh o' the pipe; and so says he, 'Faiks my lad, I won't let you go so aisy as all that, as cunning' as you think yourself,' and wid that he made a dart out o' bed, and run over to the door, and got betune it and the fox; and, 'now' says he 'your bread's baked, my buck, and may be my lord won't have a fine run out o' you and the dogs at your brish every yard you morodin' thief, and the devil mind you,' says he, 'for your impudence, for sure, if you had 'nt the impudence of a highwayman's horse, it's not into my very house, under my nose, you'd daro for to come,' and with that, he began to whistle for the dog, and the fox, that stood eyein' him all the time while he was spakin' began to think it was time to be joggin' when he heard the whistle, and says the fox to himself, 'Troth, indeed, you think yourself a mighty great ranger now,' says he, 'and you think you're vory outh, but, upon my tail, and that's a big oath, I'd be long sorry to let sitch a mallet headle bog throter as yourself take a dirty advantage o' me, and I'll engage,' says the fox, 'I'll make you leave the door soon and siddin'; and, with that, he turned to where the ranger's brogues were lying, hard by, beside the fire, and what would you think,

but the fox tuk up one o' the brogues, and wint over to the fire and threw it into it.

"I think that'll make you start," says the fox.

"Devil rescue the start," says the ranger; that won't do, yit, my buck," said he, 'the brogue may burn to cend-thers, says he, but out o' this I won't stir,' and thin, putting his fingers into his mouth, he gev a blast iv a whistle you'd hear a mile off, and shouted for the dogs.

"So that won't do," says the fox. "Well, I must thry another offer," says he, and with that he tuk up the other brogue, and threw it into the fire two.

"There now," says he, "you may keep the other company," says he, 'and there's a pair o' ye now as the devil said of his knee buckles.'

"Oh, you thievin, varmin!" says the ranger, "you won't lave me a tack to ray feet; but no mather," says he, "your head's worth more nor a pair of brogues to me, any day; and, by the Piper o' Blessintown, you're money in my pocket this minit," says he; and with that, the fingers was in his mouth agin, and he was goin' to whistle, when, that would you think, but up sits the fox on his hunkers, and puts his two fore-paws into his mouth, makin' game o' the ranger — [Bad luck to the lie I tell you.]

"Well, the ranger, and no wonder, although in a rage, as he was, couldn't help laughin' at the fox mockin' him, and by dad, he tuk sitch a fit o' laughter, that he couldn't whistle and that was the outeness o' the fox to gain time; but, when his first laugh was over, the ranger recovered himself and gev another; and so says the fox, "By my sowl!" says he, "I think it wouldn't be good for my health to stay here much longer, and I musn't by thriffin' with that blackguard ranger any more," says he, "and I must make him sensible that it is time to let me go; and though he hasn't undherstandin' to be sorry for his brogues," "I'll go bail I'll make him lave that," say he, 'before he'd say sparables: and with that, what you think think the fox done? By all that's good — and the ranger himself tolwed me out iv his own mouth, and said he wouldn't have believed it, only he seen it — the fox tuk a lighted piece iv bog out o' the blazin' fire, and run over wid it to the ranger's bed, and was going to throw it into the straw and burn him out iv house and home; so when the ranger seen that, he gev a shout out iv him."

"Hillo, hillo! your murthin villin! says he you're worse nor Captain Rock! it is goin' to burn me out you are, you rogue iv a Ribbonman!" and he made a dart betune him and the bed, to save the house from being burned; but my jewel that was what the fox wanted; and as soon as the ranger quitted the hole in the door, that he was standin' forinst, the fox let go the plazin, faggot, and made one jump through the door and escaped."

"But before he wint, the ranger gev me his oath, that the fox turned round and gev him the most contemptible look he ever got in his life, and showed every tooth in his head with laughin'; and at last he put out his tongue at him, as much as to say "You've missed me like your mammy's blessin' and off wid him — like a flash o' lightning!"

FIGHTING A WIND-MILL.

A few evenings since a stout, pugacious seafaring individual was wending his way slowly down one of the wharves of our city towards his ship. The night was dark and he had been "seeing" the "tarnal citter" up in Ann street, to such an extent as to render him quite bellicose in his feelings, and somewhat unsteady in his gait.

"Now I should just like to see the covy what can stan' up afore me by —" and he gesticulated furiously with both arms in most approved style — aha Belcher Kay.

"It would be some 'at of a treat to give a feller a reg'lar broadside — wouldn't I stave his bows in? — ha? Wouldn't I douse his gim? may be I wouldn't —"

"Hallo! hallo! — who's that struck me?" cried he in a frenzy of passion, as he ran his face with a force that nearly prostrated him, against a capstan bar that had been loft without being unshipped.

The other bar came up like a returning shuttlecock, and another blow from the wooden monster fell upon his ear. "Brickbats? ye skulkers — ye robbers — but I'll —"

Here the battle raged "fast and furious," and in proportion to the rapidity of the onsets, were they returned. The blows fell like "lightnings from the mountain cloud." He stood up manfully for a time, — the bent brow — the muttered curse — the execration, all told of the determination manifested; but it was of no avail — down went the hero in the dust.

A party of men proceeding down the wharf shortly after, were attracted by a strange murmuring noise; there they found the hero battered and bruised in a shocking manner, but still "striking out" manfully in the dust.

CANCER CURED. NO CURE—NO PAY.

DR. JAMES C. HICKS would respectfully inform the citizens of South Carolina and other states, that he resides at Clark's Hotel, Sumterville, S. C., where he is prepared to practice the art of removing, and he cures the fatal disease, Cancer, without the use of the knife, all persons who may be afflicted with this dangerous disease and wish his aid, will do well by calling on him. There are many gentlemen in this State and others, of high respectability and understanding, who will testify to the efficacy of his practice. All persons who cannot conveniently call on him, will be attended at their residences.

Many certificates might be produced, but perhaps the following may be satisfactory. All letters, post paid, will meet with prompt attention, if addressed to Dr. James C. Hicks, Sumterville, S. C.

We undersigned take this method of recommending Dr. JAS. C. HICKS to the public, as a man well worthy of patronage in his profession as a Cancer Doctor. From general opinion and from our own observations we have been accustomed to think cancer was for the most part incurable, after having attained any great age or size, but we have seen and known cancers cured by him in a very short time, which seemed to defy all human skill, even the sight of which drew from beholders remarks of fear and despair; hence we gladly embrace this mode of recommending him to the community, thinking we shall thereby confer a favor on many, and assist the cause of humanity.

STEVENSON, Darlington Dist., S. C. JOHN CORKNEY, Darlington Dist., S. C.

This may certify that after trying every remedy I could hear of, and trying the prescriptions of five or six of the most eminent physicians of Sumterville and Columbia, S. C., for the disease of my eye-lid, which I am fully satisfied was cancer, and being informed by one of the most eminent practitioners of Columbia, I received no permanent relief, and hearing of Dr. Hicks's skill in this disease, I procured his aid, and I now rejoice to say that he has made a permanent cure of it, and that in the very short time of about eleven weeks from the first application. My case as I have before stated, was of twelve years, standing, and of slow but steady progress; and to those who may be afflicted with this disease I would say, try the Doctor's remedy by all who are laboring under it, and conscientiously believe it will succeed in every case where it is admissible, and the disease not so diffused in the system as to defy any remedy whatever.

BENJ. MITCHELL. January 1, 1849.

I take this opportunity of announcing to the public that I have been afflicted with the dangerous disease of Cancer, for the past six years on my upper lip, and becoming alarmed on account of the pain it gave me, and of its rapid growth, I was induced to apply to physicians for aid, but I obtained no relief or satisfaction from them, and gave up all hopes of ever getting well of it; but fortunately I saw Dr. J. C. Hicks's notice in the Columbia Carolinian. I wrote to him and put myself under his treatment, and in seven weeks the disease was removed and the sore healed over. I advise by all who are laboring under this dreadful disease to apply to him forthwith. Newberry Dist., S. C., July 17, 1848.

All persons who may be afflicted with the dangerous disease, CANCER, and are disposed to think this a humbug, can satisfy themselves by addressing a letter to any or all of the gentlemen whose signatures are attached to the above certificates. JAS. C. HICKS.

Encephalus, Jr.

The subscriber, through the solicitation of his friends, has made arrangements to stand his celebrated Horse BUCEPHALUS, Jr. in Sumter District, the ensuing Spring. Said Horse may be expected to pass through Sumterville, by Fulton, and perhaps Stateburg, and in the Fork of Black River; and any other place where sufficiently encouraged and convenient to his route, which will be determined by the groom.

TERMS.—Bucephalus, Jr., will be let to market at $400; $50.00 the season; and $12.00 to insure; 25 cents the gross; and every instance. Parting with the mare forfeits the insurance in every instance. Every care will be taken to prevent accidents, but no liability should any occur.

N. B. Where a company of 6 or 8 males is made up by responsible persons, and the Horse and Groom furnished free of charge as he is passing through the season, I will reduce the season to $7, and the insurance to $10. I will also give the same chance to all those who feel disposed to patronize my Horse upon said terms, and conditions.

Pedigree.

Bucephalus, Jr., was got by J. F. Rogers' Bucephalus; he by Williamson's Bedford of Virginia, and he by Old imported Bedford. Old Bucephalus dam was by Old King Herod, and he by Twig; Twig by the old imported James; his g. dam was, according to information, a Medley. Bucephalus Junior's dam was got by Old White Oak Spurr; he by Lewis Collins' Spurr, whose pedigree was as a Race Horse, was well established on the Florida Turf, and he out of the old imported Battle-the-Cash. Bucephalus J's g. dam was got by Marene.

I could here publish a long list of certificates from different Districts relative to Bucephalus J's reputation as a foot getter, but don't it useless, as reference can be had to his printed bills, and to citizens of Sumter District, who have seen his colts and know they will not suffer by comparison with those of any other Horse.
